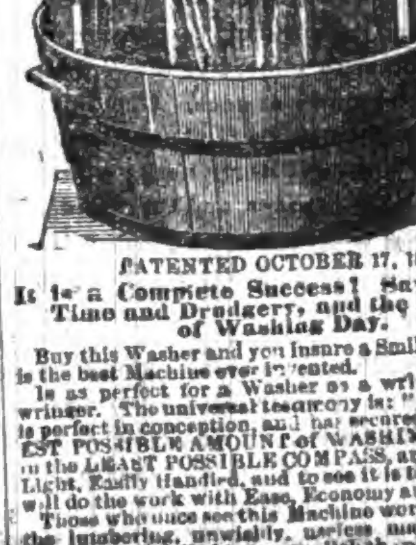
CALKINS' CHAMPION WASHER



PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

It is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver.

Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

We can announce with safety that the Radical State Convention actually took place to-day, at the capitol, as we saw our personal friend, Gen. Blair, on the way thither early Monday Morning. We trust they have put up a good ticket, as there is no fun in defeating a scalaway enemy.

Tea.—Seeing that we did not use coffee, our liberal dry goods marchant, S. W. Ralston, Esq., has furnished us with a pound package of as good tea as we ever drank. We know whereof we speak. You don't have to club together to get it as in the Great American Tea Company, but go direct to the above place and you can obtain a genuine article, none of your cheap stuff full of wi low leaves. Give this a trial. It is a new brand of superior quality.

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or not—is responsible for the amount of subscription.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of fraud.

Eel River Road.

A committee has been busy the past week soliciting signers to a petition asking the council to tax the city in the sum of $20,000 to aid in the building of the road. Almost every tax payer signs the petition without hesitation, and there is no doubt the required amount will be obtained. This secures the building of the road an event that should be hailed by our citizens with an infinite degree of satisfaction, considering the great efforts that have been made to defeat the project. Those who have not signed the petition should do so at once, and be among those who are enterprising enough to encourage this great work in a substantial and beneficial manner.—Logansport Pharos.

Railroad Election.—At an election held at Jackson, last Tuesday a week, for officers of the Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw Railroad, about all the old officers with one or two exceptions, were re-elected, C. A. O. McClellan, Esq., of Waterloo, was elected a Director, being the first officer of that kind chosen from this county since the organization of the rood. We congratulate the company upon securing one of our representative men, one whose views and live progressive qualities are in harmony with the spirit of the times, and who posesses the necessary energy and perseverance to bring success to every enterprise with which he may be connected. As to executive ability, Mac. has no superior in the county, and being a genial clever hearted gentleman, well versed in human nature, we could not have suggested another man more eminently qualified for the position.

The road is gradually approaching a better state of efficiency every day and we believe its business prospects are quite flattering. The coming season, it is hoped, will bring a largely increased trade, and under the present management we have no doubt of its soon ranking with the best roads in the State.

Building Loan Association

As the project of organizing one of these associations in our midst is being agitated, we give a brief explanation of their workings. A charter is obtained of the State fixing the stock at 500 shares of $200 each, making a total of $100,000.—Any member can take from one to ten shares. One dollar on each share is paid into the Association every month, which is sold immediately to the one offering the highest premium. Thus a member holds five shares. He can borrow a $1,000 If holding but one share he can borrow but $200. He bids 40 per cent. premium. This premium is deducted from the amount to be loaned. If the bidder has five shares and wants to borrow $1000, the 40 per cent. is taken from the $1000, leaving $600, he giving a real estate mortgage for the $1000 at six per cent. interest. This he pays monthly in addition to his one dollar on each share. At the expiration of the charter, which is limited to eight years, the whole amount of stock is at par value, and consequently he never pays the principal $600, as that is his share of the profits accruing from the investment. It has another bearing as a saving institution. A person takes five shares, and pays five dollars a month or sixty dollars a year or $480, during the eight years. At that time, with ordinary success the Association pays off its stock at par value, giving him $1000, in cash for his five shares.—We have tried to make this plain so that all will understand it and now we want everybody to come to the meeting next Friday evening, and show their willingness to embark in an enterprise that will be a benefit to you individually and collectively.

PUBLIC MEETING.

A meeting will be held at Peterson's Law Office, Over Davis' Hardware Store, to-morrow, Friday evening, to see about organizing a Building Loan Association. Everybody ought to be there.

Life Insurance.—The matter of life insurance has been so prominently brought before the American public, and by this means has become so popular that no well regulated homestead is without the pale of its most liberal provisions. We have thus been led to express ourselves by the facts and figures now before us, and especially of that sterling company, the Connecticut Mutual, which has no superior. The assets of this company are a third more than its liabilities. Its expenses in operating it are much lower than any other American Company. It has paid out over twenty million of dollars on policies and is always prompt.

It is purely mutual, returning to the policy holder everything saved by strict economy and favorable mortality, for it takes none but good risks. The agent for this company, for this and six other counties, is that clever and agreeable gentleman, Capt. W. S. Buck, who is now among our citizens with a view of obtaining policies. If you have any objections to this system, he will meet them farely and squarely, besides giving you new ideas of its practical working. This company does a business of $10,000,000 in one year.

Have you seen that large assortment of China and Crockery ware at Smith & Hare's.

The mullet that slings the ink for the Waterloo Press and edits his paper from the Woman's Journal, appears to be oblivious to all surroundings and is only aroused from his torpor when he sees a Fort Wayne Journal. That's right old morality, wake up and let us know you are still kicking.—Fort Wayne Journal.

Thomas, you little dream of the fearful avalanche, that is threatening those auburn locks of yours. If you want to be pulverized just keep on.

Auburn Academy.

We dropped in at the high school department last Friday afternoon to listen to the closing exercises of the winter term and we must say that they were full of interest and entertainment. The two rooms thrown into one for the time being were densely packed with scholars and spectators, yet everything passed off very smoothly and pleasantly. The children seemed glad to see so many visitors, and we judge that it was something of a variety for them. This is all wrong. Every parent that has a child attending school, should regard it as his duty to encourage the efforts of scholars and teacher by putting in an appearance at the school house at short intervals. Our business is never so urgent that a few moments cannot be spared to visit the school.

The exercises consisted of music, recitations, remarks, etc., creditable alike to scholar as well as teacher. The four departments were joined together in the programme, and as we looked over the audience and listened to what was said we felt convinced that the proper training and culture of the minds of our youth was in good hands.

Mr. McIntosh, the principal, has been zealous and untiring in his efforts to reach as great a degree of success as possible, while his able assistants, Mr. Houser and Miss Hull and Miss Clark has rendered efficient services in their particular spheres. We know that each of them have the thanks and good will of not only their pupils but of the citizens of Auburn.

Toward the close of the exercises a little episode occurred, or two we might say that are not only happy in their effect but fill all who witness them, with a sort of good will and love, touching a sympathetic cord that never fails to respond with the most pleasurable emotions. The first was the presentation of two handsome volumes of the lamented Kingsley's "Round the World," by Rev. A. W. Lamport to Prof. McIntosh. Mac was completely surprised but rallied with a neat little speech receiving the present. This was scarcely done when he was attacked on the other flank, and a handsome album, presented by Miss Hare on the part of the scholars in a pretty little speech as follows:

Dear Teacher:—We are now come to the closing hour of the winter term of school. As your scholars we desire to acknowledge our gratitude to you for the interest and kind regard you have manifested in the administration of the school, and now as a token of our friendship and love I present you this Album. As you unclasp and open its lids you will behold the many faces you have often looked upon in the school-room. These Photoes are but our shadows. Yet we hope far down the ringing years of the future, they may call to your mind many pleasant memories of your Auburn School. And now as we come to say "Good-bye," we ask you to give its all a place in your memory and friendship and we are fully satisfied.

Mr. McIntosh made a brief and fitting reply and seemed very much pleased with his testimonial of regards from his scholars.

Prof. Bowersox, of Butler, being present was called upon for a speech which he gave in his usual happy style to the delight and entertainment of all present.—We are able to give this admirable address in full below:

Students of the Auburn School. I am glad to meet you and to be so highly favored as to speak a cheering word to you, at almost the beginning of your journey through the labyrinth of science. As I stand but a short distance along the way of knowledge, I see many before me in the dim distance scaling the hill of science, enjoying a view from heights unrealized by me; the sight is thrilling, beautiful and encouraging, but as I look behind me, a sight far lovlier and more pleasing greets me, the smiling faces and beaming countenances and manly brows of the multitude of the youths of our land pressing for admittance upon the highway of true human greatness. I feel to exclaim to-day as I contemplate the intellectual and moral present to exclaim, and to realize more than ever the language of Geology. "This is an age of mind." I congratulate you and with you unite in gratitude to God, that he has conferred upon us such honor as to give to us so important a position in his divine economy. May we never prove unworthy our noble calling, but may our improvement correspond to our privileges. But I know we cannot at once grasp the importance of our relation to the varied creation of God, and the honor confered upon us, it is only by a labored effort of the mind that we can approximately comprehend the responsibilities we are under. We read from the great volume of nature, imprinted upon the rocky folds of our earth a wondrous history of the past, as we wander back through the almost illimitable ages of the past until we seem to cast upon the head lands of eternity, and read the first record of passing time, noting each development down to the present. We feel confident that God anticipated the age of mind from the beginning, and every creative act, and every development had reference to our happiness and highest interest. In the first Azoic age reference was had to the configurations of the continents—foreshadowing at that early age, the present arrangement of nations, and the facilities of commerce. These thoughts are at once suggested when we survey the distribution of mountain chains, and the flow of rivers from the centers unto the seas. During the next two ages viz. the Silurian and Devonian ages, God was having special reference to architectural wants, limestone, sand-stone and marble were every where formed, piled up in high mountains or laid away in deep seated quarries material of every consistency and character suited to man's every want. In the fourth or corbouliferous age nature employed its energies in preparing for man's wants in manufacturing, laying up rich stores of carbon oils and ores in close proximity, which should contribute to the highest development of the arts and sciences, also in preparing the earth for the abode of man, absorbing the carbonic acid from the air and rendering it pure and healthy. In the fifth and sixth ages, the Reptilian and Mamalian ages, nature every where was pregnant with brute force; in this age the earth trembled with the tread of huge monsters—the Mastedon, Magatherium and Glyptodon, Clavipes, the waters teem ed with swiming monsters, Ichthyosaurs, Plesiosaurs. The air swarmed with flying monsters, Pterodactyles. This element was not favorable to the age of mind,—This is demonstrated in our everyday experience, so far as brutality enters with man, so far is he disqualified for intellectuality. This element was taken up and absorbed by these monsters, and by the laws of correllation and conservation of forces, now contributes to the age of mind. There are five planes of existence known to us one above the other, the first and lowest is that of elementary existence. This corresponds to the Azoic age, when matter existed in chaotic form: The second is the plane of chemical compounds, corresponding to the Silurian and Devonian ages, the third the plane of vegetable existence, corresponding to the Corboiferous age; the fourth is the plane of animal existence corresponding to the Reptillian and Mamalian ages, and lastly the age of mind, in which the forces of nature are raised and stored away in thought, in mind. We at once discover that each of the lower plane is an arrested form of the next higher, that the animal and vegetable are the arrested forms of man, that the greater contains the less, but the less does not contain the greater, man contains the animal, but the animal does not contain man that which distinguishes man from the lower forms is not derived from them, but is immortal, eternal, it is mind. Each force must act in its own realm and the laws of nature forbids it to act beyond elementary matter is the simplest form of existence, and it is only chemical affinity that can raise elementary matter from the lower plane to the plane of chemical compounds, it is only vegetative life or vegetative force that can raise matter from second plane to the third plane, the plane of vegetable existence, and it is only animal life that can raise matter from the plane of vegetable existence, and finally it is only mental force that can raise the forces of animal existence to the plane of mental existence, or to the realm of mind. Then my young friends it is your duty and my duty to change the force we derive from the consumption of vegetable and animal matter, and which is stored up in our existence, into thought, into mental existence, and not to spend it alone in the exercise of our animal nature, in lasciviousness, intemperance and every species of brutality.

(We are compelled for want of space to give the remainder of this interesting address in our next edition.)

A Lesson for Insolent Boys.

[Communicated.]

Mr. Editor:—I take this opportunity of presenting to the public, through your columns, some facts connected with a disgusting affair, which took place at what is known as "Culver" School House, four miles west of Auburn, thinking it may be a warning to some who are disposed to disregard the rights of others when such rights happen to interfere with their own selfish desires:

It was announced that Mr. Edgecomb would give a scientific and historical entertainment at the school house on Friday evening, Feb. 16. Mr. E., generously extended complimentary invitations to the teacher and director, for favors received at their hands. This act so "riled" certain pigmies of manhood in the district, that to prevent an explosion, they were compelled to raise the safety valves and let off a little of the bile, giving vent to threats of violence, such as, "We will go in free or we'll bust the shebang," while another boast, "If he don't let me in he will smell fresh pork, etc."

At an early hour the crowd began to gather in, and among the number, a gang of these small-souled specimens of humanity, whose stamping on the poarch out side sounded like the bombardment of a fort in the distance, while the air resounded with their hideous yells and jeers. At the appointed time the door was opened, and all well disposed persons paid their fees and passed in. But among the number were four boys, much larger in statue than in principle, who made a rush characteristic of all greenies and succeeded in crowding their way in with out paying their fees. After all was in readiness, the proprietor went to each of these pigmies of manhood, whose consciences can be entirely enveloped in a ten cent piece, and quietly demanded his fee. For a few moments the "long-eared" principle seemed to predominate, but finally one of them borrowed twenty-five cents, of a friend, and after receiving his change, 5 cents, demanded twenty five cents more; avering that he had given fifty cents, but this did not win. The other three then paid their dues and the exhibition commenced.

It would seem, by the interest the Prof. manifested in his subject, that, by himself at last, all past insults had been forgotten and the way he presented his subject, together with the frequent and hearty applause of the audience, and the last lingering look at the "Good Night," showed how sorry we all were to have the spell broken, and fully justifies us in pronouncing the affair a grand success, and a rich treat to all.

But when the Prof. came to gather up his effects he found, to his surprise, that some low-lived, theiving scalawags had been swindling his son—a lad, about 8 years of age—in whose charge he had placed some candies, and that with buying a little, and stealing much more, the rogues had relieved the little fellow of $2 or $3 worth of his stock and given him but 22 cents to show for the trade. Now we do not pretend to say who those narrow contracted, low minded pinched souled, degraded specimens of humanity were, who could stoop so low as to thus defraud a poor innocent boy, by taking advantage of his ignorance, but, were it not for the respect and sympathy we feel for the parents, we could give the names of several young men, and to whom we had already referred—who were very willing to compromise the matter, on the next day, at $10,00 for damages. This certainly shows guilt. Parents who would keep their boys out of their society, and teach their daughters to shun them as they would a rattle snake, may have these out laws pointed out to them, as the facts above recorded, and the names of the ring leaders are familiar to all in the district.

Strange, and unreasonable as it may seem, there are a few weak kneed, short sighted croakers in almost every school district, who are so inconsistent as to object to have entertainments of this kind held in our school houses, for fear of being interrupted; while it must be acknowledged to be a decided advantage to pupils in attendance at the schools, who may have the advantage of such instruction. Is it right that our doors should be closed to such educational advantages from fear of being interrupted by a few lawless characters, who should be made to respect the rights of those who are better disposed? We might, with equal propriety, bar the doors against our teachers, on the grounds that a few unruly pupils may be detrimental to the progress of the schools. No, rather let us teach them, by just punishment for their offenses, to observe good manners, and to respect the civil laws, provided for the protection of those they would thus offend; or let them be banished from the schools, and from society, that their influence may drag others down.

O. B. Verser.

We were pleased to meet our genial friend C. C. Hicks, Esq., in town yesterday. Mr. H. represents the old reliable house of A. F. Smith, of Louisville, Ky. We can say for this house that they have secured an excellent agent in the person of Mr. Hicks, who knows his business, and attends to it promptly.

To day is Washington's birthday, and will doubtless be celebrated by numerous parties, balls, etc. We doubt whether the good old man would approve of that way of remembering him, were he to step out of his grave for a moment, and see how 'tis himself.

Housholders Call In—I have the celebrated Rhodehamel Scrubber and Carpet Stretcher; a first rate article for cleanin and mopping up floors, and putting down carpets. Call and get one. I am also agent, to supply merchants by the dozen at factory prices.

Elephants at Sea.

From the Calcutta Englishman.

A few [illegible] about the elephants now going to [illegible] in the Scotia, under the command of W. B. Matthews, may be interesting to our readers. We are sorry to see it stated by a contempory that the animals were goaded and ill-used into sumission. So far as we saw, no ill-usage was practiced; they were simply secured, lashed with strong ropes, slung as far as practicable in slings, hoisted up with cranes with threefold tackles, and lowered into the steamer's hold like bales of cotton. When in the hold they were placed in pens of strong teak timber balks, bolted to the ship's side to prevent them breaking loose. The fear the animals suffered was the only pain they underwent and by watching the eyes of the poor beasts their terror was very manifest; tears trickled down their mild countenances, and they roared with dread, more especially when being lowered into the hold, the bottom of which was sanded for them to stand upon. We are told that one [illegible] female elephant actually fainted and was 'brought to' with a fan and many gallons of water. At sea it appears that the elephants got into a curious habit of occasionally—evidently with a preconcerted signal—setting to work rolling the ship from side to side by giving themselves simultaneously a swaying motion as they stood athwart the ship, the waves rolling heavily, as if in a sea way. This they would do for an hour or more, and then desist for several hours until this strange freak took them again. At Chittagong, we hear, that they were hoisted out of the hold, and swam on shore, thirty five being thus safely landed without any accident whatever.

Clearness of Northern Seas.

Nothing can be more surprising and beautiful than the singular clearness of the water of the northern seas. As we pass slowly of the surface, the bottom, which was here in general of white sand, was clearly visible from twerty to twenty-five fathoms. During the whole sourse of the tower I made, nothing appeared to me so extraordinery as the immense recesses of the ocean, unruffled by the lightest breeze, the gentle splashing of the oars scarcely disturbing it. Where the bottom was sandy, the different kinds of esterise, echmi, and even the smallest shells, appeared at the greatest depth conspicious to the eye; and the water seemed in some measures, to have a magnifying power, by enlarging the objects like a telescope, and bringing them seemingly nearer. Though moving on a level surface, it seemed almost as if we were ascending the height under us, and when we passed over its summit, which rose in appearance to within a few feet of our boat, and came again to the descent, which on this side was sad deeply perpendicular, and looking over the watery gulf as we passed gently over the point of it, seemed almost as if we had thrown ourselves down the precipice; the illusion, from the clearness of the deep, producing a sudden start.—Ex.

A Victim of Misplaced Confidence.

A San Francisco gentleman recently visited a dentist for the purpose of whiling away an hour or so, and, while there, a lady came in with a little girl, wanting a tooth or two drawn for the latter. The child cried when placed in the chair, and declared she would not have her teeth attended to unless the strange gentleman would have a tooth drawn first, and to please the little patient, he took her place with a wink at the doctor. The latter took two or three instruments, while the gentleman reclined in the chair smilingly gazing at the ceiling for the assurance of the watching child, and, after softly poking at two or three teeth, to the horror of the obliging gentleman he commenced boring into his jaw where a tooth had once been extracted, and, before he could [illegible], a tremendous wrench, and brought out a large root, which the doctor held up to the child with a diabolical grin on his face. The gentleman rolled off the chair, and, with an expression of unutterable pain in his countenance, gazed [illegible] reproachfully at his friend and left the office. The little one did'nt seem to be greatly encouraged by the exhibition.

A Good Temperance Speech.

A correspondent sends us the following good speech, which, as she assures us, is nearly a verbal report of one that she heard at a temperance meeting:

'I have been thinking, since I came into the meeting to-night, about the losses I've met with since I signed the total abstinence pledge. I tell you there isn't a man in the society has lost more by stopping drink than I have. Wait a bit till I tell you what I mean. There was a nice job of work to be done in the shop to-day, and the boss called for me. 'Give it to Law,' says he. He's the best hand in the shop.' Well, I told my wife at supper time, and she says, 'Why, Daurie, he used to call you the worst. You've lost your badness, haven't you?' 'That's a fact, wife,' says I. And it ain't all I've lost in the last sixteen months, either. I had poverty and wretchedness, and I've lost them. I had an old ragged coat, and a 'shockin' bad hat,' and some water proof shoes that let the wet out at the toe as they took it in at the heel. I've lost all of them. I had a red face and a trembling hand, and a pair of shaky legs, that gave me an awkward tumble now and then. I had a habit of swearing, I've got rid of that. I had an aching head sometimes, and a heavy heart, and, worse than all the rest, a guilty conscience. Thank God! I've lost them all! Then I told my wife what she had lost. 'You had an old ragged gown, Mary.' 'And you had trouble, and sorrow, and a poor wretched home, and plenty of heart aches, for you had a miserable drunkard for a husband. Mary! Mary! thank the Lord for all you and I have lost since I have signed the Good Samaritan pledge!'—Ex.

Gustave Tonnetz, long celebrated in Paris as the 'swallower of sabres,' has died of a throat disease. A natural sequence, one would say—and be mistaken. For Gustave was equally celebrated as a swallower of whisky and while he survived the sabre, to the whisky he succumbed. One swallow dose make a summer; but a good many make a summary end of Tonnetz.

'Madan,' said a cross tempered physician to patient, 'if women were admitte to paradice, their tongues would make it purgatory.' 'And some physicians, if allowed to practice there,' replied the lady, 'would make it a desert.' The oppressed one had him there.

The Louisville Courier, referring to the fact that somebody is going to build a hotel in Rhode Island ninety-two feet long and sixty feet wide, expresses astonishment that the authorities should 'permit anybody to put the State all under one roof in that way.'

An old traveler tells a pretty tough story about being lost in the woods with his dog, where he could find nothing to eat, and had to cut off the dog's tail which he boiled for himself, and afterwards gave the dog the bone. We would rath borrow a hundred dollars than to believe that story.

A lady sitting in the same box of an opera house with a French physician, was much troubled with ennui, and happened to gape. 'Excuse me, madam,' said the doctor, 'I am glad you did not swallow me.' 'Give yourself no uneasiness,' said the lady, 'I am a Jewess, and never eat pork.'

Mrs. Partington enter the office of the Probate Judge (called 'civilian') and inquired in her blandest tones: 'Are you the civil villain?' 'Do you wish to insult me, madam?' said the Judge. 'Yes,' replied the amiable old lady, 'my brother died detested, and left three infidel children, and I'm to be their executioner; so I want to insult the civil villain about it.'

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Elephants at Sea.

From the Calcutta Englishman.

A few notes about the elephants now going to Chittagong in the Scotia, under the command of W. B. Matthews, may be interesting to our readers. We are sorry to see it stated by a contempory that the animals were goaded and ill-used into submission. So far as we saw, no ill-usage was practiced; they were simply secured, lashed with strong ropes, slung as far as practicable in slings, hoisted up with cranes with threefold tackles, and lowered into the steamer's hold like bales of cotton. When in the hold they were placed in pens of strong teak timber balks, bolted to the ship's side to prevent them breaking loose. The fear the animals suffered was the only pain they underwent and by watching the eyes of the poor beasts their terror was very manifest; tears trickled down their mild countenances, and they roared with dread, more especially when being lowered into the hold, the bottom of which was sanded for them to stand upon. We are told that one timid female elephant actually fainted and was 'brought to' with a fan and many gallons of water. At sea it appears that the elephants got into a curious habit of occasionally—evidently with a preconcerted signal—setting to work rolling the ship from side to side by giving themselves simultaneously a swaying motion as they stood athwart the ship, the waves rolling heavily as if in a sea way. This they would do for an hour or more, and then desist for several hours until this strange freak took them again. At Chittagong, we hear that they were hoisted out of the hold, and swam on shore, thirty five being thus safely landed without any accident whatever.

Clearness of Northern Seas.

Nothing can be more surprising and beautiful than the singular clearness of the water of the northern seas. As we pass slowly of the surface, the bottom, which was here in general of white sand, was clearly visible from twenty to twenty-five fathoms. During the whole sourse of the tower I made, nothing appeared to me so extraordinary as the immense recesses of the ocean, unruffled by the lightest breeze, the gentle splashing of the oars scarcely disturbing it. Where the bottom was sandy, the different kinds of esterise, echmi, and even the smallest shells, appeared at the greatest depth conspicious to the eye; and the water seemed in some measures, to have a magnifying power, by enlarging the objects like a telescope, and bringing them seemingly nearer. Though moving on a level surface, it seemed almost as if we were ascending the height under us, and when we passed over its summit, which rose in appearance to within a few feet of our boat, and came again to the descent, which on this side was suddenly perpendicular, and looking over the watery gulf as we passed gently over the point of it, seemed almost as if we had thrown ourselves down the precipice; the illusion, from the clearness of the deep, producing a sudden start.—Ex.

A Victim of Misplaced Confidence.

A San Francisco gentleman recently visited a dentist for the purpose of whiling away an hour or so, and, while there, a lady came in with a little girl, wanting a tooth or two drawn for the latter. The child cried when placed in the chair, and declared she would not have her teeth attended to unless the strange gentleman would have a tooth drawn first, and to please the little patient, he took her place with a wink at the doctor. The latter took two or three instruments, while the gentleman reclined in the chair smilingly gazing at the ceiling for the assurance of the watching child, and, after softly poking at two or three teeth, to the horror of the obliging gentleman he commenced boring into his jaw where a tooth had once been extracted, and, before he could offer a protest, a tremendous wrench, and brought out a large root, which the doctor held up to the child with a diabolical grin on his face. The gentleman rolled off the chair, and, with an expression of unutterable pain in his countenance, gazed a moment reproachfully at his friend and left the office. The little one did'nt seem to be greatly encouraged by the exhibition.

A Good Temperance Speech.

A correspondent sends us the following good speech, which, as she assures us, is nearly a verbal report of one that she heard at a temperance meeting:

'I have been thinking, since I came into the meeting to-night, about the losses I've met with since I signed the total abstinence pledge. I tell you there isn't a man in the society has lost more by stopping drink than I have. Wait a bit till I tell you what I mean. There was a nice job of work to be done in the shop to-day, and the boss called for me. 'Give it to Law,' says he. He's the best hand in the shop.' Well, I told my wife at supper time, and she says, 'Why, Danrie, he used to call you the worst. You've lost your business, haven't you?' 'That's a fact, wife,' says I. And it ain't all I've lost in the last sixteen months, either. I had poverty and wretchedness, and I've lost them. I had an old ragged coat, and a 'shockin' bad hat,' and some water proof boots that let the wet out at the toe as they toed it in at the heel. I've lost all of them. I had a red face and a trembling hand, and a pair of shaky legs, that gave me an awkward tumble now and then. I had a habit of swearing, I've got rid of that. I had an aching head sometimes, and a heavy heart, and, worse than all the rest, a guilty conscience. Thank God! I've lost them all! Then I told my wife what she had lost. 'You had an old ragged gown, Mary.' 'And you had trouble, and sorrow, and a poor wretched home, and plenty of heart aches, for you had a miserable drunkard for a husband. Mary! Mary! thank the Lord for all you and I have lost since I have signed the Good Samaritan pledge!'—Ex.

Gustave Tousatz, long celebrated in Paris as the 'swallower of sabres,' has died of a throat disease. A natural sequence, one would say—and be mistaken. For Gustave was equally celebrated as a swallower of whisky and while he survived the sabres, to the whisky he succumed. One swallow does make a summer; but a good many make a summary end of Tousatz.

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. Walker, Proprietor. R. H. McDonald & Co., Druggists, Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly reinvigorate broken-down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

"I'll scream if you touch me!"
Exclaimed a pet miss
Whose lover was seeking
An innocent kiss.

By this prudish conduct
Cold water was thrown—
The lover drew backward,
And let it alone.

"I'll scream if you touch me!"
She hollered once more;
He cried—"I ain't near you!"
And found it a bore.

She quickly subsided,
Grew tender to view,
And whispered quite softly,
"I'll scream till you do!"

Bad for Chicago.

Some years ago, when Chicago was in its infancy, a stranger took up his quarters at the principal hotel, and inscribed name on the register as Mr. J——, of St Louis For several days he remained there, engaged in transacting the business which had bought him to the place, and from his exceedingly plain dress, manners, and general appearance, attracted but little attention.

Soon Mr. J—— was suddenly seized with illness, during which he was sadly neglected by his host, and the servants, taking their tone from the master of the house, left him to shift for himself as he best could. Thus matters went on till one morning he was found past praying for.—His papers were then examined, that the sad intelligence might be communicated to his friends; when to the surprise of all, he was found to be one of the wealthiest men in the Western country.

Arrangements were accordingly made for the funeral; but before the last rites were performed the subject came to life again, having been the victim of catalepsy, instead of the grim King of Terrors.—All were overjoyed at his fortunate escape from so dreadful a fate, and from that time were profused in their expressions of solicitude, elicited, however, if we may be judges, by 'documentary evidence,' rather than by any personal regard.

At length some one ventured to ask how things appeared to him while in his trace, to which he thus replied:

'I thought I had come to the river of death, where I met an angel, who handed me a jewel to serve as a pass to the other side. On giving this to the ferryman, I received from him another, which carried me forward another stage in my journey. Going on thus for several stages, receiving at the termination of each a ticket for the succeeding one, I at last reached the gate of the Heavenly City. There I found St. Peter, who opened the door at my summons, pipe in mouth, seated on a small table, on which stood a goodly mug of steaming whisky toddy.

'Good morning sir,' said he very politely.

'Good morning, St. Peter.'

'Who are you?' asked he, turning over the leaves of a huge ledger.

'My name is J——.'

'Very good, where did you live down below?'

'I lived at St. Louis, in the State of Missouri'

'Very well; and now tell me where you died.'

'I died at Chicago.'

'Chicago,' said he, shaking his head; 'there is no such place.

'I beg your pardon, St. Peter, but have you a map of the United States?'

'Yes.'

'Allow me to look at it.'

'Certainly.'

'With that he handed down a splendid atlas, and I pointed out to him Chicago on the map.

'All right, said he, after a moment's pause; 'it is there, sure enough, so walk in sir; but I'll be blessed if you ain't the first person that has ever come here from that place.'

Thus ended Mr. J.'s account of his transition state, and no more questions were asked.

The World.

'Sir bring me a good plain dinner,' said a melancholy looking individual to a waiter at one of our principal hotels in the state,

'Yes sir.'

The dinner was brought and devoured and the eater called the lanlord aside and thus addressed him:

'You are the landlord?'

'Yes.'

'You do a good business?'

'Yes.'

'You make probable ten dollars a day clear?'

'Yes.'

'Then I am safe. I cannot pay for what I have consumed. I have been out of employment for seven months, but have engaged to work to-morrow. I had been without food for four-and-twenty hours when I entered your place. I will pay you in a week.'

'I cannot pay my bills with such promises,' blustered the landlord, and I do not keep a poorhouse. You should address the proper authorities. Leave me something for security.'

'I have nothing'

'I will take your coat.'

'If I go into the street without that I will get my death of cold such weather as this.'

'You should have thought of that before you came here.'

'You are serious? Well, I solemnly aver that one week from now I will pay you.'

'I will take your coat.'

The coat was left and a week afterwards redeemed.

Seven years after that a wealthy man entered the political arena, and was presented to a caucus as an applicant for a Congressional nomination. The chairman of the caucus held his peace. He heard the name and history of the applicant who was a member of the church and one of the most respectable citizens. The vote was a tie, and he cast the negative, thereby defeating the wealthy applicant whom he met an hour afterward and to whom he said:

'You don't remember me?

'No.'

'I once ate dinner in your hotel, and although I told you I was famishing and pledged my word and honor to pay you in a week you took my coat and saw me go out into the inclement air at the risk of my life without it.'

'Well sir, what then?'

'Not much. You called yourself a christian. To-night you were a candidate for nomination and but for me you wou'd have been elected.

Three years after that the christian hotel keeper became a bankrupt. The poor dinnerless wretch that was, is now a high functionary. We know him well. The ways of Providence are indeed wonderful and the world mutations almost beyond conception of belief.

The Rain-drop.

There was once a farmer, who had a large field. He plowed it and sowed it with corn, and harrowed it and weeded it with great care; and on this field he depended for the support of his family. But after he had worked so hard he saw the corn wither and droop for want of rain, and he thought he should lose his entire crop.

He felt very sad, and went out every day to look at his corn, and see if there was any hope of rain.

One day as he stood there looking at the sky, and most in despair, two little rain-drops up in the clouds over his head saw him; and one said to the other: 'Look at that poor farmer. I feel sorry for him, he has taken such pains with his field of corn, and now it is all drying up. I wish I could do him some good.'

'Well,' said the other, 'but your are only a little rain-drop; what can you do? You can't even wet one hillock.'

'Well,' said the first, 'to be sure I can't do much; but I can cheer the farmer a little, at any rate, and I am resolved to do my best. I'll try; I'll go to the field to show my good will, if I can do no more; so here goes.' And down went the rain-drop, and came pat on the farmer's nose, and then fell on one stalk of corn.

'Dear me!' said the farmer, putting his nose, 'what's that? A rain-drop? Where did that crop come from? I do believe we shall have a shower!'

The first rain-drop had no sooner started, than the second one said: 'Well, if you go, I believe I will go, too; so here I come!' and down dropped the rain drop on another stalk.

By this time a great many rain-drops had come together to hear what their companions were talking about; and when they heard them, and saw them going to cheer the farmer, and water the corn, one of them said: 'if you are going on so good an errand I'll go, too;' and down he came,

'And I,' said another, 'and I, and I, and I,' and so on, till a whole shower of them came, and the corn was watered; and it grew, and ripened, all because the first little rain drop determined to do what ever it could.

Never be discouraged children, because you can't do much. Do what you can.—Angels can do no more.

Drowning the Squirrel.

When I was about six years old, one morning, going to school, a ground squirrel ran into his hole in the ground before me; they like to dig holes in some open place where they can put out their head to see if danger is near. I thought, now I shall have fine fun. As there was a stream of water just at hand, I determined to pour water into the whole till it should be full, and force the little animal to come out, so that I might kill it. I was soon pouring water upon the poor squirrel. I could hear it struggle, and said, Ah! my fine fellow, I will soon have you out, now.

Just then I heard a voice behind me; 'Well, my boy, what have you got there?' I turned, and saw one of my neighbors, a good old man, with very long white locks.

'Well,' said I, 'there is a ground squirrel in here,' and I am going to drown him out.'

Said he; 'Jonathan, when I was a little boy, more than fifty years ago, I was engaged one day, just as you are, drowning a squirrel; and an old man, such as I am, came along, and said to me, 'You are a little boy; now if you were down in a narrow hole like that, and I should come and pour water down upon you, would you not think I was cruel? God made the little squirrel and his life is as sweet to it as you. Why torture to death a little innocent creature that God has made?' He added, 'I have never forgotten that, and never shall. Now, my dear boy, I want you to remember this as long as you live; and when tempted to destroy any little animal or bird, to think what I have said; God does not allow us to kill his creatures for our pleasure.'

More than forty years have since passed, and I have never forgotten what the good man said, nor have I ever wantonly killed the least animal for amusement since.—Now, you see it is ninety years since this advice was first given, and it has not lost its effect yet; how many little creatures it has saved from being tortured to [illegible] I cannot tell, but I have no doubt [illegible] number, and I believe my whole life has been influenced by it.

'Husband! if an honest man is God's noblest work, what is an honest woman?' 'His rarest dear!' was the uncivil reply.

A Lion Story.

A story is told of a lion which was brought from India, and who on the passage grew very fond of a sailor who had charge of him. His name 'Nero.' On being shut up in a cage in London, he grew sulky, and was very fierce when any one came near him, so that it was dangerous even for his keeper to approach in with him.

One day, a few weeks after Nero had been shut up in his new prison, a party of sailors visited the menagerie, and were warned by the keeper not to go near the lion, who every now and then growled savagely at those who were looking at him. All at once one of these sailors ran up to the cage, and thrusting in his hand cried out: 'What! old shipmate! don't you know me? What cheer, old Nero, my lad?'

The lion instantly left off feeding and sprang up to the bars of the cage, and put out his nose between them. Jack patted him on the head, and the lion rubbed his hand with his whiskers like a cat, showing evident signs of pleasure.

'Ah!' said Jack, turning to the keeper and spectators who stood frightened and in astonishment, 'Nero and I were once shipmates, and you see he isn't like some folks; he don't forget an old friend so soon.'

A Queer Customer.

A young orang-outang, of about four years of age, which died a short time after its arrival in England, had, by its intelligence and docility, conciliated, during its voyage the general favor of all on board. Accustomed to sit at the table, it behaved with more decorum than many children, and used a spoon more dexterously. At a port where the vessel lay some time on her homeward passage, the orang-outang was taken on shore, and it is supposed, had at once accompanied some of the men to the shop of a woman who sold coffee which he found so much to his taste, that he went to the same place alone every morning for his breakfast, which was given without hesitation. Thus he contracted a bill which the captain had to discharge!

About Brides.

A correspondent at Vienna writes: I [illegible] estimated the number of strangers by the number of brides which cross one's path. Your female readers will ask how I know a bride when I see one. But I reply, my dear ladies, I can tell in an instant—and, so to say, with half an eye—any traveling 'young married woman.' I have no need to look at the luggage, which is new; nor at the husband, who looks as if he is not quite sure that he has not been hasty: nor even at the dress. No, a bride walks into a room as a thing apart Brides are divided into two classes—the serious and the smiling. The first enters with a queenly step, and seems to say, Don't look at me. Don't you see I'm married, and that those days are over? The other comes up smiling, as much as to say, 'I've landed him. Is it not good fun?'

Shooting the Wrong Hens.

A person in a passion very often jumps at conclusions suddenly.

'I say, neighbor Snobs, if you don't keep your hens out of my garden, I will shoot them.

'Very well, Doolittle shoot away; if you kill any of my hens, throw them into my yard.'

Crack went the fowling piece, morning after morning, and large fat hens were pitched into neighbor Snob's yard. They cooked well. After a fortnight or so Doolittle discovered that Snob's never had any hens, and he had been shooting his own, they having broken out of his hen coop.

An exchange says that it has been found by experiment that the best cure for rheumatism is to bathe with spirits the parts affected and set them on fire.—The skin will come off but the rheumatism will go off too. A surer way than that is to amputate the affected part.

Gain may be temporary and uncertain, but ever, while you live, expense is constant and certain and 'it is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one in fuel,' as poor Richard says, so 'rather go to bed supperless than rise in debt.'

Bronson, of West Virginia, has in his lifetime shot sixty-eight panthers, and every winter he subsists on panther steak which he says is almost as tender as wood chuck.

Two merchants of Geneva, Illinois, are transporting their goods from Chicago, by wagon, refusing to pay the present rail road freight rates.

An ill natured contemporary says that Rhode Island goes for narrow gauge railroads because she wants both rails to lie within her own territory.

Even Boston has hissed Victoria Woodhull. There can be no more comfort for her on earth.

Cincinnati drank last year $1,000,699 worth of lager beer, or $1,[illegible]00 more in value than the whole amount of the city debt.

It is said that 'time cuts down all, both great and small.' House rents, however, are an exception, for they are always going up.

A divine once praying, said: 'O, Lord give unto us neither poverty nor riches,' and pausing solemnly a moment he added 'especially poverty.'

Be honest and true.

CHASED BY WOLVES.

A STORY OF CLAIRVOYANCE.

It was a race for life. Following hard upon the fleet skater were a troop of wolves as fleet. Charles Vance heard their breathing, the short impatient sniffs, the regular patter of, sharp feet upon the ice, like a click. The scene lay in Canada. The moon sailed through drifting clouds, now partially obscured, then bursting forth in a flood of silvery light. At one side was the dense pine forest, broken by clumps of leafless oak or hickory, and winding in and out as it followed the course of the river; on the other, the wide, snow-covered plain.—A mile yet before a house would be reached, and in that time—

Brave as he was, Mr. Vance shuddered. At twenty-eight there was so much of life before him. He had reached a point where fortune began to smile upon him; and for the past six months his leisure hours had been bright with glowing air-castles, which all had Rose Ardley for their day-dream. For her sake it was that he had undertaken this perilous journey.

Faster! faster! This turn showed him the fierce gleaming eyes that repeated themselves until there seemed to be hundreds. Rays of lurid light flashed out; lolling scarlet tongues that thirsted for a draught of blood and a dainty morsel of flesh. A misstep, a half hidden hillock of ice to trip the unwary traveler, a moment lost, and he would be in the power of these ravenous animals. No wonder his pulse quivered, or that he shrank from so horrible a fate.

More than once he had gone up and down the river for pleasure. More than once there had been a gay party—girls in their pretty skating costume but sweetest of all was Rose, her golden curls blown about by the wind, her cheeks brilliant, her purple eyes dilating with enjoyment. Bright and coquettish was she, fond of teasing him until his patience was almost exhausted but a sweet, loving girl in the midst of it. At midsummer she was to be his wife. He had extorted that promise from her, though he would fain have taken her, long before. And yet only the other morning they had fallen into a trifling dispute about this very visit She wanted him to go up for this Thursday evening. He did not see his way clear to do it conveniently.

'Thursday is pay-day,' he had said, alluding to his workmen. 'I never can get away on Thursday nights until dark. My horse has fallen lame, too, Rose. I can not ride him after to-day.'

'You once thought skating up the river a mere pastime,' replied Miss Ardley; and her tone was a trifle sharp and haughty.

'In the daytime, and with company That makes a difference.'

'Oh, very, well; if you care so little to come, there's no more to be said.' And she turned away with an air of superb indifference.

'Rose, it is not that. I can come, up Friday, and stay until Monday.'

'But Thursday night is Eleanor's birthnight. I thought of the pleasure to her to have you among her guests. Don't put yourself out, however.'

Charles Vance was not a man likely to be canonized for either meekness or patience; and she was purposely trying him. He felt vexed.

'I'll come if I can,' concluded Mr. Vance, shortly His tone was cold, and his eyes wandered over the waste of snow.

'Very well,' she gayly said. 'I shall expect you, mind. Good-by. And she kissed him to the tips of her dainty fingers.

He strode down the path, unhitched his horse with a jerk, and went riding over the road, never once glancing back. Perverse Rose Ardley was privately peeping after him, rather enjoying than not the semiquarrel.

'I'll not go—she shall not get me there on Thursday evening,' he answered to himself in his annoyance. But ere Thursday evening came his resolve was broken, after the manner of lovers, and he meant to go.

'I must skate up,' he said. 'The night's clear and frosty.'

'Hope there'll be no wolves abroad, Master Vance,' said the brawny Englishman, Hugh, one of his workmen and warm admirers. 'Stainsly shot one over by the bridge the other morning. You'd better take a pistol.'

'I'll trust to luck and my good skates,' answered Mr. Vance, laughingly, rather ridiculing the notion of 'wolves.'

He started. The night, as he had observed, was clear and frosty, very bright and cold. Half his journey had been accomplished when he heard a shrill, sharp cry echoing from the woods. Then another, as if in answer, and one at a distace. For a moment his blood curdled in his veins. What were these cries? Ah, what!—what but the wolves?

Nearer came the cry, and nearer, as if the the dreadful animals scented their victim. He glided over the ice like lightning, his strikes quickened by the first click he heard from his pursuers. On, first as rapidly as possible in a straight line, for not a second was to be lost, Every nerve and limb was strained to its utmost tension. A mile, perhaps; and if he had to double! A horrible flash of despair almost paralyzed him. That was death. Why had he been so headless as to disregard sage Hugh's warning? But he had never seen a wolf during his sojourn in these Canadian wilds.

Faster! faster! Turns that frightfully lengthened his journey, but gave him a moment's respite, for his pursuers were by this means thrown off their speed. The moon shone out brightly. Every tree seemed outlined against the sky with painful distinctness; here a gnarled old oak that had been riven with some fierce bolt; there, a clump of gleaming evergreen that mocked him in their security. And now the river widened. Hardly a week before he and Rose Ardley had enjoyed a gay frolic of skating on this very spot. Was she still vexed with her? Oh if she could but know [illegible]

In imagination their red tongues seemed to touch him. One of them seemed to hurt himself in some way, for there came a sharp howl of pain.—The pursuit was stopped for an instant and then they came on the faster. Charles Vance's limbs were weak, his pulses throbbing from exhaustion, his very brain reeled. Then fiery eyes seemed to scorch him with their lurid glare, and now he could hear the rapid, expectant breath. So near safety and yet— A desparing cry broke from his lips. Rose! Rose! Farewell to her, to happiness, to all.

Rose Ardley, the centere of a gay group of cousins and friends, was the self-same evening doing her utmost to be attractive. She was fascinating at all times and seasons, but when she used a little effort, could make herself doubly so. She had forgiven Charley Vance a dozen times since that last angry morning. He would be sure to come early, she complacently told herself, and be duly penitent. After all, Charles Vance was a brave, noble fellow. She thought she would not flirt one bit that night with any body else. The guests all arrived. All but Mr. Vance. Rose wondered. Had he been really vexed her? Well, let him stay. She would not mope or wear the willow. Lovelorn girls were always absurd.

So Rose Ardley was the gay. They had a quadrille; some of the older ones sat down to cards. Dr. Caltran, a deeply scientific man and great mesmerist, and three or four others, went into a discussion on that wonderful subject—clairvoyance. The doctor had been relating certain remarkable incidents, when it was proposed that [illegible] should be given then. Who would become a subject?

No one appeared inclined at first, but Miss Caltran finally acquiesced, and took her seat in a chair in a small room they adjourned to. The doctor had succeeded in sending her to sleep when Rose looked in. Her attention was immediately arrested, and she watched the experiment with much eagerness.

'Would any one like to put any question?' asked Dr Caltran.

There ensued a silence. Elanor Ardley broke it.

'Rose will, Rose is always ready for any thing.' And Miss Rose acquiesced at once.

'I don't know what to ask or what I would most like to hear,' she said, with a gay laugh.

'Ask about Charley. Ask what keeps him away. You can tease him well when you know that.'

'But—is there really any truth in it, Dr. Caltran? and Rose's deep eyes were luminous with some feeling akin to curiosity.

'It is true that the medium can in many instances seem to enter a persons mind, and answer in a remarkable fashion,' was the reply. 'Many failures are recorded and mistakes made, but I think they are due to our imperfect knowledge of the science. Suppose you try Miss Rose; no one can suspect you of collusion.'

Quite a circle began to gather round. Miss Caltran appeared to be in a tranquill slumber; her lips were just parted, suggesting her white, even teeth, which were very handsome.

'Well,' said Rose, daringly.

'Place your hand in hers,' directed the doctor. 'Now think intently of the subject in which you wish her to fell interested, and then ask your question.

A thousand thoughts filled Rose Ardley's brain in an instant, but that of Charles Vance was the most prominent. What should she say? for delicacy seemed to hold her back on this subject.

'Make haste,' cried Elanor, 'What is Charley Vance doing? Has he gone to sleep and forgoten to come here? Or has he gone visiting elsewhere?'

Rose collored. 'I think I will not ask—' But a chorus of eager voices interrupted her.

'Play fair now, Rose. No backing out.'

It was her cusin Kate who asked this, and the sarcastic tone would have roused Rose to any effort. In a strange flutter of nerve and brain she began.

'Don't get excited,' said Dr. Caltron, smiling cheerfuly.

Rose's mood was too uncertain at first to sway Miss Caltran (at least so the doctor said): she moved uneasily, and vainly essayed to speak.—He approched to tranquilize her. It was some time since before any coherent answer could be obtained, and then Rose was wrought up to a strange pitch. Some sudden presentiment concerning her lover filled her mind with apprehension. As if translating the young girl's emotion, Miss Caltran be gan slowly:

Your friend is in great danger—great danger. He is flying as if for his life, first this way and then that way,' making a tortuous motion with her hands. 'He is on the river—the ice—and something follows him fast. Hark! do you hear a sharp cry?"

Rose turned deathly white in spite of her strongest efforts.

'Is he coming here?' she asked, scarcely knowing what she said.

'O Heavens! they are gaining upon him fast. He goes like the wind, but they too are fleet.'

As Miss Caltran said this—and it must be remarked that her words throughout were labored and slow—she sighed deeply and evinced great agitation. Her breath was long and painful.

'Now they are up with him—now! Oh, save him! save him! Hark to their cries!'

'Oh, by Heaven, what fools we are!' suddenly exclaimed George Ardley, a light breaking on him. 'I see it all. Vance has skated up on the river and been followed by a pack of wolves! One was killed a day or two ago, and several have been seen prowling round. Run for your lives, friends. Get something and come to his assistance.'

Rose stood spell-bound. For a moment the room swam round; stars appeared to fill every space.

George thrust on his cap and coat, and slung his rifle over his shoulder Two or three followed suit, and the rooms were in a whirl of confusion.

'Let me go too,' Rose almost shrieked

'My child, there may be some mistake,' said Dr. Caltran, soothingly, alarmed at the consequences of his sister's vision. 'Do, pray, be calm.'

'No, there is no mistake,' she answered, hysterically. 'I told him to skate up—his horse was lame—I dared him to come. Oh, merciful Heavens forgiven me!'

She was in a perfect agony of despair. The horrible vision her cousin George's words conjured up made a more vivid one in her brain. Her face, that had been so brilliant a short time before, was now the picture of anguish. She could not help thinking that if any evil had befallen him it was clearly her fault. How many times she had tormented him almost beyond endurance—been cool, capricious, laughed at his tenderness and his love! Arraigning her heart for judgement, she found it had been bitterly cruel to him—to the one man for whom she would give her life if occasion required. In the confusion and crowd she passed quietly up stairs, got her shawl and hood, and stole out unseen. Along she sped like a shadowy wraith, and was on the river as the men with their rifles.

Hark! what was that? A sickening, despairing cry; a wail of mortal agony. Rose recognised it for his voice—for the were close upon now.

Yes, the cry came from Charles Vance. With that one despairing burst he gave up hope, and turned upon his horridle pursuers. In the moonlight his eyes glared back to those fierce balls, and there was a deathly pause. The suddeness amazed the unreasoning brutes, but the foremost couched to spring.

A ball went whizzing by, so closely that Mr. Vance felt the hot air upon his cheek. Then yell ensued, ending in a howl of maddening pain. Another; footsteps, voices. Yet he did not stir.

'Oh, Charles! Charles!' and the next instant Rose lay senseless at his feet.

At first he could not think, could not speak; the utter surprise and sense of deliverance overwhelmed him. He knelt down on the ice, trembling in every limb, and the rest came thronging around. The discomfited enemy were retiring with savage cries, leaving two of their number dead behind them.

'What is it all?' began Mr. Vance. 'I—I can not imagine—'

'Do not try,' interrupted George Ardley. 'It isn't the strangest thing that ever happened. Can you walk home? I'll see to Rose.' And he picked her up as as though she had been a baby.

They went home slowly. Mr. Vance's strength was all but exhausted. Angry mutterings followed them from afar, but there was no real danger now. Rose, reviving to consciousness, struggled away from her cousin's protection.

'Oh, Charles, I have been so selfish and cruel! Will you ever forgive me!'

Charles's answer was to take her arm with his and press it to his side. She broken down with a sob.

'Hush my darling! God has interposed to save me. But still I do not understad how or why you should all have come.'

'Oh, Charles, is it the strangest tale! You will hardly believe it—you, who have laughed at it—'

'Don't spoil the story, Rose,' said George Ardley from behind. 'We'll have it all out when we get home.'

Was Dr. Caltran surprised when he heard of the strange escape, and saw the rescued man? He made no sign. Miss Caltran, the clairvoyante, was herself then, save for an intense dull headache.

'They had gained on me so fast that it seems as if I could not have held out a minute longer,' said Mr. Vance to the doctor. 'Besides the short distance on the river, there was the dark walk up to the house, and my courage was utterly given away.'

Rose burst into tears. 'Charles, as long as I live I will never be capricious again,' she whispered; 'no, not even when I am your wife. I will try to be a blessing to you instead of a trouble.'

And he kissed the sweet lips for their fond confession.

So it all ended well. But the wonderful escape of Charles Vance from the peril of the wolves is talked of in Canada to this day.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., FEB. 29, 1872.

A Proposition.

It appears that Johny Stoll wants to create the impression, in order to offset his mean and despicable act of publishing private correspondence, that the articles that have appeared in the COURIER from time to time, were written by Col. I. B. McDonald. This is certainly not so, and we claim their authorship, no matter what the consequences may be. No article has ever appeared in the columns of the COURIER, from the pen of Col. I. B. McDonald, except the one in this issue, and no one can read our articles and compare them one with another, and not be convinced, from the style and tenor, that they were written by the same person. But stop! there is one more exception, and it is for lack of brains that this one exists, and that is Dutch Johnny.

He finds that he has put his foot in it—has committed a mean and detestable act, and now wants to get out of it in this dishonorable way. But, Johnny, the people won't believe you. Nothing but an ample apology will atone for your heinous crime.

Now, sir, we are not rich, but we have one hundred dollars that we will place to the credit of any charitable institution of Noble County, when named, if you can prove that Col. I. B. McDonald ever wrote one line for the COURIER. You can have the use of our employes, the postmaster here, the railroad men, to ferret out this matter, and any other means at our command. Providing that if you fail you donate a similar sum to a similar end in this county. Come, Johny, let's see your mettle.

Perhaps McDonald wrote this article. It's so much like the others. The fact of Stoll being mad at McDonald because Mac went for Sprott for delegate to the National Convention, was known to us before this controversy commenced. We learned it from good authority, and find that it stung Johny so that he went beyond all honorable bounds to answer, and then brought down the condemnation of the press on every hand. Read your exchanges, Johnny, and get a proper view of yourself, once in your life.

Radical Ticket.

The following is the Radical ticket put in nomination, last Thursday:

Curry of Terre Haute; Auditor, James A. Wildman of Kokomo; Treasurer, Col. John B. Glover of Bedford; Reporter of the Supreme Corut, Col. Jas. Black of Indianapolis; Clerk of Supreme Court, Charles Scholl of Clark County; Superintendent of Public Instruction B. W. Smith of Indianapolis; Attorney General, Jas. C. Denny of Vincennes.

Call for Democratic State Convention, June 12, 1872.

APPORTIONMENT OF DELEGATES.

The Democracy of Indiana will assemble in Convention at Indianapolis, on the 12th day of June, at 9 o'clock A. M., to nominate candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Congressman at Large, Secretary of State, Auditor of State, Treasurer of State, Attorney General, Supreme Court, Reporter of the Supreme Court, Presidential Electors at Large and Delegates from the State at large to the Democratic National Convention; the same to be nominated in the order above named.

The basis of representation to be one representative for each one hundred votes cast for Norman Eddy for Secretary of State, at the last general election, and one for every fraction over fifty.

The co-operation of all citizens, regardless of party affiliations, who believe that a change in the administration of the government is necessary to restore purity and economy in public affairs; that general amnesty should accompany equal suffrage, and that in levying the public revenues the general welfare should be consulted and not the interests of sections, classes or monopolies, is cordially requested.

By order of the Committee.

E. S. ALVORD, Chairman.

Indianapolis, February 23, 1872.

Under the appointment DeKalb County will be entitled to Seventeen delegates, the whole number of delegates being [illegible].

Ex-Congressman Stokes Convicted.

Ex Congressman Stokes of Tennessee, was convicted in the Criminal Court at Washington, for receiving money for prosecuting claims, which were alleged fraudulent against the government, while he was a member of Congress. The case appeared as full of fraud, bribery and perjury as charged last fall in the newspapers, and Stoke's boasting appeal from the ledger to the courts has been properly answered. The bogus company for which Stokes got bounties was exposed in the evidence, and considerable merriment was caused by the description by its captain in the formation of the company, he stating that he formed it and [illegible] himself captain, and that there was a wooden [illegible] in it, with a boy who [illegible] —Albany [illegible]

To the Democracy of the Tenth District.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND., Feb. 17, '72.

Democrats:—For some time past Mr. John B. Stoll, and a few others have, for some cause, seen proper to keep up a systematic attack on me and my friends. I have kept silent; not that I was afraid of any attacks which could come from any quarter, but when a man or set of men are so hard pushed as [illegible] the call for something to help them [illegible] which exceeds their [illegible] that they must stoop to publish the private correspondence of parties, without the consent of the writer, I think at that point forbearance ceases to be a virtue. As to the letters of mine, which Stoll has seen fit to parade to the public, they are mine—my productions, written in good faith, though at the time I have done some one injustice. These letters were written in response to suggestions and inquiries of said Stoll, as they plainly show. I took strong grounds for Messrs. Hendricks and Holman—their were the soldiers' friends and stood by us. I was for fair dealing then, and am for fair dealing now. If I am satisfied that a man will not act fairly all around, I shall cast him aside, caring not a fig for the past. If this is treachery, call it that and welcome. That there was some ill feeling between Mr. Brown and myself at that time is a fact; that I felt aggrieved to some extent is a fact; that Mr. Brown and myself afterwards settled our personal difference mutually is another fact. We mutually agreed to so act. At the time Mr. Brown took occasion to animadvert pretty strongly on some of my actions—a right he had. That I expected to support Mr. Stoll for Delegate is a fact; but when we met at Indianapolis, it appeared to all fair minded men and Democrats of the Tenth District delegation that Major Sprott—an old and tried veteran in the party—was the proper man. Major Sprott had grown gray in the Democratic service. It was intimated that Stoll was so extremely modest, by a very learned gentleman, and that Sprott [illegible]; hence I did refuse to urge my colleagues to vote for Stoll; that, too, after telling Stoll of my intended action.

Now, my letters prove that I am a good working Democrat, and that I was a little more enthusiastic for John than I should have been; but this was owing to the situation at the time. John knew that there was a little 'bad feeling' between Mr. Brown and myself, hence he took advantage of the situation, and now comes down into the lowest species of journalism and publishes private personal letters without permission of the writer, in order that he may shift the odium which attaches to his disorganizing course. I am a Democrat, and desire peace and harmony, as well as success, and much regret to have been compelled to write this card. But in justice to Mr. Brown, editor of The Post, and all others concerned, I am constrained to publish this statement. While I may, under certain circumstances, criticize the acts of Democrats privately, I will not seek to injure them publicly.—Whenever I am so hard pushed for something to shift odium from myself to another, that I shall be compelled to publish private personal letters, which were written in 1867, under the circumstances above referred, and that, too, without permission from the writer I shall retire and hide my head in the dust.

The editor of the Auburn COURIER, while poking his facts at John, did tell the truth, and I will say, now and for all time, that Tom. C. Mays, R. D. Dunn, William J. Craig, Samuel F. Winter, W. B. Loughridge, E. Zimmerman, F. J. Zimmerman, Eli W. Brown, and others are, any and all, as responsible and Democratic as John B. Stoll and his man 'Friday.' John has called me out. He says 'Col. McDonald and his friends' have commenced this war on him. I hurl it back and say to him that he commenced it himself, and that I can prove it in a court of record, or before any committee that may be mutually selected. That this man Stoll, as a Democratic journalist, has treated me both personally and politically unfair, I am ready to prove. I am ready meet Stoll & Co. in any shape honorable, at any respectable place. I know that my abilities are quite common; yet I am ready to meet the whole set and see whose ox will be goared. Where shall we meet? No special pleading. Come right to time! Stop your scurrile and tell both sides fairly like a man. Don't play 'sore head' because we have an honest Democratic Northern Prison administration at Michigan City. Come, be a man John!

Mr. Brown, myself, and all others in Whitley, of the Democratic faith, are working in unison for the success of the principles of the party, and no act of ours shall in the least tend to jeopardize its harmony. I have no fight with Mr. Stoll. In all matters I have done what I deemed right personally, and for the best interest of the people and the Democracy. That I have made mistakes is quite likely; but when any man or men charge me with acting corruptly to the value of a farthing, as a public officer, I shall hold myself ready to prove him a libeler in a court of record. 'Choose Ye.'

ISAIAH B. McDONALD.

Fee and Salary Law.

The Judges of the Supreme Court yesterday filed their opinions in the case of William J. Wallace, Clerk, etc. vs. The Board of Commissioners of Marion county, appealed from the Marion Court of Common Pleas. As will be seen Chief Justice Worden and Judge Pettit dissent from, and Judges Downey and Buskirk maintain the decision of the Lower Court. Through their equal division of opinion the judgement of the Common Pleas is sustained.

Opinions were also filed in the case of Michael Hyland vs. The Water Works Company of Indianapolis and William J. Wallace, Clerk, etc., and the case of Henry Geisel vs. N. B. Taylor et al., affecting the same law as regards per diem of witnesses and certain docket fees. In both these cases, which were appealed from the Marion Common Pleas, the judgement of the Court below, sustaining the validity of the law, [illegible] by the Supreme Bench.

Democratic State Convention.

As has already been announced, the Democratic Central Committee, at a meeting held on Thursday last, the 22d instant, determined to hold a State Convention for the nomination of candidates for the State offices to be voted for at the October election; and also Presidential electors and delegates to the National Democratic Convention for the State at large. There was a difference of opinion as to the time of holding the Convention, [illegible] early [illegible] June was finally agreed upon. This is before the early harvesting, and at a time in the summer season that farmers can leave their work without detriment or inconvenience. Besides it is an opportune time in a political point of view. It will be after the National Convention of the Liberal Republicans, that assembles in Cincinnati in May, and after the National Republican Convention which meets at Philadelphia on the 5th of June, thus giving the delegates to the State Convention the benefit of the action of the two wings or factions of the Republican party. Some of the committee were in favor of deferring the call to an adjourned meeting, as did the Democratic State Central Committee of Ohio, but it was feared by the majority of the committee that further delay would have the appearance of indecision which might be charged by the opposition as evidence of demoralization. And besides as it has been the habit to defer organization until after the State Convention has been held, it was thought best not to postpone the meeting to a later period, especially as the Convention by that time would be fully advised as the policy and action of majority in congress and of the doings of both Republican National Conventions.

We suggest to the Democracy of every county in the State the holding of their Conventions at an early day to select delegates to the State Convention and perfect organization, even if it should be thought advisable to postpone local nominations until after the State Convention. And the importance of the June 12th convention upon the future of the Democratic party, not only, but the welfare of the country, can not be over estimated, hence the necessity of selecting for delegates the wisest, the most considerate, and the best representatives of the party, men who have the courage to subordinate personal preferences as to candidates and prejudices, we may say even convictions upon mere questions of policy that do not involve principle, in order to bring together in harmonious action all citizens whose overshadowing purpose is to restore purity and economy in the conduct of public affairs, and a comprehensive policy in the administration of the government that will look alone to the good of the greatest number, and not the interests of sections, classes or monopolies.

The people demand reform in the administration of public affairs, National, State and local, and the Democracy, co-operating with heretofore Republicans who are convinced that reform will not come without a change in the personnel of legislators and administrative officers, will present to the suffrages of the people candidates whose high character and eminent fitness will be a guarantee of reform and economy in the administration of the Government, then will come success, not a mere personal or partisan triumph but success that will give assurance of the overthrow of official extravagance, corruption and fraud, and the inauguration of economy, purity and honesty in the administration of Government.—State Sentinel.

Atheism and Crime.

There was a man arrested in Illinois for murder lately, and on his person was found a pistol, a pocket-album filled with vile pictures, and a copy of the Toledo (O.) Index. The journal that found such fit companionship is published and party edited by D. R. Locke (better known as Petroleum V. Nasby), and is devoted to infidelity, free-love, communism, and all the destructive ideas and isms that are originated from time to time in the minds of the wickedly-disposed.

We presume that the murderer bought the Index in hope of finding consolation in its pages, and, after reading it through reflected as follows:

'Well! it teaches that there is no God, no devil, no hell, no heaven, no reward, no punishment; that when we die we rot; that this existence is the be-all and end-all. If this is the case, then, as I have robbed and murdered in the past, so shall I rob and murder in the future. I must have pleasure, and to get pleasure I must have money, and to get money I must work or steal. I have no time to waste in work if this is all the life I am going to lead. Therefore I will steal. If I steal it may necessitate killing a man now and then. What of that? I will try to escape the hangman, and I have no fears that my conscience will prick me with the remorse. Remorse is the fruit of conscience, and this, journal tells me that conscience is the fruit of education, and not a 'still small voice' from higher spheres, pointing out the evil, and inclining our hearts to all good and charitable works.'

This, is no doubt, the line of reasoning which every atheistic criminal follows; and that most criminals are atheists is found in the fact that unbelief is increasing throughout the land, and that felony never held a madder, bloodier carnival than she holds to day.

We do not believe in suppressing publications like the Index by Government authority; but we think they should be discarded by all respectable news-dealers, and not permitted to find a favorable notice at the hands of the press, nor entrance into any moral household.

But even with the encouragement which its wealth and subscription list gives the Index, we believe in the time it will sting itself to death, the reptile in the fable.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

On last Wednesday evening, a number of gentlemen were seated around the office stove at a [illegible] on Woodward avenue, in Detroit, [illegible] scratching at the door attracted their attention. Thinking the [illegible] was unable to find the latch, one of the gentlemen near the door arose and opened it, when to their surprise a dog [illegible] a hearty laugh, which was of a short duration, for the discovery was made that the animal frothed at the mouth and showed other unmistakable symptoms of hydrophobia. General consternation ensued, and elevated positions were held at a premium. His dogship perceiving that he was master of the situation, gnashed his teeth in defiance, and compelled every person in the room to seek a place of safety. The stove was thrown over, and chairs, tables, and office furniture generally demolished; in this one more frightened than the rest mounted the red-hot drum attached to the fallen stovepipe which unenviable position however, he did not retain but a moment. The dog in the meantime had been making unsuccessful attempts to bite several of the 'perched' gentlemen. At this juncture a hasty consultation was held, and it was decided to make a simultaneous rush for the door. This would probably have been done, had not one of the men succeeded in constructing a barrier composed of broken furniture between himself and the rabid animal, thereby precluding the necessity of this change of base.—Having accomplished this he reached the door, and was soon making double-quick time down the avenue, the dog following close at his heels. He fortunately eluded the crazed animal, who was last seen making a bee line for Park street.

Religious Items.

Rev. Hutchinson has commenced a revival at Cromwell, Whitley Co.

The Methodists at Anderson have just finished a new $30,000 church.

Dr. Von Vleck, the reformed spiritualist, is explaining things at Winchester.

About seventy accessions were made to Centenary Church, Terre Haute, during the late revival.

Fifty accessions to Berry street church, Fort Wayne, Rev. A. Marine pastor. Also a surprise worth $300, is the result of a good meeting.

Rev. M. S. Metts, the great revivalist of North Indiana Conference, is conducting a series of meetings at Ridgeville.

An interesting revival is in progress at Rockport. Rev. J. E. Brant, pastor. Some 40 persons have joined the church.

An exchange says: 'A religious revival in the Methodist Church Connersville has resulted in the conversion of some of the worst [illegible] city.'

The Episcopalians of Lagrange hold their services in the Court House at present, but are perfecting plans for the building of a church.

About forty persons have become converts to the Disciple Church, and were immersed in the river during the past week.—Ligonier Banner.

A debate on religious questions between Rev. Burgess, (Disciple,) of Chicago, and B. F. Underwood, the infidel, is expected to take place soon at Anderson.

Crawfordsville is to enjoy an old-fashioned discussion on spirtualism.—Elder W. R. Jewell, of the Christian church, and D. W. Hall, spiritualist, are to be the disputants.

Presbyterian church of Carpentersville, was destroyed by fire on the 6th inst. The Sunday School library was entirely destroyed. Supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The Presbyterians will occupy the M. E. church until they can build a new one. The Sunday Schools have been consolidated.

A statement respecting the affairs of the United States Express Company, made pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Indiana, entitled 'an act declaring Express Companies to be common carriers, and providing for the safety of articles entrusted to their care,' approved Mar. 5, 1855.

The business of said company is managed and its property and effects are owned by seven Trustees whose full names and proper places of residences are as follows, viz: Danford N. Barney, Ashbel H. Barney, Nathan H. Stockwell, Charles P. Thayler, all of N. Y. city; Edwin B. Morgan, of Aurora, N. Y., Dan P. Eells, of Cleveland, O; and Henry Kip, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The persons interested as cestui que trust are the stockholders of said Company, who change from day to day, and of whom it is impossible to make accurate statement, owing to the frequency of such changes. The capital stock of said Company is six millions dollars, represented by sixty thousand shares of the nominal value on one hundred dollars each; about two millions of which is actually employed in the business of the company, and about twenty thousand dollars thereof in the State of Indiana. The remainder of the assets of said company, not actually employed in the business of the company, invested in Government Bonds, and other available securities, for the benefit of the shareholders, and as security for those doing business with the company.

And we, the subscribers, the trustees above named, do hereby agree that legal process served upon any authorized agent of said company in said county, shall be deemed and taken as good service upon said company and ourselves.

In witness whereof we have hereto subscribed our hand this 15th day of February, A. D. 1872.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing

Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Because it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

Exhibition.—A grand exhibition will be given by the pupils of the Academy, tomorrow, Friday evening, at the School House. The programme will be an attractive one and we trust that our citizens will turn out and encourage their efforts. The proceeds will be expended for benevolent purposes, after paying expenses. Admission 25 cents, children half price.

Col. J. B. McDonald, of Columbia City, was in the city last Friday. He is a prominent candidate for Lieutenant Govener, on the Democratic ticket, and is a 'live man,' in every respect. He has incurred the ill-will of one or two persons who pretend to belong to that party, by 'busting,' a little 'ring' they had formed for 'personal aggrandizement,' but he stands well with his party.—*Ken. The Studebaker Bros., at South Bend, intend to erect, early this spring an immense brick building, over six hundred feet long, four stories high, and proportionate width, for the further extension of their immense wagon works, already the largest in this country. Twenty years ago the brothers were conducting business in a little one-story building of one room, with cash capital of $15.—Laporte Herald.

ANOTHER MEETING.

Owing to the fact that a great many were prevented from attending the meeting for the organization of a Building Loan & Saving Association, it was decided to call another meeting for this (Thursday) evening, at the office of H. C. Peterson. It is hoped that all our citizens will be present and take hold of this matter without delay.

This beautiful snow is gone. It wasn't so beautiful at the last. Like humanity, it becomes contaminated, and blackened, and muddy and diagy. And then just as it went off, and while it was mixed with mud and filth, it was amusing to see the raving distracted individuals riding round in sleighs, laboring under the hallucination that they were really sleighriding, when it was only mud-riding. The poor horses doubtless thought a great many hard things, if they did not say them.

It has been ascertained that one Holloway, postmaster at Indianapolis, and brother-in-law to Morton, was in the habit of raising the figures on vouchers for public printing while he was State Printer. He is now called the champion voucher raiser of the north west. This is what Radical officials have done for the tax payers of Indiana. Well may Grant say let us have peace. If he would give his office holders a little more honesty, it would be better for the people.

[illegible]—The revival which has been going on at the M. E. Church, for several weeks, has been attended with flattering results, some twenty-five having been added to the church. The Rev. Mr. Lampors may justly feel proud of what has been accomplished and though it has required unceasing labor, yet the reward is more than an equivalent for the time thus spent, and all feel greatly encouraged. The attendance was unusually large, and the good order and attention given by all attested the sincerity of the interest awakened.

A sound, practical education, including a good trade, is a better outfit for a youth than a grand estate, with the drawback of an empty [illegible]. Many [illegible] have slaved and pinched to leave their children rich, when half the sum thus lavished would have profited them far more had it been devoted to the [illegible] of their mind, the enlargement of their capacity to think, observe and work. [illegible] that the neighborhood can afford to do without in the [illegible].

THE BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD TO BE BUILT ON THE DEFIANCE LINE.

We are able to give this week good news relative to this road. Hon. Wm. Clapp, [illegible] from Baltimore last Friday, bringing [illegible] the right-of-way would be tendered the [illegible] early day. This is the only condition they have made, that we give them the right-of-way. No subscriptions are asked, and only 66 feet instead of one hundred for road bed is required. Judge Clapp addressed a large meeting, at the Court House, last Monday evening, giving these facts with others not necessary to be divulged just now. He said this work of getting up the right-of-way must be attended to just now, immediately.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest manifested was of no ordinary kind, we know from what we saw that the work will receive due attention, that every effort will be made and that success will attend them. The work in Noble and other counties farther west is being pushed forward vigorously and it will not be many days, we are informed, until a most encouraging report will be made. And we feel that little DeKalb will not be behind. Let the people take up the matter, and there is no such word as fail.

Here is proposed the extension of a trunk line of railroad from the agricultural depots of the great west, to the seaboard of the east, passing through our fertile country, giving us material assistance of a most substantial character. All that is asked is the right-of-way. Shall we take advantage of this magnificent offer by going to work without delay, or shall we lie still and see it go from within our grasp to be built on the northern line, for the extension will be built, and as Judge Clapp remarked, if we do not give it our encouragement now, the company may take advantage of the liberal offers made by the northern line. A committee of three started east Tuesday morning and a similar one west to work up the right-of-way and we trust that they will meet with every encouragement on the way. It is unnecessary to recount the advantages this road will give us, for they are numerous to the farmer as well as the Merchant and there ought to be no hesitation upon the part of any one to push the work forward without the least possible delay.

Revival.—We learn that an extended revival is going on at the Disciple Church, in Newville, under the pastor, Rev. T. P. Sutton. Sixteen additions have been made, and the prospects are still encouraging.—This church now numbers a membership of one hundred and ninety-three. The interest manifested and attention given, are indications that this will be a large and complete revival for this place and we trust it will so result.

Wool.—The wool market is still stiffening up, which is good news for our farmers, who have been compelled to put up with low prices for the last few years. We understand that agents of some large wool houses in the east are already in the market offering to buy up what wool there is on hand, and also to buy this year's clip in advance. Although they are offering higher figures than were paid last year, still they are by no means paying near as much as wool is now worth in the market. We advise our farmers not to be in a hurry to sell their wool, and by no means to part with their crop at present.

With pleasure we place before our readers the spring announcement of the Palace of Fashion a name synonomous of good square dealing and honest treatment.—Their new stock consist of the largest and best selected assortment of Men & Boys Clothing, Hats, Caps and Furnishing Goods, ever brought west, and the greatest advantage of all is that this stock was contracted for last fall before the recent advance in all classes of woolen goods, the benefit of which will be given to the many friends of the Palace of Fashion, of Fort Wayne, the pride of that city. We earnestly advise our readers to examine the stock of this house, when they visit Fort Wayne. All goods marked in plain selling figures.

Accident.—We are pained to state that Mr. R. J. Norford, son of Esq., Norford, of Butler, this county, met with quite a serious, and for a time it was feared, a fatal accident, on last Monday, while at work in the woods. In falling a tree a large limb was lodged on a neighboring tree and while at work the lodger fell suddenly striking the young man on the left side of the head and inflicting a most painfull and dangerous wound. His brother, Mr. J. Norford, was at work with him and narrowly escaped death at the same moment. After vain efforts at resuscitation he carried his brother to the sled, several rods away and brought him to town. Dr. Hoopingarner was called and all that skill and kind friends can do is being done to alliviate the suffering. Mr. N., is one of our most popular young men and his misfortune is a matter of general regret.

Auburn, Ind., Feb. 19, '72.

C. O. Myers, Esq.—Dear Sir:—Our Democratic editor has (to use a cant phrase) got religion, and as a matter of course there is a little jubilant feeling in the Republican ranks; as we fell that no man can lead the life of a true christain, and hang to the old ship. We hope for Brother Mays, but fear that old habits are too strong for him to remain steadfast in the faith of the M. E. Church. The conclusion is that the Courier will either changed its faith, politically, or find a new editor.

Republican.

The above is found in the Kendallville Standard. As to religion we have had that for several years and dates from our conversion. We are glad our Republican friends are jubilant. We can say to them that they can extend their jubilee, so that there will be rejoicings among the angels, if some of them will step out and work more faithful for the Great Master. The Christianity of the party will never save them. If we cannot remain steadfast in M. E. Church, we don't think there would be much use trying anyother. Now, we propose to do our duty as a Christain, and a Democrat [illegible] we propose to fear neither man nor the devil. We consider it high time to set our faces against the corruption and extravagance of the Republican party, and we hold it our duty to take a step towards our own purification. And thus we have religion and Democracy going forward hand in hand in the great work.

RAILROAD INFORMATION WANTED.

The Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw Railroad Company.

To the Editor of the Courier:—The Indiana stockholders of the Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R. Co. are curious to know something more than they do about the management and affairs of this comp'y. They are in the dark. It is said that an over-issue of $200,000 to $300,000 of stock in the shape of bonuses to Mr. J. F. Joy, Mr. J. M. Forbes and others in the Michigan Central R. R. Co. was made just before the election of Directors in 1871, without the knowledge or consent of the stockholders generally, by which the control of the road was taken away from the Indiana stockholders and given to the Jackson men, and the road made a sort of tail kite to Mr. Joy's big kites. Up to that time I believe the Indiana stockholders had a majority of the stock and could have controlled the company's organization. After the election of 1871, I understand another large issue of stock was made—$200,000 to $300,000 in the shape of a bonus to purchasers of the company's second mortgage bonds at 70 cents on the dollar, that is, a $1,000 bond was sold, nominally for $700, and $500 of stock was thrown in to sweeten the bargain. It is believed that any such use of the capital stock is illegal especially under the laws of Michigan, but it has served its purpose in putting more fully into the hands of the Jackson men the control of the road.

Before these large issues of stock with nothing to show for them were made, I think the bona fide stock amounted to about $715,000, of which about $450,000 had been subscribed in Indiana—viz: private at Fort Wayne, $65,000; City and Iowa at Fort Wayne, $150,000; in DeKalb county, about $80,000, and in Steuben county, about $155,000, leaving about $265,000 on the Michigan part of the road. Fort Wayne, in addition to its stock subscribed, also gave to the road twenty acres of the City Park for station grounds, worth I suppose, $50,00. I am told it was distinctly provided, and understood, when the City Park donation was made, that the company's shops were to be built on the ground donated. It would take a microscope to find much of the shops or any other structures of any importance in value on the city park station ground, although the road has been in operation over two years. It will become a conviction of many Indiana stock holders, who paid in their money to build the road, which is a cheap one and not well equipped, that by some hocuspocus process the stock has been made worthless. In bonds and stock, the road already shows a cost of over $3,000,000, or more than 30,000 per mile, with a bond debt of over 2,000,000. Can the President of the road, or the Executive Committee, or any of the Indiana directors, give us some light, so that stock holders can know just where they stand? Is there a ring in the Saginaw road, as in others, and if so who are in it. Has any body ever seen any printed report of the condition and affairs of the company, such as the law requires to be made to the stockholders annually? Can anybody tell why there was no annual meeting for an election in 1870, and why at the meeting of 1871 Mr. J. M. Gale, of Angola, was left out of the Board, and Mr. Joy put in leaving no local director between Fort Wayne and Jonesville? It is said that some of the Indiana stockholders are about to bring a suit to test the validity of what they claim to be spurious stock issued to get the road away from a legal majority of the original stockholders. I hope you will keep us posted as to what is going on.

Lincoln.

The weather during the past week, in this latitude, has been more mild and balmy than for some time previous, and seemingly spring-like. Let the gentle zephyrs come. We are ready for the spring time. We long to cast aside our cumbersome overcoats, and hanker after radishes and lettuce, and green things.

Householders Call In.—I have the celebrated Rhodehamel Scrubber and Carpet Stretcher, a first rate article for cleaning and mopping up floors, and putting down carpets. Call and get one. I am also agent, to supply merchants by the dozen at factory prices.

Our Card.

We are now ready to offer our patrons and the public, greater inducements than ever before, as we have now received our second stock of Fall and Winter Clothing, and have now the largest and most complete stock of clothing in the State. We have purchased them for cash and at such prices that we can defy any merchant in the State to compete with us. All we ask is to have you call and examine our stock and prices and we can soon convince you that we can't be undersold. Remember the place, The Original Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of DeKalb County, State of Indiana, Administrator of the estate of John F. Campbell late of DeKalb County, deceased. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

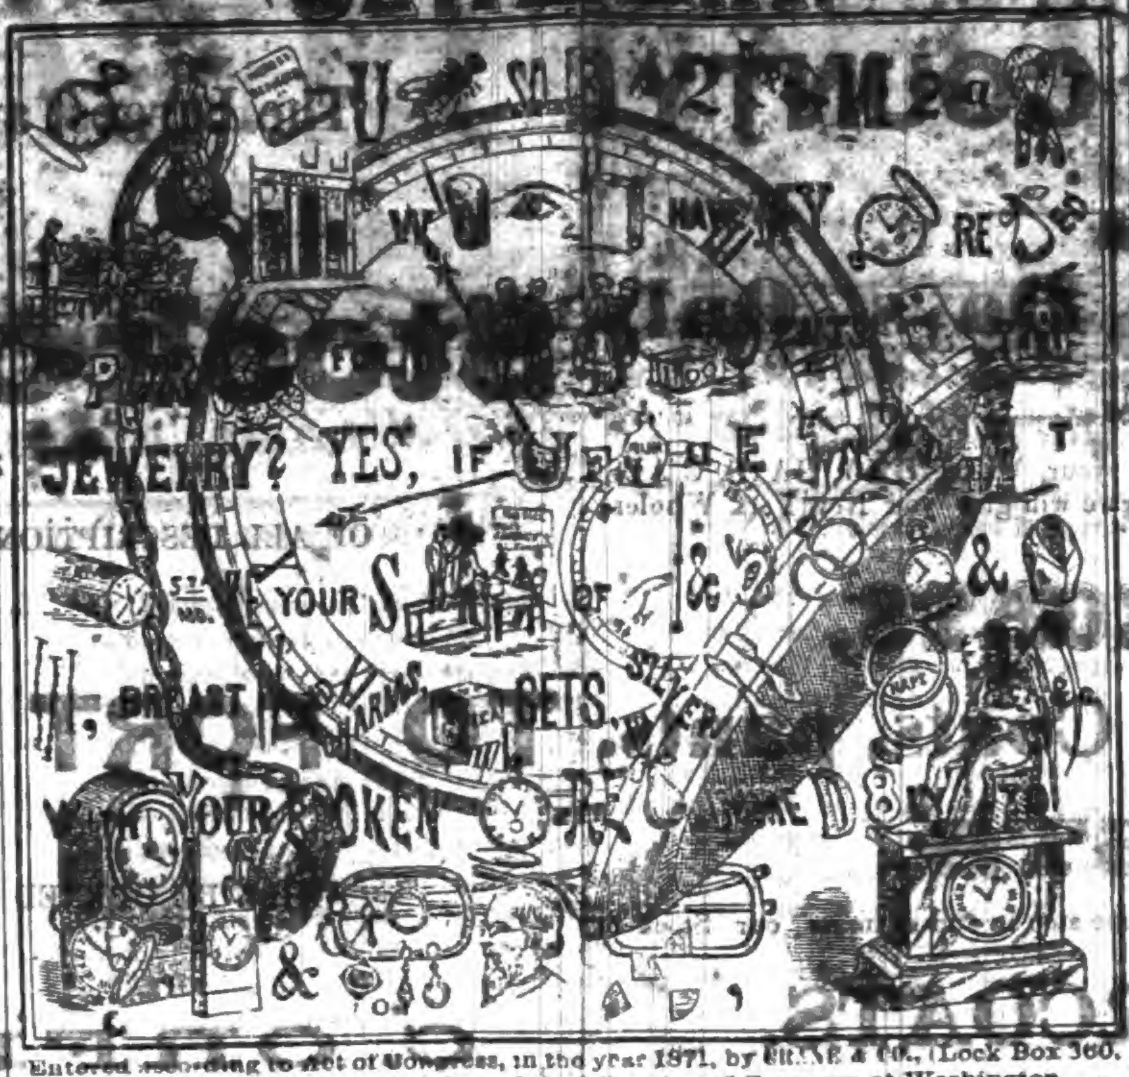
JEWELRY.



Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1871, by Kline & Co., (Lock Box 360, Indianapolis, Ind.,) in the Office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

The following solution was made by Albert Totten, E. H. Palmer, M. F. Long and David Lauferty:

Watchman will you be so kind as to direct me to a first class Jewelry Store where I can have my watch repaired, and purchase for my Boys & Girls presents fine in jewelry?

Yes, if you from a large assortment would make your selection of finger and ear rings, &c., &c. With your broken watches, clocks, glasses (or spectacles) and jewelry repair immediately to Joseph Abright's head quarters.

The following solution was made by Albert Robbins, Geo. Lanning, G. W. Cobler and H. Griswold.

Watchman will you be so kind as to direct me to a first class Jewelry Store, where I can have my watch repaired and purchase for my children presents fine in jewelry? Yes, if you from a large assortment would make your selection of finger and ear rings, watch and vest chains, breast pins and charms, tea sets, napkin rings, &c., &c.—With your broken clocks, watches & jewelry, repair immediately to Joseph Abright's.

Address of Prof Bowersox—Concluded.

So far as we do, so far do we fail to fulfill the object of our being and act the beast. We sometimes hear it asked, what will become of the world, when at the present rate of increase the earth will be overstocked with human beings, but fearly then, pestilence and famine must follow, which is contrary to our anticipation of the future of the gospel; we answer, that upon this theory the whole matter is plain. It is said that during the reign of barbarism in America, the Indian inhabitants never exceeded two hundred thousand, but were continually reduced by wars, famines and pestilence, but as civilization commenced its progress, wars and famine began to die away, and the number of inhabitants began to increase and will continue to increase until the number of inhabitants is commensurate to the ability of the earth to sustain a population under every appliance of art, but can never go beyond, for a higher intellectual development was not intended by the creator, to take place among men, in the body it rendered the human family so spiritual, it would absorb the energies of nature and rob the physical as to deprive it of the power of procreation. Students of Auburn schools, in conclusion let me say, that there is but one royal road to true human greatness—to true virtue, there is but one way founded upon reason and philosophy, by the consumption of vegetable and animal matter there is generated within you a force, it must be spent, you cannot retain it, you have within you the God given power of the correlation of forces. You can spend this force in the exercise of your moral and intellectual faculties, or you can spend it in the exercise of your baser passions. There is safety alone in action, you cannot retain this force and hold in check the baser passions, without the exercise of the nobler passions of the soul. If parents and teachers only understood this law of our being better, many a lost son and daughter would have been saved. Then let us defeat, weaken and destroy the corrupt tendency of your nature by withdrawing the energies of your natures from the exercise of your baser passions and devoting this energy to the exercising of the intellectual and moral faculties of the soul—ignorance will surely bring vice in this train, knowledge will as surely bring virtue. I now in conclusion will present a proposition for your candid and earnest consideration, as to its truthfulness. A high degree of moral and intellectual attainment is incompatible with the practice of vice.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Line, and from Logansport over the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City, St. Joseph and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific, and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, "Which is the way West?" by the publication of a neatly and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c. and illustrated by a large map truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

The Red Front Clothing Men, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind., are selling any quantity of those eight dollar suits, besides one hundred different kinds of Cassimere, all wool suits, for $15. The only way to sell goods now is to sell them close and low, and people will buy them. Every article is warranted to give entire satisfaction, by the Red Front Clothing Men, who are carrying everything before them, as their prices are satisfactory to everybody. Remember the place No. 5, Keystone Block.

MANHOOD: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of [illegible] the effects of errors [illegible] in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors [illegible] may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure, at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

Hunting for a Knot-Hole.

A short time ago a few Cincinnatians were on a hunting trip in Indiana.—One night they found it convenient to stop at a small country tavern where the accommodations were somewhat limited, so much so as to compel them all to bunk in one moderate sized room next to the roof. This being the best they could do, they accepted the conditions without much murmuring, being pretty effectually tired out with their day's tramp, and after supper, retired early.

About ten o'clock they were awakened out of sound slumber by gayety and laughter proceeding from the adjoining room, occupied by the landlord's three buxom daughters. It was evident that, as they were retiring for the night, they were having a high old frolic.

Now the hunters were all young men, and it was very tantalizing to have so much 'gal' fun going on with only a door intervening. At length one of the hunters whispered to the other:

'See there, boys, there's a knot-hole in the door, and, we can see all what is going on. Heap of fun there, you bet.'

They looked, and there, sure enough, was what appeared to be a good size knot-hole, showing the light within the room adjoining to be very bright indeed.

A bold hunter crept cautiously out of bed and applied his eyes to the knot-hole but was astonished to find he could see nothing.

As he put his head down to look, the knot-hole seemed to disappear. Stepping back a pace or two, there was the knot-hole again.

'What did you see?' inquired one of the hunters, who was trembling with curosity in deed,

,Didn't see anything,' was the reply They either took the knot hole away or plugged it up.

Then another hunter tried it with like effect.

'See there, boys; look at the roof."

They looked and at the mystery was solved. The hunters slept better.

The America Vesuvius.

The news that Mount Hood, in Oregon, is throwing out a dense column of smoke and threatening an active volcanic eruption, surprises most Eastern readers, who know the mountain only as they have seen its snow crest in the background of Bierstadt's canvas Mount Hood is one of several peaks of the Cascade Mountains (known as the Sierra Nevada in California), every one of which is an extinct volcano—unless the present manifestation of life makes the word 'extinct' inappropriate. The other important peaks are Mount Jefferson, the Three Sisters and Mount Pitt, ranging in height from ten to eleven thousand feet; the height of Mount Hood is about thirteen thousand feet. There are Indian traditions which indicate an eruption of Mount Hood, but there exists no other evidence on the subject except that of scientific observation. The natural desire of every American citizen is that if Mount Hood is about to return to active life as a volcano, it will do so on a scale worthy of the nation which has arisen around it since the last eruption. The eyes of a great people are upon it, and if it shows proper spirit Mount Hood may become a nation's pride.

Speaking Machines.

Many attempts have been made to imitate the human voice by mechanism; the most successful of which, the invention of Prof. Faber, of Vienna, has peen exhibited all over Europe and in several cities of this country.

It is an automaton figure provided, with a mouth, lips, tongues, larynx, and what corresponds to lungs. The movements of these various organs are produced by means of wires and levers, connected with a keyboard, like that of a piano. By the motions of the keys the machine is made to articulate sounds, words and sentence, in French Laten, German, English, and Italian. The performer first mantaly divides the word or sentence into its distinct sounds, as a phonographer who do' in writing, and then presses one after another the corresponding keys. A mask upon the figure, containing the nose is used only in pronouncing French. It will sing as well as speak, and is truly a wonderful piece of mechanism; and yet how inferior to the mechanism which so perfectly, and easily, and without effort, produces the human voice—the work of nature!

Lofty Structures.

The following are the heights of the principal monuments, domes, etc., in the world: St. Antoine column at Rome, 134 feet; principal tower of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, 145; Trajan's column at Rome, 145; Napoleon's column at Paris, 150; Washington Monument at Baltimore, 180; the great obelisk at Thebes, 200; Bunker Hill Monument at Boston, 223; column of Delhi, 224; Trinity Church steeple at New York, 264; the contemplated new dome of the Capitol, 300; dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, 320; tower of Manlius, 350; tower of the Cathedral of Strasburg, 460; dome of St. Peter's Cathedral, Rome, 460; Great Pyramid of Egypt, 481; National Washington Monument, 517.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.
The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
Mar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Line, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas City, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to Time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

"NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE."

BY REV. [illegible]

"Nearer, my God, to thee,
Nearer to thee;"
'Tis by the cross of Christ
Thou raisest me,
And 'all my song shall be
Nearer, my God to thee,
Nearer my God to thee,
Nearer to thee.'

When guilt disturbs my breast,
My peace all gone
My spirit seeking rest
And finding none,
The cross of Christ I see
My fears and sorrows flee,
I come for rest to thee,
Nearer to thee.

When sunbeams g'ide my way,
Serene the sky,
Tempting my soul to stay,
By earthly day,
Then let thy gifts all be
Fingers that point to thee,
Glad voices calling me
Nearer to thee.

When tempests shroud the day,
And earth is drear
Be Thou, O God, my stay!
My sadness cheer
And through the gathering night,
Lead upward to the light;
The portals ever bright,
Nearer to thee.

When life's last pulses wane,
Jesus, be near;
My sinking heart sustain—
Banish my fear.
To thee my hands shall cling,
Of thee my lips shall sing;
My soul in glory bring.
Nearer to thee.

On a Locomotive.

BY REV. T. DEWITT TALMADGE.

'May I get on with you?' I asked an engineer on the Pacific railroad, at a station six or seven thousand feet above the level of the sea. 'Certainly,' he said; 'but hold fast or you may fall off.'

'Toot! toot!' went the whistle, and the long anaconda of a rail train first went crawling along the rocks, but soon took on fearful momentum. Sitting in Pullman's palace car, looking out of the window, the passenger gets no idea of the speed of the train; but close by the engineer, and feeling the nervous quiver and jump of the iron courser, you see the 'mountains skip like rams, and the little hills like lambs.'

The door of the locomotive furnace clangs open, and the flames rave as though they would leap out to devour, and the fireman jars the raging jaws of the monster. The engineer has his hand on the iron bit that controls the speed, and seems to use no more exertion than a doctor feeling the pulse of a child. Indeed, the locomotive, to the engineer, is not a mere machine, but animate. He talks to it seems almost to pat it lovingly on the neck. He is proud of it. This is a warm understanding between the two, and in occasional spurts of steam the locomotive seems to take voice and answer its rider. An engine never hunts its master, save in the effort to throw the passengers.

But the engineer is wide awake. He is kept on duty only four hours in the day and all the energies of body and soul cluster in his vigilant eye and quick thumb.—Two hundred lives hang on his wrist, from day to day.

We plunge into a snow shed with infinite clatter. As we rush on, the prairie dogs skulk into their holes, as much as to say, 'what next?' You see here and there groups of red men with long hair and cheeks dashed with war paint, ringed ears and a superfluity of dirt that buries your last romantic notion about 'the noble men of the forest.' Now the whistle lets off a wild scream; a cow and calf on the track. The cow we cut into halves, and the calf with broken legs tumbles over into the ditch. I wonder if that man, just ahead will get off in time. Perhaps he is crazy, and wants to be run over. Neither. In time to save himself, he switches off and robs the coroner.

Hold your breath. Ravine a thousand feet deep on this side. Embankment a thousand feet up on the other. As we turn the curve, the engineer pulls the steam valve, and the silence that chiefly reigned here for six thousand years, lets slip its sounds of echo and of reverberation.

Whew! how we fly! If a bolt break, a rock fall or a rock dislodge, we are in eternity.

Bridges are high and tremble under the pressure of the train.

Out there is the old emigrant road, with occasionally the skeleton of a cow or a horse; and here a mound and a rough stone at the head of it, that shows where some worn traveler finished his journey, in those times when in one year across these heights went five thousand wagons, pulled by seven thousand mules and thirty thousand yoke of oxen.

And now the night begins to fall, and the train goes plowing through the darkness. The great burning eye of the locomotive peers through, and flashes far ahead upon the wild scene.

How the shadows scuffle. How the crags shiver. How the echoes rave. An express train at night on the Rocky Mountains. Yet the way smoothed down by human engineering. Then it will not be so difficult to prepare the way for a grander coming when the mountains shall be made low, and the crooked straight, and rough places plain, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.—Ex.

A Story with a Moral.

Sometime since, a lady called upon a celebrated occulist, in order to consult him on account of her eyes, complaining that their power of vision had of late considerable diminished. At a glance the doctor saw that she was a lady of rank and wealth He look at the eyes, shook his head, and thought the treatment would require much time, as there were reasons of fear amaurosis in her case. He must advise her first, as she had informed him, she was residing a considerable distance in the country, that she must move into the city at once, and thus enable him to see her frequently, if possible, daily.

The lady then rented an elegant mansion, moved into the city, and the physician was punctual in his attendance.—He prescribed this and that, and thus days ran into weeks, and weeks into months.—The cure, however, was still coming. The physician tried to console her.

One day the patient hit upon a curious scheme, and she waited not long to carry it into effect.

She procured for herself an old and poor attire, put a hood of tremenodus size upon her head, took an old umbrella and a market basket in her hand and in these habiliments she visited her physician, selecting for her purpose a very rainy day. She had so well succeeded in distorting and disguising herself that the eye even of a lover could scarcely have recognized her. She was obliged to wait for a long time in the ante-room of the physician, with many others, who like herself was seeking relief. At last her turn came around.

'Well, my good woman, what have you to complain of?'

'Very bad eyes, doctor,' she then answered.

He took her to the light, looked into her eyes, but failed, at the time to recognize his patient.

Shrugging his shoulder, he said:

'Your eyes are well enough.'

'Well, she said.

Yes, yes, and I know what I am saying.'

'But I have been told that I was getting the a—a—I forget what the thing is called.'

'Amaurosis?'

'Yes, doctor.'

'Don't let them make you believe any such nonsense. Your eyes are a little bit weak, that is all. Tell your physician he is an ass.'

'He is?'

'Yes he is; a perfect ass! Tell him I said so.'

The lady now arose, and in her customary voice said. 'Sir, you are my physician don't you know me?'

The face that the sage counselor made is much easier to imagine than for us to describe.

A Hunting Trip.

A short time ago a few Cincinatians were on a hunting trip in Indiana. One night they found it convenient to put up a small country tavern where the accommodations were somewhat limited so much so as to compell them all to bunk in one moderate sized room next to the roof.—This being the best they could do, they accepted the conditions without much murmuring, being pretty effectually tired out with their days's tramp, and after supper retired early.

About ten o'clock they were awakened out of sound slumber by great gayety and laughter proceeding from the adjoining room, occupied by the landlord's three buxom daughters. It was evident that, as they were retiring for the night, they were having a frolic.

Now the hunters were all young, and it was very tantalizing to have so much 'gal' fun going on with only a door intervening At length one of the young hunters whispered to the others.

'See there, boys, there's a knot hole in the door, and we can see all that is going on. Heap of fun in there, you bet.'

They looked, and there, sure enough was what appeared to be a good sized knot hole, showing the light within the room adjoining to be very, very bright indeed.

A bold hunter crept cautiously out of bed and applied his eye to the knot hole but was astonished to find he could see nothing.

As he put his head down to look, the knot hole seemed to disappear.

Stepping back a pace or two there was the knot hole again.

'What did you see?' inquired one of the hunters, who was trembling with curiosity in bed.

'Didn't see anything,' was the reply.—They either took the knot hole away or plugged it up.'

Then another hunter tried it with like effect. As he stopped to steal a glance at unconscious maidenhood on a frolic, the knot hole vamoosed. They were greatly puzzled, until one of them cried out:

'See there; look at the roof!'

They looked and the mistery was solved. There was a knot hole in the broad roofing, through which the moon was shining, the light falling upon the door so as to produce the illusion described. The hunters slept better after this discovery.

A Word for Editors and Reporters.

The following has been going the rounds of the press, and as there is a good deal of truth and information in that every one should know, we present it to our readers:

'It is expected that editors and reporters will attend all public meetings and publish the proceedings. We may know from other sources that the meeting will be held, but whoever may have the management of them should see that the press is invited. How does the editor know whether you want a report? Is he to stumble in like any other person and take an active part by reporting without being invited? Committees meet, public concerts are held, public dinners are given, and a thousand other things. We don't want your dinners, we have enough of our own, nor your dancing or music; but if you expect us to spend our time in inquiring into them, and our money in setting type for them, unless our services are tho't worth a little show of common courtesy, you are mistaken. We give as most all of our means, and then are expected to double that for printing, for which we get not even thank you. Many persons, too, neglect the newspaper in the business that needs its aid. They seem to think they can and should get that which costs us money without giving us any equivalent. If you want the aid of the paper either as citizens of a community or as individuals, it is your duty to render an equivalent. What would you think of a man who would go into your store and ask you to give him a hank of thread, and go somewhere else to buy his cloth.

A Boy's Evenings.

Joseph Clarke was as fine looking and as healthy a lad as ever left the country to go into a country store. His check was red with health, his arm strong, and his step quick. His master liked his looks and said that boy would make something He had been a clerk about six months, when Mr. Abbott observed a changed in Joseph. His cheek grew pale, his eyes hollow, and he always seemed sleepy. Mr. Abbott said nothing for a while. At length, finding Joseph alone in the counting room one day, he asked him if he was well.

'Pretty well, sir.'

'You look sick of late,' said Mr. Abbott.

'I have the headache sometimes,' the boy said.

'What gives you the headache?' asked the merchant.

'I do not know as I know.'

'Do you go to bed in good season?'

Joseph blushed. 'As early as most of the boarders.

'How do you spend your evenings now Joseph?'

'Oh not as my pious mother would approve,' answered the young man, tears starting in his eyes.

'Joseph,' said the old merchant, 'your character and all your future usefulness and prosperity depends on the way you pass your evenings. Make my word for it it is a young man's evenings that make him or break him.'

The warning was a timely one, and proved effectual. He realized that he was exposing him to influences that would inevitable work his ruin, and at once changed his course.

A Smart Set.

Old farmer Gruff was one morning tugging away with all his might and main at a barrel of apples which he was endeavoring to get up a cellar stars, and calling at the top of his lungs for one of the boys to lend a helping hand, but in vain. When he had, after an indefinite amount of sweating and puffing, accomplished the task, and just when they were not needed of course, the boys made their appearance.

'Where have you been, and what have you been about, I'd like to know. that you could not hear me call?' inquired the father, in an angry tone, addressing the oldest.

'Out in the shop, settin' the saw,' replied the youth.

'And you dick?'

'Out in the barn, settin' the hen.'

'Up in Grannie's room, settin' the clock for her.'

'And you, young sir?'

'Up in the garret, settin' a trap.'

'And you, Master Fred, where was you, and what was you setting?' asked the old farmer of his youngest progeny the asperity of his temper being somewhat softened by this amusing category of answers.—'Come let's hear.'

'Out on the doorstep, settin' still,' replied young hopeful.

'A remarkable set, I must confess,' added the amused sire, dispersing the grinning group with a bow of his head and a wave of his hand.

'A hurricane!' answered the triumphant Yankee.

HOW I WAS CAPTURED.

I was sitting in my study, reading Moliere, when she entered the room—perfectly unannounced at that.

I looked up and saw an angel in white Marseilles, flounced; jaunty blue hat, about the size of a sauce, tipped to one side in a most bewitching, heart-breaking manner; and she wore cream colored kids, and craried a white pongee—taken all in all, a fairy!

She smiled at me, and held out her hand.

I took it mechanically. What did this mean?

She pouted—ah! those cherry lips! she stamped her little No. 1 impatiently on the floor.

'You don't seem very glad to see me,' she said pettishly.

I murmered that I was delighted—entranced. So I was—such visions were not of every-day occurrence to me.

'Well,' said she gleefully, 'that's a comfort! Now, they told me that you wouldn't receive me—that I would be turned out of doors.'

'Reptiles!' said I.

'But I came—and you are not angry?'

'Angry?'

I could say no more.

Then she walked up and down the room.

'How do you like my dress?' revolving around me as if on a pivot.

I murmered something about 'angelic superbness.'

'I did intend,' she said, half doubtfully, 'to get a dress of gray satinteen, with the underskirt cut as usual, and trimmed with deep plainting—the space to be filled with bias folds above the plaitings in a band of velvet silk—the overskirt quite in front, and square—the side gores rounded up four inches longer, and looped up into a joinnier. That, with pretty little saque with open sleeves, trimmed to match the underdress, would be nice, wouldn't it!'

'I murmered an unqualified assent—not that I understood what she was talking about, for she uttered the full description in one breath; but then I didn't know what I was saying.

'But,' she said, 'I bought this Marseilles because I like it. Don't you!'

'I admire your taste,' I said faintly, for I was fast losing my senses, through wondering as to who and what she was.

'You are a dear good fellow!' said she rapturously; 'and I know we'll get on famously together.'

So she intended staying here! I was getting into deep water.

'Now, then,' she continued, show me some place to put my things, then you and I will have a talk.'

I mechanically pointed out a small room opening out of the library. She hurried in. I sat like a statue carved from adamant. Deeper water.

Presently she returned, divested of little hat, pongee and kids.

She cast a serching glaunced around the library.

'Horrid dirty!' she said disdainfully, 'when has it been cleaned?'

'About a year ago!' said I meekly.

She gave vent to a pretty little scream.

'A year? Shocking! Oh, I couldn't sit down in a room that hasn't been cleaned for a year! This must be put to rights.'

She said this in a very determined tone, and went to work. She converted my linen coat into an apron, tied a cunning little handkerchief over that pretty head, and snatching up the fly-duster, dusted away valiently—raised a cloud of dust in which I sat, gazing on the vision! What did all this mean? I consulted Moliere, my standing authority, but Moliere, could give no explanation. Could she be an angel sent to cast a ray of light over my dismal path of life. Perhaps! but did angels wear white Marseilles, and talk about satinets and jonniers? Impossible! It must be a dream.

She suddenly paused, and came to me through the cloud, and held out her arms and said:

'Roll up my sleeves please. I can work better with them up.'

I did roll the white sleeves up, and then immediately scouted the idea of its being a dream. Couldn't dream of such arms, with a beautiful dimple in each elbow.

Certainly not! They were real! I did not think that a sculptor would have been proud to have them for a model, because I was morally certain that any sculptor would have been distracted at the sight, and would have dropped his chisel, desparing of ever doing them justice.

And then she dusted, and while she dusted she sang. What a voice! Don't mention Nilson—I won't hear it.

And then she drew up a chair, and sat down beside me, having first removed the handkerchief and the improvised apron. Then she shook her curls and addressed me:

'My dear uncle, let us have a talk!'

Her uncle! If my heart had suddenly changed to a lump of lead, it couldn't have sunk any quicker than it did then.

'You know,' she continued, 'that you wrote me a letter saying that you considered it best for me to stay at the farm, until you wrote again. But then I didn't want to stay; I felt so lonely away out there, hardly seeing a new face once a month for the last twelve years I have been there—for you know you left me there when I was six years old. Well, I thought I would come up to the city, so I took the fifty dollars and bought this suit. [illegible] picked it out for me. 'You know she has been in the city, and so I came; and you are not not angry, are you?—Because, if you are, I'll go right back again uncle—indeed I will!'

My feelings during this brief speech had been very painful. I gradually awoke to the fact that it was all a blunder—that the visit of this angel was not intended for me; and I felt very better over the discovery; but my duty was plain.

'My dear child,' said I humbly, 'will you be kind enough to inform me what your names is?'

She opened her eyes and then laughed.

'Why,' she said, 'surely you cannot have forgotten me? Little Bess, you know?'

'Little Bess?'

'Bessie Ludlow,' she said, gravely, 'your niece.'

'No,' said I sadly; 'not my niece. I have no niece! There has been some error. My name is Floyed.'

'Then,' said she, 'you are my uncle—Mr. Richard Floyd. I saw the name on the door, and came in. Now you remember me don't you.

'Sorry to disappoint you, Miss Ludlow,' said I calmly, 'but I am not your uncle. You saw the name of 'R. Floyd' on the door; my name is Robert.'

'Then,' said she hopelessly, 'where is my uncle?'

I felt bound to confess my ignorance whereat she sat looking incredulous. I explained that, strange as it might seem, I did not know everybody personally who happened to rejoice in the same surname as myself

'But,' I said cheerfully, seeing her blank look, 'we can soon find out. Here is a directory. Now, your uncle's name is Richard Floyd?'

'Yes.'

'His occupation or profession?'

'Eh?'

'What does he do for a living?'

'Nothing. He is rich—awful rich!'

'Ah! a gentleman? Behold! Two Richard Floyds, both gentleman. Let us hope they are. Now get ready and we'll go and find yor uncle.

She stood at my side in the street, and looked ten times more bewitching than ever. We walked the streets, and how my friends stared, and wondered, and envied me.

We found the first Mr. Floyd just stepping into his carriage in front of his house. He was big, pompous and vulgar. I tapped him on the shoulder.

'Your niece, Mr. Floyd,' I said, and I commenced to explain, when he cut me short.

'Nothing of the kind—not my niece an adventuress no doubt. You're a swindler I suppose. Drive on.'

I inwardly avowed to assassinate that man some dark night. My companion grasped her pongee fiercely.

'Oh, I could beat him!', she said savagely. I trembled at this outburst.

'But, however,' she said laughing, 'that's not my uncle. He's a very quiet man. I saw him about eleven years ago. He only came to see me once—I suppose because I am a poor relation.'

Here she laughed, as being a poor relation was very funny—which it isn't.

Then we tried the second Mr. Floyd; he was the uncle. We found him reading a book of sermons.

I accosted him, and introduced myself and his niece, then I explained everything, and turned to go.

He stopped me and asked me, if I would do him a favor.

I answered I would.

'Then,' he answered calmly, 'take this young lady and put her in the cars I desire her to return immediately to Cedar Farm.'

'Uncle!'

Niece!' said he, 'do as I bid you. I am your friend. Don't make me your enemy by foolishness. Stay at Cedar Farm, and I am your friend; leave Cedar Farm, and you may regret it! Go

We went.

She sobbed. (Looked prettier than ever.)

'I can't go back,' she replied. 'They don't know I left. I am afraid to go back!'

'Then,' said I, 'what will you do?'

'I don't know,' said she defiantly—(prettier still.) 'But I won't go back.'

I found myself in a nice predicament—a young lady aged 18, on my hands, a batchelor, aged 30.

A sudden thought! I would!

'My dear,' said I, 'I will take care of you.'

'You!' (Astonished and prettier.)

'Yes, I! Marry me! Instead of my niece, be my wife. Will you?'

She could not give an answer immediately. Such important questions required deliberation. She was silent about about two minutes, and then said:

'I like you.'

'Bless you,' said I.

'And you want some one to take care of you?'

'I do.'

'I will marry you, for that room isn't half dusted!'

'She was angelic! She was an angel! I embraced the angel!

And that little room is such a cunning little one!

Words fail to express how handsome she was!

We are married.

And that's the way it happened.

Governor Parker is expected to announce his acceptance of the nomination by a speech at a ratification meeting to be held in New York, and Judge Davis has written a letter to the chairman of the convention, thanking it for the 'unexpected honor' conferred upon him and stating that 'the Chief Magistracy of the Republic should neither be sought nor declined by an American citizen.' The indications are that the Labor Reformers are in earnest, and that they mean business.

Attempted Assassination of Queen Victoria.

Queen Victoria was assaulted by one O'Connor, last Thursday with an empty pistol.

Previous to his attack, O'Connor scaled the iron railing, ten feet in height, which surrounded the court yard, at Buckingham Palace. When he approached the carraige of the Queen, he first saw Lady Churchill, the lady in waiting, who was riding with her majesty. He was also going to assult her, but soon discovered his mistake and turned upon the Queen Her Majesty's groom, John Brown, who was riding behind her carriage upon witnessing the action of O'Connor, leaped from his horse and arrested and disarmed the assailant. The prisoner will be brought to Bow Street Station this morning, when a preliminary examination will be made.

All approaches to Bow street police station are jammed by an immense crowd of people, who have gathered in the hope of catching a glympse of O'Connor, the assailant of the Queen. The father of the prisoner is an Irishman, while the other portion of his family are English, and belong to the Protestant Church. O'Connor's house has been thoroughly searched by the detectives, but nothing whatever was found to criminate any one with him in his dastardly act.

Grant and Hoffman.

The New York Tribune, in an article on quarantine abuses in New York says: 'No one of the many merchants will fail to to obbserve, and we cannot in all fairness refuse to remark here, that he (Governor Hoffman) has acted with far more of promptitude than the President in the correction of like abuse on commerce and outrages on merchants It is six months ago since the Tribune exposed the bribery and corruption and exactions of Dr. Corcoran which official investigation has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, and before the report of the committee is transmitted to him the Governor has removed the culprit. Mr. A. T. Steward told President Grant of the exactions of his protege Leet, more than eighteen months ago; the report of a committee, after a secret investigations, confirmed the merchants statement, fully a year ago; a second investigation, open and public at which our first merchants freely, testified has made the fact notoriuos to the whole country, yet the only action ordered by the President is the remodling of the General Order business with Leet & Co. still retained in infamous power and the prosecution of the merchants who testified against them. There is certainly much that is mortifying in this contrast.

An "Equalizing Bounty Law."

Will the Committee on resolutions, of the recent Republican State Convention (at Indianapolis, February 22, 1872) please inform the ex-soldiers of Indiana why they refused to report the following resolution, which was presented to them at their room on the morning of the Convention, to wit: 'That our Senators and Representatives in Congress are instructed to pass an 'equalizing bounty law,' upon the basis of $33⅓ per month—deducting the bounty received, if any.'

It is well known fact that there were thousands of ex-soldiers in Indiana who enlisted and served faithfully for nearly two years and were honorably discharged for sickness, which caused their death or disability for life, who never received one cent of bounty, for the reason that, by the act of the Republican Congress, they were required to serve two years as mustered men, or be discharged by reason of wounds or mechanical injury, received in the line of duty.

Under the present law, if a soldier, even by accident, got his finger shot off while in line of *duty—though he may not have served but one day—*he is entitled to full bounty; but a soldier who served twenty-three months and twenty-nine days, and was discharged for disease contracted in line of duty, which disease will ultimately kill him—there is no bounty for him.

EX-SOLDIER.

What Mr. Sumner Proposes to Investigate.

The investigation which Mr. Sumner proposes in the senate on Monday is one of great importance.

In September and October, 1870, heavy sales of arms and materials of war were made by the Ordnance Department to the agents of the French Government for use in war with Germany then going forward. In effecting these transactions it was at the time understood in this community that the military Ring which surrounds Gen. Grant, and some of his intimate civilian associates, were deeply interested. Every body who was cognizant of the affair believed that they were making a great deal of money, but how much was not known. It now appears, however by the official statements of the French Government that they paid for these purchases about eleven millions of dollars in gold, equivalent, considering the premium on exchange to fourteen million in our currency, while in his recent report upon the subject our Secretary of War states that the War Department received but ten millions. This profit of four millions was not made by the purchasing agent of the French Government; for they had a regular commission of two and a half per cent., which is not counted as a part of the purchase money. This leaves the four millions to be shared, as the facts now appear, among the military Ring and the other parties who engineered the business. These facts Mr. Sumner desires to have completely investigated.

Another point of equal if not greater importance is the fact, which also seems to be proved by official evidence, that the workshops of the War Department were employed during the period in question in manufactoring cartridges for the French Government. It appears that France would not buy the arms unless ammunition was furnished to use in them; and so great was the power of the military Ring of speculators that they were able to cause the War Department to furnish these cartridges. This was a violation of the laws of neutrality and of international obligations far exceeding all that England can be charged with for allowing the Alabama, Florida, and the other Confederate cruisers to depart from her ports upon their errand of destruction. In that case she was guilty of negligence; but in the case of the ammunition manufactured for the French during their war with Germany, Grant's Administration was guilty of taking direct part in the war.—This appears the more criminal because it seems to have been dictated exclusively by the desire of the military Ring to realize their four million dollars from the sale of the arms. It was not only a treacherous act against a friendly power, but it was worse from being committed in secrecy and for mercenary ends.

Mr. Sumner has done well in calling for an investigation of these things.—Let it be prompt, thorough, and impartial.

Greeley not for Morton.

The N. Y. Tribune ought to be authority with Republicans. It has maligned and abused everybody and everything in and about the Democratic party for the past quarter of a century. It has an influence commensurate with its circulation and is undoubtly a power in the country. Its issue of Wednesday contains the following editorial comment upon the recent debate in the U. S. Senate:

If any doubt were entertained as to the strength of Mr. Schurz's speech, it would be removed in reading Mr. Morton's answer. He began by denying the facts which he could not meet, but soon forsook the dangerous ground of fact and argument for a wider field of caucus denunciation and caucus flattery. It is not worth while at present to follow him there. He and the loud faction which he represent have received within the last few months two or three severe but necessary lessons.—They have been taught that the tricks of the caucus are powerless before the wide publicity of the press; that the men who speak in behalf of honesty and law are stronger than those who speak in behalf of any administration; that when they try to cover up corruption and crime with the name of General Grant they do no good to the criminal and do harm to the President. So far as this Arms Scandal is concerned, the point intended is as good as gained. The investigation must now go on. It must be serious and searching. It cannot hurt any honest man or any worthy cause. Any one who tries to check or smother it will be damaged by his effort, and the country can well afford to lose any one whom the truth may indict.

Our farmer readers who have sheep have our advice not to make mutton of them. There is money in wool this year. Prices are going up, and wool agents in Mich., are contracting for the coming clip at seventy and seventy-five cents. We should not be surprised to see the best Ohio grades worth eighty and eighty-five cents before July. The mutton in Cleveland markets selling at $1.50 to $2.00 per carcass; would look as though some of our farmers did not understand the tendency of the wool market.—Cleveland Leader.

Leet, the notorious head of the thieving General Order system in the New York Custom House, has been in consultation with President Grant in relation to matters in New York. What a man to enjoy the confidence and mould the opinions of the President of United Sates! The doors of the White House shut upon Senators Sumner and Trumbull, and opened to Leet!

Consistent with the Principles of the Party.

The eighteenth resolution adopted by the radical State convention reads as follows:

'18. That the administration of General Grant has been consistent with the principles of the Republican party, and eminently just, wise and humane, and such as fulfills his pledges and deserves our cordial support. And, therefore, we instruct our delegates to the National Convention to vote for the re-nomination of Grant and Colfax our candidates for President and Vice President.'

Yes, we are inclined to think the administration of Grant has been consistent with the principles of the party. The New York Custom-house frauds, by which a young man named Leet, through the recommendation and appointment of Grant, has been robbing the people of New York city of hundreds of thousands of dollars without warrant of law, was part and parcel of the administration Grant. It was certainly consistent with the 'principles of the party.'

The 'syndicate' arrangement by which over a hundred millions of the public debt was made to draw double interest from three eto six months, and the people lost over three millions of dollars which went to enrich the already wealthy firm of Jay Cooke & Co., was also a part of Grant's administration, and is undoubtly 'consistent with the principles of the party.'

The destruction of our navy, which cost the nation five hundred millions of dollars but a few years ago, and is now worth not to exceed fifty millions—nine-tenths of the vessels having been sold for nominal sums to the pets and relations of Grant, and hundreds of private fortunes having been built up by the frauds—is another portion of Gran't administration, and is eminently 'consistent with the principles of the party,'

The sale of the arms of the nation to the French Government, during the late Franco-German war, contrary to law and the duties of a neutral government, by which a clear margin of two millions of dollars justly belonging to the people was put into the pockets of certain favored parties; was quite consistent, both with Grantism and the 'principles of the party'

The San Domingo job, which Grant attemped to involve the nation in a war for his own pecuniary benefit, was pecuniary a part of Grant's administration, and 'consistent with principles of the party.'

The convention is certainly entitled to credit for its truthfulness and 'consistency.'—South Bend Union.

Another Bright Light Appears.

Cassius M. Clay, of Kentuckey, one of the leaders of the old Free Soil party, and an abolitionist of bold effrontery, who has acted with the Republican party, addressed a letter recently to the Missouri State Convention, warmly endorsing their reform movement, and predicting a triumphant success in overthrowing this corrupt administration. Like that of Judge Brinkerhoff, it its showing up of the 'powers that be,' as the following extracts of the letter prove:

'If the Democrats are wise and just to the blacks, five millions of the South will vote with the South; not because they are Democrats or Republicans but because they are Southerners. No man is more a Unionist than I, yet I cannot fail to see that there are New England interests, Western interests, and Southern interests—all of which are, and must ever be distinct—and yet all, the Consitution being intact, are compatible to national unity. As a Southern man in this sense, I have devoted my life to the overthrow of slavery—because it was unjust to the black, and a cause of weakness to the white.

'Slavery being dead, I resist with the same earnestness that I did its existence, the attempt of the Grant conspirators to submerge the South, and to make us provincial for all time to a more than Roman imperialism.

'I denounce the attempt to weaken us by a stupid policy of arraying the blacks against the whites. I denounce the plan of barbarizing us, by the corrupt and irresponsible rule of men of the North, who have no common interest in our affairs, who divide our people and waste our substance.

'I denounce the attempt to reverse the national order of things, by subjecting, by constitutional changes and in geniously contrived laws, the intelligence and prosperty of the State to ignorance and pauperism.

'I denounce the enmity of the Grant rule to the independence of Cuba; because they know that Cuba must in interest gravitate toward and belong to the South.

'I denounce the union of the powers of the executive judicial and legislative departments in the military head of the nation.

'I denounce the nepotism, favoritism and corruption and proscription of the Grant Government.

'I denounce the scheme of subjecting men and measures to the sole end of reelecting a military chieftain.

'And last, and above all, I protest against the constitutional and despotic interference with the right of peaceable assemblage of the people and the ballot-box by the frequent alarming use of the cartridge-box.

'The renomination and election of Grant is to consolidate all these usurpations and abuses, and open a high way to the overthrow of all our liberties.'

The National Prohibition Convention met in Columbus, on the 22d inst. and nominated for President of the United States, James Black of Pennsylvania, and for Vice President, John Russell, of Michigan.

[illegible]

Among the entire list of our opposition exchanges, with one or two exceptions, the Republican press of Fort Wayne were the only papers that, prior to the 22d. of February Convention advocated the re-nomination of Grant to the Presidency.

We cannot understand how matters were managed by the Government officials at Indianapolis so as not only to endorse the present Administration—the most corrupt, and confessedly the weakest that has ever been in power since the establishment of our independence as a nation, but also to instruct their delegates from the State to cast their votes for its continuance at the head of our Federal affairs.

These resolutions of endorsement and instruction were passed, at least as far as the published proceedings, show with great unanimity.

The Indianapolis Journal may not have and that it was opposed to giving Grant a second term, but we think we are correct in saying that it was adverse to the passage of a resolution instructing the delegates to vote for him at the Philadelphia Convention, and it expressed the hope that he would see the properiety of not being a candidate.

In this view of the case, the Journal was sustained, with a few exceptions as we have said, by the entire Republican press of the State of Indiana, and were outspoken in their party, and quiet harmonious in the belief that Coalfax would make a far more available candidate.

What was it that prevented this feeling—extending as it did throughout the entire State,—from finding expression in the late Indianapolis Convention?

Did the Republican office holders think the nepotism, the gift taking, and the imbecility which has characterized the present Administration from first to last, would find favor in the eyes of themselves of their organization? If so they wake up on the morning of November 13th to find themselves mistaken,—to find that the people have defied party at last, and voted for and with the men who will restore the purity and prosperity of the Republic.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

The publication of Col. McDonald's private and confidential correspondence with the editor of the Ligonier Banner, prove but one thing. The letters in themselves are of no importance, reval no secrets and expose no conspiracy. They do not show that the Col. sought the destruction of any Democrat personally or politically. It proves however, that he placed confidence and intrusted matters of pure privacy in unsafe and unworthy hands. In doing so, we acknowledge Mr. McDonald made a mistake; not because he has written anything to injure himself or his friends to Mr. Stoll, but because he wrote at all The object gained by the publication of the letters is not apparent to us, if the editor of the Banner intended to be personally or politically benefitted by it. All men of whatever party will detest this betrayal of confidence, and the editors of the Banner and Argus has driven the last nail into their coffin, and unhonored and unsung will they go to their political graves. The world is full of instances where the warmest, most confiding friends at times fall out on account of political or personal differences, but let us be thankful there are few who will lay bare, for the purpose of opening fresh the wounds of long forgotten animosities, the secrets of confiding friends, imparted to them upon their personal honor and integrity. Such notoriety we do not seek; of such friends let us beware.—Warsaw Union.

The Auburn COURIER is making things rather lively for one John B. Stoll, the Democratic editor of the Ligonier Banner, if we do not mistake. The vigor and serverity of some of the COURIER's articles made Mr. Stoll think thy were written by Col. I. B. McDonald, a prominent candidate, from Whitely county, for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket, with whom Mr. Stoll had a quarrel. To make things even, Mr. Stoll came out and published some of Col. McDonald's private correspondence, concerning some personal political matters in the Tenth District. Now the COURIER drives Mr. Stoll to the wall by assuring him that Col. McDonald never wrote a line for the COURIER.

We have no interest in this quarrel, and believe in a peace policy, but if there has got to be a fight, and our former editorial neighbor, now in change of the COURIER, is drawn into it, it pleases us to see him wallop his man, and come cut without a scratch himself.—Fort Wayne Gazette.

The Auburn Courier.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Lots of poetry this week.

The days are lengthing fast.

Go to Davenport & Cos. for wall paper.

Go to Smith & Hare's when you want cheap groceries.

A good syrup only 75 cents per gallon, at T. B. Totten's.

Last Monday was colder than any day last month.

Prof. Strub is held a Musical Convention at this place.

The choicest Young Hyson tea is found at T. B. Totten's.

The Wabash Republican has been changed in name to the Plain Dealer, under the new proprietorship of Perry & Butler.

Best white drips only $1,00 per gallon, at T. B. Totten's.

The teams are still busy hauling material for the large brick block, that is to be built this summer.

WOOD! WOOD!!

We would like several cords of good dry wood, either four or four feet long. Bring it along immediately.

The best Orleans Molasses only $200 per gallon, at Totten's.

The Town Board has ordered a new survey to be taken, next month, of the old plat and western addition to Auburn. This is a good move and will be of great benefit to property holders who are in doubt as to their exact lines.

Try that 60 cent chewing tobacco, at T. B. Totten's.

Our excellent friend, D. M. Anderson, who has been sojourning in this county for several years past took his departure for the great west, last Monday. Joy go with him.

Nice canned peaches cheap at T. B. Totten's.

BOY WANTED.

We want a good boy to learn the printing trade. One from the country preferred. Must be a good speller, and know something about grammar. We want a good sized, stout boy, that is willing to learn and thereby become a good printer. Apply at this office in person.

Lots of nice chestnuts yet at T. B. Totten's.

Tom Browne said before the Convention nominating, him that if by eating meat he had offended his brother in the past, he would eat no more. If Tommy had made the application in the drinking line it would have been much more suggestive.

Sap Buckets for sale cheap, at T. B. Totten's.

ELECTION.

A meeting will be held this (Thursday) evening at Peterson's Law Office, to elect officers in the Building Loan and Savings Association. We hope every one will be present and assist in the organization.— Turn out!

No. 1 Flour will be delivered any where inside the corporation free, if bought of T. B. Totten.

Our enterprising townsman, I. M. Thomas, Esq., is now prepared to supply all demands for Pine lumber, Shingles, Lath, Lime and Coal. Having excellent facilities to furnish this material, he can offer it at very low rates. Those intending to build should remember this splendid opportunity.

The maple sugar season is fast approaching, and the indications are that the 'run' will be a good one. For the benefit of those who do not already know, it is a fact that maple molasses may be canned, in the same manner as fruit, and kept for years, without souring or graining. All we charge for this recipe, is a few gallons of molasses from such as it may benefit.

We shall fell under obligations to friends at different points, in this and adjoining counties, if they will give us short communications upon local matters in their respective neighborhoods. In other words if there is anything that you know that is worth knowing, that we ought to know, and you know we don't know, please let us know—that's all.

The Republican papers generally throughout the State, don't like that part of the late adopted platform, instructing the delegates to vote for Grant. They know that the great mass of the Republican party, are sick and tired of the present corrupt administration, and that the great popular voice to-day is: "Let us have peace without Grant in it.

The house cleaning season is upon us and what are we poor men to do? How we tremble when we think of it. Woman will have her own way at the, while the 'old man" takes his solemn repast from the top of a flour barrel, and in sleeping enjoys the freedom of the interval between his bed room and the front fence. It will be a season of meditation, white wash, mop sticks, and calm unimpassioned profanity. We pass.

The Indianian says that Tom Taylor of the Fort Wayne Journal went to Metropolitan Hall, instead of the Academy of Music where the Republican Convention was held. He did not discover his mistake until the manager of that delectable place of amusement informed him that spectators were not permitted at the barelegged rehearsals of that establishment.

What is Whisky.—Ten gallons of kerosene, three pounds of pot ash, one ounce of strychnine, mixed with soft water." It was according to this cheerful, not to say convivial formula that a quantity of 'whisky' seized last week in Newton, Mass., was compounded, the receipt having also been found in the possession of the unfortunate dealer. If you want 'wine,' add quantum sufficit of oil of juniper. The mystery is, that men who drink this diabolical fluid do not drop stone dead at the time drinking

Enlarged.—The Warsaw Union, a live Democratic paper, comes to us this week enlarged to a six column quarto. We are glad to see this evidence of prosperity.— It shows that the people are again coming to their senses by patronizing Democratic papers. Heretofore the Republicans have out-numbered us in this respect but we are gaining in numbers, and the consequence is the state is now Democratic.— Let the people know the facts relative to Radical corruption and we have no fear of a victory.

Business Change.—J. W. Case, Esq., a prominent dry goods merchant of this place, has sold his stock to Messrs. Wood & Williams, of Ada, Ohio. The members of the new firm are spoken of as men of sterling worth and integrity, and possessing a large business experience. Mr. Case leaves a host of friends in his business connections, and retires with a general recognition by the public of his great energy, unswerving integrity and enterprising qualities as a business man. It is to be hoped that we will gain more citizens like the above in a short time.

Marriages.—The following marriage licences were issued by the Clerk during the month of February:

Geo. Rohrbacher to Amanda Shull.
Wm. Jackson to Amanda Martin.
Abraham Scott to Elizabeth Morgan.
R. E. Chaney to Nancy E. Scott.
Geo. S. Shutt to Catharine Mortorff.
David Gupp to Elizabeth Wyatt.
E. A. Zonkle to Selena Shull.
A. F. Shaw to Emily Yorks.
G. W. Gregg to Elem Murphy.
T. B. Rodamer to Matilda Davis.

One of our juvenile friends want to know, "If a fish swims three miles up the river on a stone pipe, and a pound of lettuce weighs a ton, and you can get a ten cent loaf of bread for three cents, how many shoe strings will it take to fatten a lamp post?"

ANOTHER.

If an elephant chase a lobster up a tree and a June bug teaches a canary bird to talk French, how many potato pealings will it take to shingle a new boarding house? Also how many grains of corn will it take to make a square yard of mush?

J. J. Tarbucket.

GRAND CONCERT!

We are authorized to announce a grand Concert at this place for Friday evening, March 15th, 1872, by the class of singers now being drilled by Prof. Straub. Some seventy-five scholars are in attendance, and with the superior abilities of the Professor, as a musical instructor, the public may indulge in great expectations as to the Concert, eclipsing, as it doubtless will, all previous musical entertainments. We have heard the Professor, and pronounce him first-class, and feel that the Concert will be a fine one. Get yourselves ready then, to attend.

Fatal Accident.—We omited an item in our last, relative to the killing of a son about thirteen years old, of Mr. Daniel Lyge, a farmer of this county, which took place week before last under the following circumstances: The two were at work falling trees, when a large limb lodged on a tree near by. They worked away under it however, when suddenly it fell, and struck the boy directly upon the head crushing his skull to such an extent that he died in a few hours. The father yelled out when he saw the limb falling, but the boy seemed to have no power to move away from the threatening danger. Several accidents of this kind have happened during the winter, this being the only one that has proved fatal.

Correspondence.

Auburn, Indiana, March 5th. 1872.

Dear Editor.—In looking over the Courier, of last week, I find nothing said about the festival that was given by the I. O. O. F's., of the town of Butler, on Feb. 22d I thought I would say some thing about it, for I don't like to see such jolly good times pass by without notice.

Well, a word or two about the supper. Fourteen of our Auburn Brothers went down to enjoy the festival. Arrived there about five o'clock, went to the hall and enjoyed about one hour in social chit-chat. A few minutes past six the word came that supper was ready, and that the Auburn friends should lead out and take their place at the head of the table. Oh, what a nice place for a hungry person. There we found everthing in the line of good victuals. We must say that the canned fruit was the nicest we ever tasted. Such peaches, they looked as though they had not been off the tree more than long enough to be pealed and set on the table. And then those nice cakes, pies, etc., we can't name the half. Over two hundred mouths were fed from this bountiful table and enough left for almost as many more. After supper we went back to the hall where we were entertained by Mr. Kimbol, of Fort Wayne. He sung some splendid pieces of music, and we were some what charmed with his singing, but more so with those two ladies that sang with him. Quite a number of short speeches were made suitable to the occasion.

In the evening a large crowd of young gentlemen, with their ladies, gathered in for the dance. This was carried on in good style. The music was furnished by Mr. Forsyth's Band, of Waterloo. The floor managers were T. C. Seargent and F. F. Conner. Through their gentlemanly conduct and kind entreaties the best of order was manifested through the whole of the evening. Wm. McIntyre, of Butler, was door manager and attended to it tight There were fifty-six paying numbers, and no dead heads, telling it in their own words, "Nobody drunk, no fighting."— Butler friends try again. Please let us know and we will come and see you.

S. U. T.

The Ligonier Banner says, "We are enabled to impart to our readers the gratifying intelligence that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company have virtually adopted the Albion line. The western extension will be constructed on that line, the only condition being that the citizens along the route will secure the right of way, which will not be a very difficult task.'

A reformed (?) spiritualist, in recounting his first conviction, said: 'I never had any doubt until one of the brethren told me that I was a greater man than the Savior. That was piling it on a little too thick, and after several months hard study I came to the conclusion that he was slightly mistaken."

THE BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

We give below items from several papers concerning the above road.

Paul Pepperpod writes a red hot article to the Kendallville Standard, from Albion, in which he says the long agony is over, so far as the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is concerned. "As I have so often declared, the Company have selected our route. All that is required of us is the right of way and if that cannot be secured we do not deserve a railroad. Every farmer owners whose land the line will run, ought not to hesitate to give the right of way. The rapid increase in the value of real estate along the line will amply repay and justify the farmer and landowner in giving enough land to secure the road. No road that could project through Northern Indiana can possibly enrich the farmers like the B. & O. R. R. will. Let every one who can do anything, no matter how little, at once put himself in communication with his neighbor and work earnestly and harmoniously and the road will be built. It seems strange, indeed, that argument should be necessary to convince any one along our line through the State that every possible inducement should be given the company to build the road, and since all that is required of us is to secure the right of way. If many thousand dollars were required in addition to the right of way, we might doubt and despair. But it is not so. The Company have chosen our line with very easy conditions, and if we will not accept them, the road will go elsewhere. Let us be wise, and prompt and harmonious. The B. & O. is our goose that lays the golden egg. Every one has read the fable. If our farmers, intoxicated, with the prospect of sudden wealth, should kill the goose in order to reap great gains at once we will be like the foolish man in the fable—have only disappointment and curses for our pains. Let the goose live and it will lay the golden egg each day, and all will reap a rich reward. Let us have the road, farmers, and your gains will be sure and permanent; let us meet the company with the same spirit of generosity that they come to us. Every inducement that money and the right of way could possibly offer have been tendered by other routes, and in the face of these very strong considerations, the company come to pay us and say: "give us the right of way and we will build the road on your line if you will not accept our condition, we will build on another line." Never did a great railroad offer such easy terms to a people who have so much to make by accepting them. And I cannot for a moment doubt that the terms will be complied with, when I consider that the near future will see the country along our line prosperous and wealthy and dotted with thriving towns and cities.

Our friends at Bryan, who were so sanguine of success, come down handsomely by acknowledging ours the lucky line, the Press of that place says:

From all the information we can obtain, including an article in another column on the 'Western Extension of the Baltimore & Ohio," we conclude that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company have given Bryan other poins along the proposed northern line the slip. Things look now as though the Defiance line would be the line. If this be so, then there is but one course left for us to follow, and that is, to strike heavy for some other road. There are several other roads projected through this county, some one, or more, of which we can control and bring to Bryan, if we will take hold of the matter in earnest.— The Detroit, Fort Wayne & St. Louis road we can have if we will. Shall we have it? Action is what we need. Let us act promptly, and thus secure the road.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel says, we think that the large property holders, our Common Council, and indeed our citizens generally, have been to blame in not taking steps to secure this line of railroad through our city. We cannot but think that had the merits and advantages of our city as a manufacturing and commercial centre been placed in the proper light before the officers of the officers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railrad, that they would have come to us, and secured the advantages to their contemplated line of railroad which a connection and identification with our city would give them. Our city would be a little, if any, out of a direct line, and would have been the best point on their line of road between Chicago and Pittsburgh.

As will be seen by an article copied from the Toledo Blade of this morning, and published elsewhere in to-day's paper, all the Baltimore Company require in the way of aid along the proposed line is a free right of way and depot grounds. These conditions are easy, and will undoubtedly be complied with. We are satisfied that that the building of this road through Defiance, Auburn and Hicksville, as is proposed, will secure the building of a line from here to Hicksville. As we cannot have the road come to us, we will have to go to it, for we want a connection with this important and independent trunk line.

The Defiance Democrat of last week says "the Baltimore & Ohio extension R. R., from Pittsburgh to Chicago, is now within our grasp. The recent meeting at Baltimore decided to adopt the so-called Defiance line, as surveyed by Mr. Steel last summer. The conditions annexed are regarded as exceedingly favorable—the donation by the towns and property holders along the line, of the right of way and lands for depot and other necessary grounds for the use of the company and their shops.

This extension is a through, and we may say, a continental road. Its business will be large at the first and continually increasing. It must become one of the great trunk roads across the continent.— The direct and prospective advantages from its location through our county, for a distance for more than thirty miles, to say nothing of its benefit to the town of Defiance, cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It will materially change the business associations, bring about new connections, introduce new industries, develope and increase those already here, largely add to our population and material resources, placing Defiance county in all desirable particulars, whether for residence or business, among the first counties of the State.

THE RIGHT OF WAY.

The Committee appointed to go east, to work up the right of way for this road, have returned, bringing with them the gratifying news that the farmers and property holders in Newville and Concord townships, located on this line have donated the right of way with but three exceptions and they are likely to follow. The Committee appointed to go west have not met with such gratifying results but are greatly encouraged over the prospects. They have to disabuse the minds of a number of the opinion that they can ask just as much as they please and the Railroad must pay it before it can be built. They find out their mistake, however, when they are told that this matter is regulated by law, that appraisers can be appointed and the benefits, as well as the damages, assessed, which assessment would, most likely, not give them half as much as this Committee offer for the right of way.

However, there is no serious trouble apprehended. Why should there be when so little is required for the construction of this grand throughfare through the heart of the county? It is hoped that persons owning land along the line, both east and west of us, will take an enlightened and public-spirited view of this matter, and deal with the Committee on liberal terms. It is with their own neighbors they will deal and not with a foreign corporation.

We can safely say that DeKalb County is ready to respond to the demand made for the construction of the road. We only hope that other counties may be as prompt as she will be on this question.

Extension.—The corporation limits of Auburn, have been extended, by the Town Board, so as to include Gross & Dills' addition, near the Depot. We would not be surprised if these extensions would prove quite frequent during the next few years, as Auburn is widening out, and being built up in a substantial manner.

Fifty-four houses and additions were added during last year, the first year of the railroad. Now we are to have two more railroads, and at this rate we must have more room, and we are glad to know there is plenty of this article all around us.— Don't let the work stop here, but put your best foot foremost in all the new enterprises. There are a few we know that are a positive hindrance to the growth of the place, but we must leave them and their foggyism and march onward, and after while we can look back from an eminance of which we may feel proud, and see these old growlers, with moss on their backs, still unhappy, and muttering the same old song, "Did'nt I tell you so?"— We feel that the future prospects for Auburn are very bright just now, yet it depends mainly upon our action and enterprise, whether we shall realize all or only a part of what is within our grasp. We want to chronicle for the present year twice the number of improvements of last year, and we believe we shall be able to do it.

Our old friend Mr. Adam Lehmon, of Washington township, called at our office on yesterday and informed us that the people living along the south line of this county are greatly excited over the sudden disappearance from his home and family of John Rieherts, a well-to-do farmer, living just across the Whitley line in Huntington county. Last Friday morning he ate his breakfast as usual with his family but rather hurriedly. After finishing his repast he at once departed from the house and has not been heard of since. On Saturday, Sunday and Monday about 200 men were searching for him far and near. The supposition is that he was partially insane when he left home, and that in all probability he has committed suicide. Mr. Rieherts is about fifty years old, sparely built. His family are in great distress over his sudden disappearance, without any cause to them known. Will our exchanges made a note of this?—Col. City Post.

It is astonishing how many lives are lost by the fooling with guns supposed to be unloaded. Our exchanges are full of accidents from the careless use of fire arms. People should bear in mind the advice the old lady gave to her son that 'a gun was dangerous, though it has neither lock cock, stock or barrel. There appears to be nothing so destructive to human life as empty fire arms. A pistol or gun that every one believes to be unloaded is very likely to go off in some miraculous manner and kill somebody, and as a rule ought to be feared more than when known to be loaded.

The Phrenological Journal for March has been received. It contains more than confirm our high opinion of that magazine's character. The very instructive articles on "Fish Culture in America," and "Ague and Fever" are alone worth more than a year's subscription. But besides these there is a long list of readable matter. Attorney General Williams; Expression; Harriet Hosmer; Our Horse Cars; Will it pay? Writing for the Press; The Arctic Regions; etc., with fine portraits and numerous illustrations. Price 30 cts. or $3 a year. S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway New York.

Those of our friends who expect to have work in the line of brick laying, plain and ornamental plastering, &c., &c., will advance their best interests by calling upon Mr. Thos J. Jones, of Butler. He is a first-class mechanic, and works at fair prices.

Dead Heads at the Show.

BY H. O. BYRON.

To Edgecomb's magic lantern show,
Some verdant sprigs were bent to go.
Then Jery, Joe, and monkey Dan
With [illegible] to lay the pl[illegible]

But [illegible] they knew there was a way
To see the sights and still not pay
Two dimes apiece, "A monstrous fee
Why there are some who get in free!

At length they thought this plan would win;
"We'll crowd the door and rush right in;
And if he tries to put us out,
Then you see we'll bust his snout."

But [illegible] saw a thing arrive,
And told them he must have his due;
Or if they did not choose to pay,
They must go out and stay.

And then the boys they looked so cheap,
You would of guessed they'd stolen sheep,
But when they saw he'd have the chink,
They stopped not long to talk or think—

But then the thought it grieved them sore
They gave two dimes apiece—these four.
The exercise at length began
And gave delight to everyone,

Until at last, the closing scene
Shown out in gilt and silver sheen,
And now we hope our simple rhymes
Will save the boys—worth more than dimes.

The shame of getting caught again,
In deeds too mean for shape of men,
For if our lines their wrongs restrain,
We're sure 'twill save their parents pain.

WHO ARE CHRISTIANS?

BY J. P. WIDNEY.

Who are God's favored children? Who are they
Whose honored names make up the grand array,
That living, bless the world; that dying stand,
Nearest the great white throne, a welcome band,
Arrayed in white. Not those alone I pray
Where gathered crowds join in the grand display;
Nor those, alone, whose voice at morning light,
Or when the evening shades close in the night,
Sing psalms of praise, or with serenest brow
Around the fireside altar humbly bow.
Nor those, alone, who freely give their store
Of garnered wealth, to bless a foreign shore,
Or rear the sacred spire, or gild the dome
Where flaunting splendor mocks the beggar's home.
Nor those, alone, whose ready, open hand
In rich profusion scatters through the land
Ten thousand pages, bright with precious thought,
Or dark with solemn warnings. It is not Alone they who can point with honest pride
To rites obeyed; to pompous creeds supplied
With ardent devotees; but he whose arm
Lifts up the fallen; shields from threatened harm
The weakest of God's creatures. He whose door
And purse is open to the shivering poor.
Or scant in gold is rich in kindly deeds.
Whose patient suffering eloquently pleads
For sympathy; whose weary feet have trod
Through doubt and darkness up to nature's God,
Whose pray'r though never heard by mortal ear
In whispers plead when none but God was near;
Whose quiet, loving homes, like evening dew
On opening flowers, expands the good and true
These, too, are Christians, even though the star
Of Christian faith, shines dimly from afar.
Though sh[illegible] es on pagan altars set apart
But bear the incense of a loving heart;
Though narrow creeds may shroud like funeral pall
The Heavenly Father loves and blesses all.

MANHOOD,
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

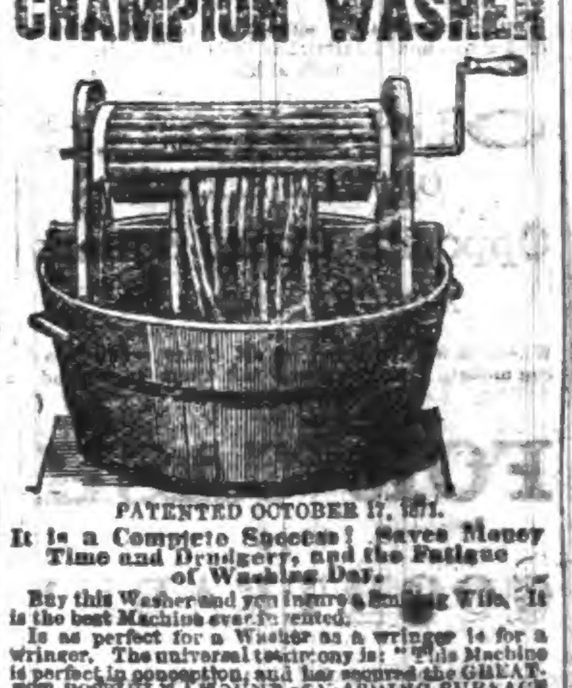
CALKINS'
CHAMPION WASHER



PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

Is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency.

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver. Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers CALKINS BROS. & CO.,
32 S. Canal St., Chicago, Illinois.

SMITH & HARE
DEALER IN GROCERIES,
Queensware,

&c, &c,

Respectfully announce to the people of Auburn, and vicinity that they have removed their stock of goods to their new building in the Brick Block.— They have greatly increased their stock and flatter themselves that they have the best and most complete stock of

QUEENSWARE
in Auburn, which they will sell at the very lowest figures,
FOR CASH OR Country Produce.

Thanking their customers for their liberal patronage thus far they earnestly solicit a continuance of the same.

SMITH & HARE.

THE BOOK AGENT'S FATE.

A Story With a Moral.

They found two nail kegs full of fixed woman down at the depot the other day. They thought it was chopped meat for mince pies at first but when they found some hair pins and a garter mixed up in it, the truth sort of dawned on them. And when they fished out a tongue that wouldn't keep still, you understand they caught the idea with great facility.

I can not tell you all about the thing because you see, I did the mixing up of the lady myself. I got her into a mincing sort of a way she'll never get out of as long as she lives. You can bet the maximum of biegth with the minimum of safety on that point. This is the way the thing happened:

I was picking my teeth on the Fifth avenue hotel steps, after eating a twenty cent dinner over in Third avenue, as is my custom of an afternoon. Then came by a rakish craft. She scudded along under a closely reefed bustle and tolerable bare poles. The wind was a northwester, and it struck her aft making fearful havoc with her canvas.—She wore the new style of metal garters with gilt clasps. I will take my oath, you observe that. She signaled me with her off eye, and I bore down on her. I had thown over board about seven words, when she interrupted me by yanking a big book out of her bustle some—where. 'Here is something,' she warbled. 'that I'd like to show you It is called 'The history of Christianity in the Feji Islands,' by the Rev. Peter Pordridge. It is illustrated by ten thousand pictures, just engraved by the old masters, and bound in calfskin. It is the greatest work ever written.—You can't afford to be without it. Children cry for it. The price is only seventeen dollars. I will put your name down, and—'

'False woman!' I shrieked, 'away! You have deceived a poor, weak trusting man. You are a book agent. Beware, woman! although unmaried, I will defend myself to the death.'

Then I fled.

But the creature, you comprehend was like the itch, or a washwoman's bill—not to be easily got rid of. She dogged my footsteps like a divorce detective. She hovered over me at my office, and bored me at every point. Life seemed a burden, and I would have hydrate-of-cholorated myself only I knew that misguided woman would haved followed me into eternity, and have commenced to canvass the land of eternal warmth for her blasted book. I know some good fellows in the summer land, I wouldn't like, you understand, to precipitate a horrible fate upon them.

I disgusted myself as a hackman, as an organ grinder, as a minister,—put myself in the most humiliating positions you observe,—but it wasn't any use. Be sure that female wickedness found me out. At last I meandered down by the sad sea waves and was happy for a time. Days sped by at fifteen or twenty dollars each,—and I was beginning to forget the book agent.

One evening I wandered on the sanded beach in the mellow moonlight I suppose that is the correct Long-Branch thing to do. I met a lovely creature in white tulle, or cotton sheeting, or something. I took her for a moonbeam first, you comprehend, and my heart bumped with admiration. I flirted with the etherial heifer, and we sat on a damp rock very close together. My arm got around her waist, and we were having a nice comfortable time. You possibly know how it is yourself.

'Fair stranger,' I murmured, 'dost love thus to squat on the primeval rock, and commune with nature?'

She said she did.

'Couldst thou leave the allurements of art, and live always amidst the flowers and trees and the moonbeams.'

She said she could.

'Why so silent?' I asked, softly pressing her hand. 'Dost aught disturb the harmony of thy soul,—is anything but admiration for this scene in thy heart?'

She said there was.

'Here is something,' pulling out a ten pound volume from somewhere 'that I'd like to show you. It is called. 'The history of Chrisiianity in the—'

I recognized her. She was that infernal book agent. I drew my trusty jack knife and smote her thus! Then I celebratedly carved her, packed her as described, and now there is an eternal peace within my soul.—N. O. Times.

TITUS A. BRICK.

Rules for Ladies.

1. Marry no profane man, because the depravity of the heart will corrupt your children and embitter your existence.

2. Marry not a gambler, a tipler or a hunter of taverns, because he who has no regard for himself will never have any for his wife.

3. Marry not a man who makes promises which he never performs, because you may never trust him.

4. Marry not a man whose actions do not correspond with his sentiments, because the passions have dethroned reason, and he is prepared to commit every crime to which an evil nature, unrestrained, can instigate him. The state of that man who regards not his own ideas of right and wrong is deplorable, and the less you have to do with him the better.

5. Marry not a man who is in the habit or running after all the girls in the country, because his affections are continually wavering, and therefore can never be permanent.

6. Marry not a man who neglects his business; if he does so when single he will be worse when he is married.

Awful warning: 'An Ohio man married Miss Snyder more than seventy years ago, and his mother-in-law has been living with him ever since. She is now only one hundred and five years old, and gives promise of staying with him many more years to come.'

The electoral vote for the next President will be cast upon the basis of the old apportionment of 242 members of Congress, instead of the new one of 283. Practically, therefore, the South and West will be denied the increased votes for President which the census of 1870 shows them to be entitled to.

Fisk's First Mistake.

Fisk used to often tell about his first mistake in life.

Said the Colonel, 'When I was little boy on the Vermont farm, my father took me up to the stable one day, where a row of cows stood in the stable.'

Said he, 'James, the stable window is pretty high for a boy, but do you think you could take this shovel and clean out the stable?'

'I don't know Pap,' said James, 'I never have done it.'

'Well, my boy, if you will do it this morning, I'll give you this bright silver dollar,' said his father, patting him on his head, while he held the silver dollar before his eyes.

'Good,' says James. 'I'll try'—and away he went to work. He tugged and pulled and lifted and puffed, and finally it was done, and his father gave him the bright silver dollar, saying—

'That's right, James, you did it splendidly, and now I find you can do it so nicely, I will have you do it every morning all winter!'

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. Walker, Proprietor. R. H. McDonald & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Line, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas city, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep.

In the quiet nursery chambers,
Snowy pillows yet undressed,
See the forms of little children
Kneeling white robed for their rest.
All in quiet nursery chambers,
While the dusky shadows creep,
Hear the voices of the children—
"Now I lay me down to sleep."

On the meadow and the mountain
Calmly shine the winter stars;
But across the glistening lowlands
Slant the moonlight's silver bars.
In the silence and the darkness,
Darkness growing still more deep,
I listen to the little children,
Praying God their souls to keep.

"If we die"—so pray the children,
And the mother's head drops low,
[One from out her fold is sleeping
Deep beneath the winter's snow,]
"Take our souls"—and past the casement
Flits a gleam of crystal light,
Like the trailing of His garments,
Walking evermore in white.

Little souls that stand expectant,
Listening at the gates of life
Hearing far away the murmur
Of the tumult and the strife,
We who fight beneath the banners,
Meeting ranks of foemen there,
Find deeper, broader meaning
In your simple vesper prayer.

When your hands shall grasp this standard,
Which to day you watch from far,
When your deeds shall shape the conflict
In this universal war.
Pray to Him, the God of battles,
Whose strong eyes can never sleep,
In the warning of temptation,
Firm and true your soul to keep.

When the combat ends, and slowly
Clears the smoke from out the skies,
When, far down the purple distance,
All the noise of battle dies;
When the last night's solemn shadow
Settles down on you and me,
May the love that never faileth
Take your souls eternally.

Another Story of Old Peter Cartwright.

Within the bounds of a district in Illinois, of which he was presiding elder, there resided a member of the church, pious and devoted, whose wife though otherwise a most excellent women, was an inexorable heretic and scoffer at religion, and who threw every obstacle possible in the way of the religious life of her husband, making it exceedingly unpleasant to him. Upon the occasion of one of Mr. Cartwright's quarterly meetings, the husband acquainted him with the facts, and asked him to spend the time at his house, and see if he could not effect a reformation in the conduct of his wife. The elder said he would on condition that he should be allowed to pursue his own course in the management of the case without hindrance or offence. To this the husband consented and Mr. Cartwright went to the house in question to spend the night. He was courteously received by the landlady, who spread an excellent supper and made herself exceedingly agreeable. All things went on pleasantly till bed time, when the lady produced a candle and said to her guest that he might retire to his room when he chose.

'But,' said Mr. Cartwright, 'it is my habit always to have family prayer before retiring.

'I care nothing for you habits,' replied the landlady, 'we have none of that nonsense here. You may pray as much as you like in your own, but not in mine, old fellow.'

'Really,' said he you do not seriously object to my praying in your household, madam?'

'Indeed I do, and what is more, I dont intend you shall do it.'

'I will though, whatever you intentions may be.'

'We shall see.'

Meanwhile Mr C. had produced a copy of the Bible from his saddle bags and was making ready to observe his evening devotions.

At this point the housewife made demonstrations as if to extinguish the candle, accompanid by a most emphatic declaration that she would have none of that in her house. 'We shall see,' said Peter, and rising he grappled his hostess, and by violence he thrust her outside the house and barred the door. She was, of course frantic with rage, and the husband signified a disposition to interpose. Mr. Cartwright reminded him of the conditions upon which he came to the house and insisted that he be allowed to manage the case.—The husband submitted, and Mr. C. selected a long chapter read it slowly, sung a long hymn, and prayed long and loud—the wife meantime rattling at the door blind with rage, and demanding to be admitted.

When he was through with the prayer the preacher went to the door and inquired of the woman outside if she would consent to family worship if let it. She said 'No.'

Weeds

I was once walking with a farmer through a beautiful field, when he chanced to see a tall thistle on the other side of the fence and cut it close to the ground.

'Is that your field?'

'Oh, no,' said the farmer, 'but bad weeds don't care much for fences, and if I should leave the thistle to blossom in my neighbor's field, I should have plenty in my own.'

I wish all fathers and mothers would think of that. The evil weeds in your neighbor's field will scatter seeds in your own. So it is worth while to pull them up in self defense. Every weed pulled up in your neighbor's field is a dangerous enemy driven away from your own.

A fellow with an inquiring turn, was anxious to know the meaning of the letter W or R, which he saw on so many posts along the railroad. He was told they were instructions to the engineer, to either ring or whistle. This quieted him for a time, when he suddenly broke out with: "I say, Mister, ain't you mistaken? I've heard of commencing wring with W, but who ever heard of commencing whistle with an R?"

The death of Ex-Senator Grimes of Iowa has called for a very general expression of sympathy throughout the north-west.

A Rich Scene.

The following rich scene recently occurred in one of our courts of justice, between a judge and a Dutch witness all the way from Rotterscam:

Judge—What's your native language, sir?

Witness—I pe no native, I's a Doochman.

Judge—O, fader says she pe all over tongue.

Judge (in an irritated tone):—What language did you first learn? what language did you speak in the cradle?

Witness—I did not speak any language in the cradle at all; I only 'cried a little in Dooch.

There was a general laugh, in which the judge, jury and audience joined. The witness was interrogated no further about his native language.

Bean for Stock Feed.

A Canadian farmer says, although white beans are of no value for fattening stock, yet they are the best things that can be fed to young animals, as they contain the necessary materials for making bone and muscles. For a young colt, one pint of beans and oats crushed together will be found much better than oats alone. A neighbor of mine, a few years ago, fed his store ewes with a regular allowance of beans and peas crushed, during the winter, and as a consequence the next spring never lost a lamb. They were so strong that they were on their feet and tried to suck almost as soon as the little fellows were dropped.

Cancer Cure.

Mr. Charles Yardley, of Pittsburg, Pa. writes as follows relative to the healing qualities of a simple weed, which, he says grows on a high land in almost every State in the Union, although it is not familiar to us by the name he gives it:

I want to tell how I cured my cancer last summer without pain or money.—Eight years ago a cancer came on my nose It grew slow at first, for several years, but the last two years it grew very fast, and it finally began to eat my eye. I had spent hundreds of dollars, and tried doctors far and near without any relief. Last summer I drank Wild Tea, putting the tea grounds on my cancer every night as poultice, and in six weeks my cancer was cured. I am sixty two years old. I have given this remedy to several persons having cancers, and know two that have cured since. Wild Tea grows over the States generally always on very high lands.—Ex.

Mark Twain on Woman Suffrage.

Mark Twain says that when women frame laws, the thing they will do will be to enact:

1. That all men should be at home at ten p. m., without fail.

2. That married men should bestow considerable attention upon their own wives.

3. That it should be a hanging offense to sell whisky in saloons, and that fines and disfrachisement should follow in such places.

4. That the smoking of cigars to excess should be forbidden, and the smoking of pipes utterly abolished.

5. That the wife should have the title of her own Property when she marries a man that hasn't any.

'Such tyranny as this,' says Mark, 'we could never stand. Our free souls could never endure such degrading thraldom.—Women, go away. Seek not to beguile us of our imperial privileges. Content yourselves with your little feminine trifles—your babies, your benevolent societies and your knitting and let your natural bosses do the voting. Stand back—you will be wanting to go to war next. We will let you teach school as much as you want to and pay you half price too; but beware! we don't want you to crowd us too awful much.'

Horace Greeley's Mark.

The following anecdote is given as authentic: Soon after Horace Greeley had made his mark on the register of a hotel in a certain place visited by him during his fall lecture tour, a rather aged countryman came into the office, and after examining the register, asked if Dr. B——— were in.

There is no such person here,' said the gentlemanly clerk.

'No such person here!' echoed the venerable rustic, taking off his spectacles and gazing into the face of the clerk with astonishment.

'No such person here,' firmly re-echoed the clerk.

'Young man,' exclaimed the other, with solemn expression of countenance, 'young man, don't lie to me. It won't do. You can't fool Gill Parks. Dr. B———'s been here as sure as guns, and pretty drunk too, I reckon, for he's left one of them air Latin prescriptions of his on the register!'

And the doctor's friend gazed down at Horace's improved Arabic with a look of triumphant recognition.

A Case of Identity.

Counsellor Dunning was cross examining an old woman's evidence in a case of assault respecting the identity of the defendant:

'Was he tall man?'

'Not very tall; much about the size of your honor.'

'Was he well looking?'

'Not very; much like your honor.'

'Did he squint?'

'A little; but not so much as your honor.'

THE COINERS.

NOTES FROM THE DIARY OF A DETECTIVE.

During the year 1847 the West was flooded with counterfeit coin. It was so well manufactured that it passed readily. The evil at last became so great that the United States authorities requested that a skillful detective might be used to ferret out the nest of coiners. I was fixed upon to perform that duty.

I had nothing to guide me. The fact, however, that Chicago was the city where the counterfeit coin was most abundant, led me to suspect that the manufactory was somewhere within its limits. It was, therefore, to the capital of the West that I proceeded. I spent five weeks in the city without gaining the slightest clue to the counterfeiters.

I began to grow discouraged, and really thought I should be obliged to return home without having achieved any result. One day I received a letter from my wife, requesting that I should send her som money, as she was out of funds. I went to the bank and asked for a draft at the same time handing a sume of money to pay for it in which were several half dollars.—The clerk pushed three of them back to me, saying, 'Counterfeit!'

'What!' said I, 'you don't mean to tell me those half dollars are counterfeit?'

'I do.'

'Are you certain?'

'Perfectly certain. They are remakably well executed, but deficient in weight. See for yourself.'

And he placed one of them in the balance against a genuine half dollar, and the latter brought up the former.

'This is the best counterfeit coin I every saw in my life,' I examined, examining them closely. 'Is all the counterfeit money is circulation here of the same character as this?'

'Oh dear no,' the cleark replied, 'it is not nearly so well done. These are the work of the famous New York counterfeiter, Ned Willett. I know them well, for I have handled a great may in my time. Here is some of the money that in circulating here,' he added, taking some half dollars from the drawer. 'You see that the milling is not so well done as Ned Willett's, although this is pretty good too'

I compared the two and found that he was right I supplied the place of the counterfeits with good coin, and returend the former to my pocket.

A few days after this I received information which caused me to make a journey to a small village about thirty miles from Chicago. I arrived there at night, and took up my quarters at the only tavern in the place. It was a wretched dewlling, and kept by an old man and woman, the surliest couple I think, it was ever my lot to meet. In answer as to whether I could have a lodging there that night I noticed that the host gave a particular look at his wife, and after some whispering, I was informed in the most ungracious manner possible I could have a bed.

I have frequently in the course of my life been obliged to put up with wretched accommodations, so I did not allow my my equanimity of temper to be destroyed by the miserable sleeping apartments into which I was ushered after I had finished my repast.

The chamber was of small size, and certainly well ventilated, for I could see the stars through the roof. The bed was simply a bag of straw thrown in one corner of the room, without sheet or covering, of any kind. This last fact, however was not much consequence as it was summer and oppressively hot.

I stood more than an hour gazing out of the opening which served for a window. Before me was an immense prairie, the limits of which I had taken up my abode appeared to be disolated from all other dwelling; and, save the croak of the tree-toad and the hum of the locust, not a sound reached my ear. It was a beautiful moonlight night, so bright that I could read the smallest print.

At last I began to grow weary, and throwing myself on my pallet I was soon asleep. How long I slept I know not, but I was awakened by a dull sound, which resembled some one hammering in the distance. I suppose it was the peculiarity of the sound which awoke me, for it was not loud, but conveyed to me the idea of some one striking iron with a muffled hammer. I arose from my bead and went to the window. The moon was now in the horizon, by which fact I knew it must be near morning. The sound I have before refered to reach me more distinctly than when in the back part of the chamber. It appeared to come from some outhouse where situated a hundred yards from the house.

Now I am naturally of an inquiring mind, and this sound occurring as it did in the middle of the night, piqued my curiosity, and I felt an irrepressible desire to go out and discover the cause of it. The desire, as the sound continued, grew upon me with such intensity that I resolved to gratify it at any price.

I put on my boots, the only article of attire I had discarded, cautiously opened the door of my chamber, and noiselessly descended the rickety staircase. A few steps brought me into the lower apartment, which I found entirely deserted I crept quietly to the window, and unfastening it without making the slightest noise, was soon in the moonlight.

Not a soul was visible; but the sound I have mentioned grew much more distinct as I approached the place from whence it proceeded. At length I found myself before a long, low building, through the cervices of which I could perceive a lurid glare issuing. I stooped down and peeped through the keyhole, and to my extreme surprise I saw half a dozen men, with their sleeves up and coats off, preforming a variety of occupations Some were working at a forge, others were supreintending the castings of molds and some were engaged in milling coin. In a moment the whole truth burst upon me. Here was the gang of counterfeiters I was in search of, and the landlord and his wife evidently belonged to the same band, for in one corner I saw them employed—the man polishing off some half dollar pieces, and the woman was packing the finished coins into rolls.

I had seen enough, and was about to return to my apartment, when I suddenly felt a heavy hand placed on my shoulder, and turning my head around to my horror I found myself in the grasp of as ill looking scoundrel as ever escaped the gallows.

'What are you doing here my good fellow?' he exclaimed, giving me a shake.

'Taking a stroll by moonlight,' I replied, endeavoring to retain my composure.

'Well perhaps, you will just take a stroll inside, will you?' returned the ruffian, pushing open the door, and dragging me in after him.

All the inmates of barn immediately stopped work and rushed toward us when they saw me.

'Why! what's all this?' they replaied.

'A loafer I found peepin' outside, said my captor.

'He's a traveler that came to the tavern last night and asked for lodging; the last I saw of him he was safe in bed,' said the landlord.

The men with drew to a corner of the department leavin' me to keep guard over me. I soon saw they were in earnest consultation, and were evidently debating some important question.

The man keeping guard over me said nothing, but scowled fiercely. I had not said a singe word during all the time I had been in the barn. I was aware that whatever I might say would in all probability do more harm than good, and it has always been a maxim of mine to hold my tongue when in doubt. At last the consultation seemed to be ended, for the blackest of the party came forward, and without any introduction, exclaimed:

'I say, stranger, look here, you must die!'

I did not move a muscle nor utter a word.

'You have found out our secret, and dead men tell no tales.'

I was silent.

'We will give you ten minutes to say your prayers, and also allow you the privilieges of being shot or hung.'

Sudenly an idea struck me: I remembered something that might save my life. I burst into a violent fit of laughter; in fact, it was hysterical, but did not know it; they looked at one another in amazement.

'Well, he takes it mighty cool, anyhow,' said one.

'Suppose he don't think we are in earnest,' said another.

'Come, stranger, you had better say your prayers,' said the man who had first spoken, 'time flies.'

My only reply was a laughter more violent than the first.

'The man's mad,' they exclaimed.

'Or drunk,' said some.

'Well, boys, cried I, speaking for the first time, 'this is the best joke I have ever seen. What, hang a pal?'

'A pal—you a pal?'

'I ain't nothin' else,' was my elegant rejoinder.

'What is your name?'

'Did you ever hear Ned Willett?' I replied.

'You may be certain of that. Ain't he the head of our profession?'

'Well, then I'm Ned.'

'You Ned Willett?' they all reclaimed.

'You may bet your life on that,' I exclaimed, swaggering up to the corner where I had seen the old woman counting and packing the counterfeit half dolars.

Fortune favored me. None of the men present had ever seen Ned Willett althought his reputation was well known to them, and my swaggering, insolent manner had somewhat thrown them of their guard; yet I could plainly see that their doubts were not all removed.

'And you call these thin well done, do you?' I asked, taking up a roll of money. 'Well, all I have to say is that if you can't do better than this, you had better shut up shop, that's all.'

'Can you show us any better?' asked one of the men.

'I think I can. If I couldn't I'd hang myself.'

'Let's see it,' they cried.

This was my last coup, and one on which my life depended.

'Look here, gentlemen,' I exclaimed taking one of the counterfeit half dollars from my pocket that had been rejected at the bank. 'Here is my last job; what do you think of it?'

It was handed from hand to hand, some saying it was no counterfeit at all and others saying it was.

'How will you prove it is a counterfeit?' asked one.

'By weighing it with a genuine one,' I replied.

The plan was immediately adopted, and its character proved.

'Try these,' I said, taking the other two out of my pocket.

All their doubts vanished.

'Beautiful!' exclaimed some. 'Very splended!' said others.

When they examined them to their satisfaction they all cordially took me by the hand, every particle of doubt having vanished from their minds. I carried on my part well. Some questions were occasionally asked me involving some technicalities of the business: these, however, I avoided, by stating that I was on a jurney, and would rather that glass was produced, and we made a night of it. It was not until morning dawned that we separated.

The next day I returned to Chicago and brought down the necessary assistance, and captured the whole gang of counterfeiters in the very act. The den was broken up forever, and most of them were condemned to serve a term in State Prison.

I have those half dollars still in my possession, and never intend to part with them, for they were certainly the means of saving my life.

A Swiss Romance.

A letter from Vaud states that a young lieutenant, wounded in the late war between France and Germany, was sent to a quiet village in that canton to recruit his strength. There he made acquaintance of a young lady of the same village, and the couple became engaged. The grief of the lovers, when the time came to part, may be imagined, but with many vows of constancy, the lieutenant at last tore himself away, and in due time arrived at Berlin. At first his letters were filled with protestations of the enduring nature of his love, but gradually, as time wore on, they became less frequent and much colder in tone. Six weeks had elapsed since he had last written, when, instead of a letter full of reproaches the lieutenant received a telegram from his 'dear Marie,' in the following words: 'Dear Fritz,—I have just received a letter, informing me that my uncle, who was a millionaire at Frankfur in the East Indies, is dead, and that I am his sole heiress.'

The lieutenant lost no time. He set out for the village. The lady was overwhelmed with joy on seeing her lover more, but reproached him for his long silence. 'Don't let us talk of it, dear Marie,' he replied.—'There is now no obstacle to our union The unexpected good fortune which Providence has sent us has removed the objection of my parents to our marriage—for a fortune so great, so collossal—' At these words Marie looked at him with a puzzled smile and somewhat pained expression, and taking his hand, said, 'Fritz, do not make fun of me.' The lover drew out the telegram and ask her if she had written them words.' Utterly astonished Marie dropped his hand, and when she recovered the use of her tongue, said sadly, her eyes filled with tears, 'Dear Fritz, there is a mistake in the telegram. What I wrote was, 'My uncle has just died a missionaire in East Indies, and the amount he has left me is just 186f. 45c.' The lieutenant returned to Berlin a sader and a wiser man.

'Paddy, honey, dear, will ye buy my watch?'

'And is it about selling your watch you are Mike?'

'Troth it is, darlint,'

'What's the price?'

'Ten shillings and a mutchkin of the creature.'

'Is the watch a dacent one?'

'Sure an I've had it twenty years, and it never once desaved me.'

'Well here's your tin; and now tell me does it go well?

'Bedad an' it goes faster than any watch in Connaught, Munster or Leinster, not barring Dublin.'

'Bad luck to ye Mike, then you have taken me in. Did'nt you say it never desaved you?'

'Sure and I did—nor did it—for I nevir depindid on it!

'I give and bequeath to Mary, my wife, the sum o' one hundred pounds a year,' said an old farmer. 'Is that written down measter?'

'Yes,' replied the lawyer; 'but she's not so old; she may marry again. Won't you make any change in that case? Most people do.'

'Ah, do they? said the farmer. 'Well write again, and say, 'If my wife marries again I give and bequeath to her the sum of two hundred pounds a year.' That'll do won't it, measter?'

'Why, it's just doubling the sum she remained unmarried; the legacy is lessened if the widow marries again.

'Ay!' said the farmer; 'but him as gets he'll deserve it.'

Catechising.

The follows is told of Bishop E——— of Massachusetts:

Visiting one of the churches of his diocese, he requested that the children of the Sunday School should be assembled to be catechised. The good bishop put this question rather suddenly to the little boy who stood trembling at the head of his class, 'Who made the world?'

The little fellow, with quavering voice, replied, 'I did'nt.'

The bishop, astonished at the answer, demanded, 'What do you mean, you bad boy?'

Still more frightened, the lad replied, 'I—I—did—I—won't—do—it—again!'

A Connecticut fisherman one day baited his hook with a live frog. After waiting some time for a bite as he chatted with a friend, he found that his lively bait had swam ashore, and was sitting quietly on the rock by his side. He wound up his line and went home.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAR. 14, 1872.

The Hon. Schuyler Colfax pretends to be a patriot and a Christian but when he compares Christ with Washington, his patriotism would seem to be getting the better of his Christianity. The birthday of the venerated Father of the Country should not be placed in the same category with the birthday of Him who is adored by the Christian world as the Divine Savior of the human race. When Mr. Colfax gave expression to such a sentiment, he probably forgot that he was preaching to a Young Men's Cristian Association.

It seems as if there was to be no end to the exposures of corruption existing under the present Administration.—The Cincinnati Comercial says that Secretary Boutwell was notified six months ago that there was a Whisky Ring in New Orleans in which United States officials must be implicated, and that the proofs that there were important frauds in that city were laid before him. Yet nothing has been done in the matter. Affairs have come to a pretty pass when the influence of Government is exerted to protect the men engaged in frauds upon the Treasury, to the destruction of the business interests of honest men who pay their taxes and conform to the laws.

The Philadelphia Press, which may now be deemed good authority in regard to the views of the Administration, says that the official course of Collector Casey and United States Marshal Packard of Louisiana meets, with the entire approval of the President. Nobody of ordinary sense has never doubted that the villainies of these men, including the outrage of attempting to control the action of a Republican party Convention by the of United States troops and Gatling guns, met with the approbation of the President, even if they were not performed under his direct instructions; but it was hardly to be expected that even Grant would have the hardihood to avow his satisfaction at proceedings so infamous, and so radically opposed to the spirit of American institutions.

When a jornalistic scalawag assails us, we exercise our own pleasure about noticing his filthy productions. A very dirty dog in the editorial harness—one who sells his 'influence' for fifteen dollars—we hardly ever design to notice at all.—Ligonier Banner.

Whew! aint our cat got a long tail. Wonder who Johnny is driving at now. But private-letter-publishing Johnny has said nothing in answer to McDonald's card, nor our chalenge. He assumes offended dignity, but it will not serve his purpose. He may ignore us, but he can't ignore the people. Now Johnny, come out of the miserable little rat hole, in which you have taken refuge, after your shameful conduct, and respond to the demands of the people. We know that it will be humiliating, but if you are a Democrat at heart, you'll not shrink from the duty. Your hiring Republicans to advocate your cause wont help you. You may try to evade this duty, but it must be promptly discharged to escape the odium and obliquity that will be justly meted and to you.

Out of the six Governors of reconstructed Southern States who have been specially conspicious for their devotion to the interest of Grant, one, Holden of North Carolina, has been impeached and deposed from office for fraud and corruption; another, Scott of South Carolina, is denounced by the decent men of his own party for his unblushing thievery, and is notoriously an insatiate plunderer; another, Bullock of Georgia, was obliged to flee from the state to avoid the penitentiary; another, Clayton of Arkansas is, now in the United States Senate but will be expelled for fraud unless his friend Grant saves him, as he did from prosecution in the courts of Arcansas by a scandalous use of executive authority; another, Reed of Florida, has been impeached for fraud, bribery, stealing, and conspiracy; and the other, Davis of Texas, has been indicted by a Republican Grand Jury of a United States Court for issuing a fraudulent certificate of election to a member of Congress. All of these gentlemen believe that there will be no safety in the South for such men as they unless Grant is reelected, and we trust they are right.

In June next the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will open the direct line from Washington to the Point of rocks, there connecting with the main stem and reducing the Pittsburg and Cincinnati two or three hours and avoiding all changes and transfers.—This piece of road, though only forty-two miles long, was estimated to cost $2,600,000, and one single mile upon it, near the mouth of the Moneacy river, has already cost $300,000. The country between Washington and Harper's Ferry consists of a series of bold, almost mountainous hills, which are crossed transversely by streams emptying into the Potomac, and the road is to leap every stream on high and costly bridge, and then plunge immediately into a heavy rock tunnel. In one place 100,000 cubic yards of rock and earth had to be moved—Some of the cuts are fifty feet deep, and many of the embankments sixty feet high. The cuts are only eighteen feet wide at the bottom, and only ten men can work in each end of the cut—in some cases progressing no more than twenty twenty five feet in one month.

Reduction of the Public Debt a Swindle.

The New York World of Monday last contains a very elaborate review of the national finances, from an intelligent correspondent, who shows by the figures that the statements of Mr. Secretary Boutwell in regard to the reduction of the public debt are shams and delusions. The writer states and demonstrates that the interest on the public debt has only decreased five millions in two years and that the principal of the debt is but $39,666,255 less than it was in 1868. Here are the figures: On the first day of July 1868, the debt of the United States, less cash in the Treasury, was $2,915,192 00 and on the first day of July, 1871 the debt of the United States, less cash in the Treasury, was $2,496,253,937 00. We reproduce these figures in brief;

Debt July 1, 1868..	$2,508,915,192 00
Debt July 1, 1872..	$2,469,253,937 00
Total..	$29,661,255 00

And yet with these figures staring Mr. Boutwell in the face, and they are figures that all his cyphering can not explain away the Administration boasts that the public debt has been reduced nerly three hundred millions since the incoming of President Grant but the facts show that the debt has been reduced only a little over thirty-nine millions. If the debts is not reduced and the taxes not decreased and the revenues are not diminished, what become of the vast sums of money that are taken from the taxpayers by taxation? The people will never know the true condition of the public finances as long as the present party is continued in power. Every thing is now covered up and concealed that can be, and it is only by an occasional explosion, an occasional but accidental developement of fraud and robbery by some public official, that the people are made acquainted with the dishonesty the fraud and the thieving that prevails in every department of the Government. It is high time there should be a change, for no other reason than to let sunlight into the dark ways of the present administration and expose the stealings that have been going on since Mach 4, 1861.

John Hook and Oliver Morton.

Senator Trumbull, in his speech in reply to Mr. Morton during the debate on Mr. Sumner's resolution for an inquiry into the sale of arms to France, hit off Morton's reiterated appeals to party whenever it is proposed to investigate the corruptions of Gran't Administration, by the following caustic reference to a well remembered revolutionary incident:

'This cry of party! party! upon all occassions to prevent investigation and the exposure of abuses rewinds me (said Mr. Trumbull), of what was said by Patrick Henry of one John Hook, who brought suit to recover pay for a couple of steers taken by the commissiary of the revolutionary army of famishing soldiers who were exposed to the weather and hard pressed, and whom any man with a patriotic heart in his bosom would have rejoiced at an opportunity to have fed and card for: but Hook followed up the army, demanding pay for his steers, and is described by Henry as he appeared at Yorktown, when Cornwallis, with the last British army, marched out of his intrenchments and surrendered to the American forces. On that occasion says Henry:

'Triumph lighted up every patriot face, and the shouts of victory and the cry of 'Washington and liberty' were heard as they rung and echoed through the American ranks, and were reverbated from the hills and shores of the neighboring river. But hark! what notes of discord are these which disturb the general joy and silence the acclamations of victory? They are the notes of John Hook, hoarsely bawling through the American camp, beef! beef! beef!' [Laughter.]

'And so, sir, when the country is reeking with corruption, and an investigation is proposed to ascertain whether it exists among Govenment officials, we are met with the cry of party! party! party! and that is the speech heard from the Senator from Indiana in opposition to every inquiry,'

Mr Trumbull closed his eleborate defence of the Liberal Republicans and their doctrines in these emphatic words 'The principles enunciated in the Missouri platform denounced by the Senator from Indiana as anti-Republican party has won all its triumphs, and which will go down to posteriety upon the annals of the furture history of the country as constituting its proudest record. They are the principles for which I have always contended; and, God helping me, they are the principles for which I shall contend to the end.

Senator Trumbull and the Cincinnati Convention.

Senator Morton, of Indiana came into the Republican party at a late day and was an Andy Johnsonite down to about the period when that worthy went swinging around the circle. He then changed front, and became a Radical of the extremest sort. By dint of favoring the most lenient policy toward the South at one time, and the most vindictive policy at another, he has mainly engineered his own State into the Democratic column; and if it is engineered back into the Republican column next October, it will be by the efforts of more prudent men than himself. He is a strong man, and undoubtedly means well by the party, and fancies that the course which has weakened it in Indiana will strengthen it every where else In this we think he is mistaken

Senator Trumbull was one of the founders and builders of the Republican party. He voted and acted with the antislavery men two years before the Republican party was organized, and had grown gray in the service before Mr. Morton's banner was seen in that holy cause. During the past eighteen years he has been the most conspicuous champion in Congress of the party of freedom, from the Mississippi Valley, and the equal of any man who has sat in the Senate during that eventful period, whether as regards intellectual ability, fidelity to principle, personal purity, or gentlemanly demeanor. His course has been such as to give increased strength to the Republican party in Illinois. It is not necessary for him or his friends to talk about redeeming their State in the coming election, for it has not been allowed to pass into the hands of the enemy.

In the debate in the State, on Friday, Mr. Morton thought he was entitled to arraign Mr. Trumbull for lack of the party fealty, in that Mr. Trumbull had favored the investigation, of certain transactions, to wit: the sale of arms to France during her late war with Germany, and the New York Custom House—both of which investigations Mr. Morton had opposed until public sentiment caused him to shift his course. The discussion ran into the subject of the proposed Cincinnati Convention, which Convention Mr. Trumbull defended as a proper and lawful meeting of such persons as might choose to assemble there. He stated, however, that he did not believe that any nominations would be made by that assemblage for President or Vice President of the United States. To which Mr. Morton retorted that the evident design of the Cincinnati Convention was to nominate a Presidential ticket with B. Gratz Brown or Senator Trumbull at its head, and that Mr. Trumbull was probably privy to it.

As Senator Trumbull's veracity has never been called in question, and cannot be put at hazard by so slight an assault as the surmises of Senator Morton, his statement that he has no knowledge of my plan to nominate himself, or anybody else, at Cincinnati, will be accepted as entirely truthful. We are among those who would like to see some statesmen of Mr. Trumbull's experience and dignity elevated to the Presidency, but we have never been let into the mighty secret which Senator Morton has smelled out. Nor have we ever supposed that the Cincinnati Convention was called for the purpose of nominating a Presidential ticket.—What, then, was it called for?—For the purpose of promoting the reforms recited in the call, to-wit: Civil Service reform, amnesty, noninterference in State affairs, etc.'—some of which President Grant has favored, but which he cannot or does not bring his principal adherents in Congress to support. Those who favor these reforms, those who believe that the Republican party cannot win new battles on old issues and historical reminiscences merely, are in earest, and do not intend to be browbeaten by eleventh-hour converts to Republicanism, or to be swerved from their convictions by party lash. The party consists of the people of the United States, or a majoriety of them. To them alone are Senators Tramboll Shurz, Sumner, Logan, Fenton, Patterson, Ferry, Tipton, etc., answerable. It will be time enough for Senator Morton to arraign them when he can show that a majoriety of the people of his own State agree with him.—Chicago Tribune.

The Anderson Herald, of Saturday last, reports a terrible murder near Chesterfield, in Madison county and gives some particulars. It seems that a young lady named Williamson, 18 or 19 years of age, was engaged to a young man named Landry, to which her father objected. She left home with her intended husband on the 28th ult., and went to the house of a friend where the wedding was to take place. Her father followed in the evening, and tried to persuade her to give up her intentions. She refused, and the interview between the father and daughter was extremely violent, but upon other parties interfering ceased, and all returned to rest. The next morning, while Mr. Remsburg, at whose house father and daughter were staying was out at the barn, Williamson seated himself at his daughter's bedside (she being yet in bed), and engaged her in a quiet conversation, and finally asked her if she was still determined to marry Mr. Landry, when she replied, 'Yes, if I have to wade in blood up to my knees; upon which he drew a large sized pocket knif and stabbed her twice, once in the arm and once in the throat, penetrating the windpipe, from the effects, of which she died in a few minutes. Williamson remained at his daughter's bedside long enough to be assured that his victim were fully executed, when he rushed from the house, and when he had gained the yard he drew his revolver and shot himself, once in the throat and once in the forehead. The shot which took effect in the center of the forehead is not dangerous, as it glanced on the skull, following the bone beneath the scalp to the top of the head, where it was eaisly extracted. The other wound is more serious, it being in the neighborhood of the windpipe, and the ball had not been found up to last night. The physician thinks he will recover with proper care.

The Republican National Executive Committee have imported one Gen. C. H. Porter, a carpet-bag Congressman from Virginia, into New Hampshire to make campaign speeches for the Republicans. In 1864 Gen. Porter was tried by court-matrial in Norfolk and sentenced to one month's imprisonment in a jail, which finding and sentence were approved by Gen. B. F. Butler for using contemptous language toward the President and Congress of the United States. 'This Government,' said he, 'is all a G—d d—n humbug from beginning to end, and if you could have seen what I did in Washington you would say so. Abraham Lincoln is doing everything he can for his re-election. If Abraham Lincoln allows the military authorities to go on as it is here I would rather live under Jefferson Davis's government that this.' Gen. Porter is the proper person to denounce the New Hampshire Democracy and instruct the people thereof in their political duties.

The Chicago Air Line Railway.

The Indianapolis Sentinel says: Articles of association of the New York and Chicago Air Line Railway Company were filed with the Secretary of State yesterday. The company has for its objects the building, maintaining and operating of a railroad from a point on the dividing line between the States of Indiana and Illinois, in or near township 37 north, range 10 west, in the country of Lake, Indiana, and passing thence eastward, through, into, or near the counties of Lake, Porter, Laporte, Stark, St. Joseph, Marshall, Elkhart, Kosciusko, Noble, Allen, and DeKalb to the dividing line between the States of Indiana and Ohio, at or near where the dividing line between the counties of DeKalb and Allen, Indiana, strikes the State of Ohio. The road is estimated about 160 miles in length. The capital stock is placed at $4,000,000, divided into shares of $50 each. The following are named as a Board of Directors for the first years:

Abner Taylor, Chicago, Illinois; Thomas Snell and James Aiken, Mendota, Illinois, Lee A. Hall, Clarksville, Missouri, and John C. Prescott, Indianapolis, Indiana.

The articles are signed by subscribers to the capital stock of the company as follows;

Lee A. Hall, Clarksville, Mo., 100 Shares; Abner Taylor, Chicago, Ill. 200 Thomas Snell, Clinton, Ill, 200 John T. Salter, Chicago, Ill., 100 James T. Snell, Clinton, Ill., 50 G. W. Turner. Peoria, Ill., 50 L. Weldon. Bloomington, Ill., 50 N. Dixon, Bloomington, Ill., 50 B. B. Campbell, Monroe, Mich., 100 J. C. Prescott, Indianapolis, Ind., 100 James DeLand, Clinton, Ill., 50 Lenoard Sweet, Chicago, Ill., 50 James Aiken, Mendota, Ill., 200 J. C. Mitchell, Chicago, Ill., 50 J. B. Shepard, Chicago, Ill., 50 Making a total subscription of 1,400 shares, of $70,000.

A New Eastern Connection.

One of the railroads that are now seeking admisson to this city is the Chicago and Canada Southern. It is not proposed to discuss the pending ordiance granting it the right of way; but to consider the merits of the project as affording a new line of communication with the eastern sea-coast.—The presumption is that all of these roads will eventually be admitted on practicable terms; for it is by an intelligent liberality in these matters that Chicago has gained its place as a railroad center, and it can only hope to retain its position by a like spirit.

With respect to the necessity that exists for an additional route to the east, it is beieved that there can be no doubts. The facts is noteworthy that all the lines which have come into this city for years past have been westerly, or, at least, not easterly connections.—Thus it happens that we have lines from the north, northwest, west and south, converging at this city, with no commensurate increase in the facilities for transporting their freight to the east. It is not claimed that every road from any other direction calls for another eastern connection; but, on the other hand, it is extravagant to pretend that the supply of means of transportation that was not excessive ten years ago, is now adequate to meet the vast increase in the demand.

But the importance of a new independent line of road from Chicago to New York is most forcibly demonstrated by the experience of merceants and shippers. It is no reflection upon the management of existing lines to say that business has suffered very considerably, especiably within the last few months, from their lack of capacity. The shipment of cattle from the stockyards, was for a time almost embargoed on this account, and is still seriously delayed. The loss that is thus visited upon dealers, and the depression and stagnation which it causes in the market, are very serious. In many cases, parties holding stock have been obliged to wait ten days before they could secure cars to send it forward, and the effect of such an understood. The same state of things exists in a greater or less degree with respect to other branches of business that are dependent upon the facilities for eastward transportation, and this, too, notwithstanding the railroad managers are employing their utmost engeries in behalf of the business men of this city.

In the matter of westward freights, the necessity for additional means of transportation is even more clamorous. Our merchants have had great difficulty in securing sufficient stock of goods to supply their trade, while there has been and is a congestion of merchandise for this city on all the various routes from New York to the west—These delays have recently been very annoying, and the only hope of effective and permanent relief lies in one or more additional routes.

No reference have been made in the above to the effect which a new and competing line might have upon the tariff of freight, though this is doubtless a very important aspect of the question. What it has been sought to show is that an additional line from New York to Chicago cannot fail to be abundantly remunerative as an investment for capitalist, and of every great advantage to business interests of this city.—Chicago Tmes.

WASHINGTON TEETERS, Ex'r,

MANHOOD,

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Auditor's Notice.

STATE OF INDIANA, DeKalb County. }

NOTICE is hereby given that whereas Wyllys Griswold and Abigail Griswold on the 30th day of March A. D. 1857, made a mortgage to the State of Indiana, for the use of the congressional school fund, on the following real estate in DeKalb County, Indiana, to-wit: The fourteen acres of land in the middle part of the west half of the west half of the north west quarter of section thirty-two [32], township thirty-four [34 north, range thirteen east—to secure the payment of one hundred dollars with interest at the rate of seven per cent per annum, payable in advance, according to the condition of a note accompanying said mortgage made by said Wyllys Griswold whereby he promised to pay to the State of Indiana, on the 30th day of March A. D. 1863, the sum of one hundred dollars, with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable in advance commencing on the 30th day of March A. D. 1857, and whereas there was forty dollars and twenty-five cents interest due on said mortgage on the first day of January 1872, and said parties have failed to pay the interest thereon and by reason thereof the principal of said note and mortgage has become due.

Now I, William McIntyre, Auditor, of DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, hereby give notice that on the 25th day of March, the same being the 4th Monday of said month A. D. 1872, at the Court House door, in the town of Auburn, in said county and State, I will offer for sale between the hours of 10 o'clock a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m. said premises or so much thereof, in a square form as near as possible off the north-westerly corner of said tract, as may be necessary to satisfy the principal, interest and 2 per cent. damages and cost, amounting in the aggregate to $154.69.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

Concert to-morrow night.

SLATES.—Big ones for little money, at Davenport & Cos.

The [illegible] machine out is one for mending stockings.

Don't forget the concert to-morrow night.

Boys are very noisy on the streets. Better [illegible]

The wood market has been pretty well supplied this week.

Are you going to the Concert?

Bill Burnsaw has [illegible] the other day, and sensations of unutterable joy prevailed over him.

School and Blank Books, Wall and Window paper. Splendid lot at Davenport & Co.

We learn that the wife of Hon. T. Y. Dickinson, of Waterloo, died last Tuesday morning.

Some men never read a newspaper, and are fond of saying so with evident delight and gusto; but let an item slip in uncomplimentary to them, and the way they swear is terrible to hear.

Young men, who have been honored with invitations to leap year parties, express themselves anxious to have social gatherers conducted henceforth and forever on the leap year plan.

Prof Straub will sing at the Concert to-morrow evening.

Remember that Davenport & Co. have received their spring stock of wall and window paper. They have the largest stock ever brought to Auburn, at the Pioneer Drug Store.

A conductor of a freight train on the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, fell from the train at LaGrange on Monday afternoon, and was so badly injured that he died on Tuesday morning.

Our best local talent will participate in the Concert to-morrow night.

T. B. Totten has sold out to a Mr. Martin, Portage County, Ohio. The poultry business was too heavy for T. B. If you ask him he can tell you all about it. The new proprietors will take possession in a few days.

The Household, for March, is before us full of those handsome dress paterns, which the ladies so much admire. This is without doubt the best fashion magazine published, and those who do not take it should send for a sample and convince themselves of its superority in this respect.

If you want to enjoy yourself go to the Concert to-morrow, Friday, evening.

BUILDING MEETING.

Another meeting will be held at the Court House in the interest of the Building Loan Association, at which time a discussion will take place as to the merits of the institution. Subscriptions to stock will also be taken, and we hope a large number will be in attendance.

Remember the Concert Friday evening, at the Court House.

Judge Clapp has returned to Albion with a promise from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company that the Extension shall be built on the south line if right of way and depot grounds are furnished by the citizens on route. These terms are so liberal, that there is little doubt of the location of the road through Albion, if work be commenced in April.—La Grange Standard.

A WORK OF MERCY.—$150,000,00 in 3000 cash prizes is to distributed legally, March 28th, 1872, at Omaha, in aid of the sick, and destitute, at Mercy Hospital.—This enterprise is endorsed by the Govenor and best business men of Nebraska.—The Tickets are $3 each or two for $5—For full particulars, address. Pattee & Gardiner, Business Managers, Omaha, Neb.

ONE of our juveniles is determined to [illegible] the paper bear his last production entitled The Cow:

A cow gives milk, beafsteak, liver, suet and skin. Its tong is good to eat, its horns is good for makeing buttons, its hair is for morter. The feet is made of glue. It can kick, toss, bellow and run.

It eats hay, Wild Oats, grass, and corn husks & apples. When it comes out of the pasture it watches close, bellows & walks slow. When it is getting milked it tosses its tale about and it comes out of the cow warm. It keeps eating when it is getting milked, and that's all about the cow.

ONE would not at first thought, suppose that it would make much difference to the general public whether houses were kept neatly painted or not. But it does effect everybody in a community. Go into a town of unpainted houses, and a scene of ruin, poverty and played-outedness at once overtakes you. A well painted town conveys an idea of thrift, neatness and prosperity that at once attracts attention. People speak well of such towns. They do not fail to condemn an unpainted one.—Val. Messenger.

THIS is a feature in a town that most of our citizens appreciate. There are a few that can't appreciate anything but money, and consequently have not painted up their property.

A terrible tragedy occurred near Daleville, a short distance from Muncie on the afternoon of the 29th ult. A young woman named Williamson, daughter of Willis Williamson, went to the residence of a Mr. Remsburg, on Wednesday, and was to have been married to a young man named Landry the next day. She was followed by her father who tried to dissuade her from marrying Landry, but without avail. He then returned and on Thursday morning again asked her to give up her lover. This she emphatically refused to do, when he stabbed her twice, killing her instantly. He then drew a small revolver and shot himself twice, but at last accounts was still alive, and most likely to recover.

LEAP year has not been cultivated much; old maidens, why gnash [illegible]? The strong gender are multitudinous. They are as the sand on the shore; 'they are waiting, they are waiting!' "As the lark is up to meet the sun," so should you meet the son. "As the bee is on the wing," so should you be hunting a son-in-law for your parents. Old Pro. Crastination is the theif of time.

GRAND CONCERT.

To-morrow (Friday) night, a grand concert will be given at the Court House, by Prof. Straub's Convention of one hundred singers. To judge from the rehearsals this will certainly be the finest musical entertainment ever given in this place. Our friends from the country who would like to hear something in this line of a first class character, should not fail to attend Our friends of Waterloo, Butler, and other places are expected to be present.

Auburn Academy.

The Spring term of this institution will commence on next Monday. There has been some little change in the corps of teachers, Mr. Houser going out. Mr. M. F. Long, of this place, is to fill the vacancy. There will be but one lady teacher, Miss. Hull, during this term. Prof. McIntosh enters upon the term with renewed vigor, after the short respite from his labors during vacation, and we doubt not but that it will prove an interesting and important one to all who attend.

MAN KILLED.—We learn that a brakeman, by the name of Brown, was killed on the Air Line Road, last Sunday morning. His body was discovered at the bridge about a half mile east of Waterloo, and the exact manner in which he came to his death is not known. Some think that he came in contact with the bridge and was either instantly killed or knocked between the cars and run over. His absence was not discovered until the train got to Edgerton, when the trainmen telegraped back to Waterloo, to the agent, who took a hand car and proceeded east in search, when the remains were discovered as above stated. Several trains had passed soon after this one, and his body was fearfully mangled and bruised. His father is the Station agent at Edgerton, Ohio.

ANOTHER CHANGE.—We understand that Nathan Tarney, our popular miller, has sold his mill to a gentleman from Ohio.—There are a good many business changes taking place in this place. All can see that Auburn is going to be an excellent point for business, and many will take advantage of time by coming in early to secure a good location.

We want a few more manufactories, such as a foundry, hub and spoke factory, and many other lesser institutions that could certainly flourish here, and bring in a good revenue.

During the next year several important features will be made to the place. Such as a large three story brick block, a public hall, a brick hotel, and unnumerable dwellings, and to this we want to add a number of large and small manufactories. The prospects for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad has given a new impetus to business here, and we hope that it will still increase until we have a county seat that will be in harmony with the excellent county we live in.

REWARD.—Our excellent old friend, Dennis Laningham, Esq., brought us a good load of wood on Thursday last, as a reward for publishing the COURIER for one year. It seems that he had lost confidence in publishers in this county, and had made a vow to his wife one day that the first man who would publish a paper in Auburn for twelve consecutive months, should receive from him a load of wood as a donation. His good lady reminded him of the promise the other day, and the wood came as above stated. Now, all we've got to say is, if there are any more like Mr. L., we want them to come down as handsomely as he did. We have started on our second twelve months, and we are grateful to our farmer friends as well as our town people for many acts of kindness and esteem. Mr. L. thinks the COURIER the best paper ever published in the county, but we can make many improvements if we are but sustained and supported by those who ought to take a county paper. There are hundreds that are not doing this, and now we want your assistance, if it is but two dollars a year, to help us accomplish this result.

For the information of the public, and in the interest of our own personal convenience, we desire to state, that on Monday and Tuesday of each week all of one time is occupied by the performance of editorial duties. It is utterly impossible for us to give visitors that attention we would otherwise bestow upon them when favoring us with a call. We are always pleased to see our friends, but they must not take it unkindly if they do not find us as talkative on those days as is generally the case after the forms have gone to press and the paper is ready for distribution.—Ligonier Banner.

OUR friends are welcome.—Val. Messenger.

HERE to. We never expect to put on so much dignity and style, but that we can say a word to a visitor and especially our patrons. Therefore we give you a general invitation to come and see us at any time and on all occasions.

WE hardly need invite attention to the new advertisement of Messrs. Root & Co., of Fort Wayne—it speaks for itself. This firm is noted in all the 'Wabash country,' and a long way beyond it, for their liberal use of printer's ink. They have a faith in its efficacy which their crowded salesrooms abundantly prove to be not unfounded. They have established a reputation all over this section, and the 'New York Store' is known to everybody and in every nook and corner. The same liberality they display in advertising their business, is carried into every department of their immense establishment. Their stock is always full, and their shelves are always loaded with fresh and seasonable goods. The members of the firm are honorable, enterprising gentlemen—'live business men' in the best and broadest sense. Read their advertisement carefully.

'You are beautiful, and I adore you, said a gentleman to the belle of the evening. 'You are frightful and I hate you, was the response. 'That's right, my dear, stick to the truth, and don't get in the habit of complimentary lies, as I have.'

Communicated.

MR. EDITOR:—Since Messrs. Aikey and Hall visited our place, in the interest of the Chicago & New York, Air Line R. R., I find quite a diversity of opinion in regard to the purposes of the Baltimore & O. R. R. Co.

As I understand, the difference of the demands of each, are about equal—the former asking two per cent of the taxables of our county, the other the right of way—the two items being about the same.

Now, as we paid for survey from Tiffin to Defiance which has become our property, and are asking the right of way between the same points that is under our control, which survey and right of way we can turn over to which ever company we please. Of course it will be passed over to the one that will build the road first. I think under the circumstances our people out to treat the agents of both companies with the utmost courtesy, refrain from expressing any opinion at to the comparative merits and afford every encouragement possible to each. We need at least one of the roads, and both would be of great benefit to us, one or the other of Companies will certainly build the road Therefore let us be discreet and thereby secure the building of the road by one or the other of the companies. D.

TAXPAYERS should remember that Saturday, April 20th, is the last day they have to pay taxes without the penalty attached

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT.—The Ft. Wayne Sentinel came to us last week dommed with a spanking new dress, and a beautified brand splinter new head. It done our heart good to see our old favorite getting out of the slough of stern necessities, and rise to the position she has so long deserved. The present proprietors mean business. Mr. Fleming is no sooner firmly settled in his new position, than a change is effected,—old things are done away with, and a grand re-construction takes place until the faithful Sentinel rings forth her warnings, in clear beautiful words and the amsmogrification is complete. The sterling qualities, and the great business energy of the new proprietor has spoken, and this together with the immense popularity and fine literary accomplishments of Mr. Dumm, have placed the Sentinel away up in the scale of ability and excellence, until now its friends gladly acknowledge it as the best in the State. We are glad to note this, and trust that the change will be a synonym for a substantial financial success.

Those Oysters.

MR. EDITOR:—An interesting episode took place here one day last week which somewhat ruffled the heretofore calm waters of Life Insurance business. A gentleman by the name of E. D. Carey, representing the National Co-operative Insurance Co., of Chicago, and Mr. James Griswold, of this place, agent for the Connecticut Mutual, got up an animated discussion at Stahl's shop. Mr. Carey made his statement relative to the co-operative plan, giving facts and figures which somewhat ruffled our usually, even tempered friend, James, who responded by calling Mr. C. a liar and and a fool. I am pleased to mention, however, that Mr. Carey acted the gentleman by replying courteously, thereby showing his respect for old age. Finally Mr. G. claimed that the dividends on a life policy would cancel the premiums and leave his policy self-sustaining, in from sixteen to twenty years, and as a proof of this, he said that he had a policy that was now, self-supporting, that his dividend were larger than his premiums. Mr. C. differed with him in this opinion, and again was subjected to those epithets, but not making them he made the proposition that if Mr. G. had told the truth relative to his own policy, he, Mr. C. would pay for the oysters, if he had not told the truth, then Mr. G. was to liquidate all claims for bivalbes. This was agreed to. A jury was appointed, consisting of Mr. Yandes, Dr. Knorr, J. A. Porter, C. C. Shaffer and L. Bowers.—Mr. Griswold instructed these gentlemen to base their decision on the policy which he held, handed the policy and papers to these gentlemen to all of which Mr. Carey agreed.

The committee retired to the post office building, examined the police and papers which Mr. C. said would prove what he claimed; if they did not he would pay for an oyster supper.

The committee returned and reported that Mr. G. was wrong, not only did the policy and papers prove that he was wrong, but they proved the absence of what he had said and desired him to prove.

The oysters have not put in an appearace as yet, but all are looking forward with the livliest anticipations, and it is thought that as they have been so long coming, they will taste good when they do arrive. INSURANCE.

HOW TO GET WORK DONE ON A FARM.—Every farmer is at times oppressed with a a sense of an overwhelming number of things that require to be done. We have a nervous man in such circumstances commence one job and before he had got fairly started, abandon it, for something that seemed more pressing, merely to leave this in that same unfinished state; and when night came he had accomplished little or nothing, and passed home to sing on a sleepless bed think what he should do on the morrow. A young famer could not adopt a better rule than to repeat to himself every morning: 'Whatsoever thy hand finds to do, do it with thy might.'—And act on it. When a job is commenced finish it before beginning another, but at the same time attend to the little things. But if you happen to get behind, strike a lively gait, do one thing at a time, when it is done, take a little rest by immediately commencing another, and in this way you will pull through in good time.

WHITNEY'S Musical Guest for March is a model number. Mr. Whitney gives us, in the leading article, a very interesting description of his adventures 'Down the Mississippi,' through New Orleans and Havana. There is also an abundance of new music in this number. 'Our Home over There' is a very good song, and the quarette, 'Welcome to Spring' is pretty and appropriate. Then we have a sacred hymn, two four part glees, two Sabbath School choruses, a beautiful march by L. Mathias, and 'Sylvan Waltz,' by Frank M. Davis. The Guest is only $1,00 per year, Address. W. W. WHITNEY, 'Palace of Music,' Toledo, O.

COMMISSIONERS' PROCEEDINGS.

The Board of Commissioners of DeKalb County, Ind., met in pursuance of law at the Auditor's office on March 4th, 1872.—Present, Daniel Gosser, George Ensley and Wm. Richmond.

PETITIONS.

A petition by Philip Gushwa, for bridge on road leading north from Corunna, in Fairfield township. Daniel Gosser appointed to make such order as may be advisable in the matter.

Petition by Geo. S. West and others, for location of a road in Butler township, on lands owned by John Wells, J. R. Moody and Joseph Shryock. The Commissioners refused to appoint viewers because the petition was not signed by a requisite number of those living in the vicinity.

Petition by B. F. Cornelius and others to change road in Troy township, was dismissed for want of sufficient signers.

Petition by G. S. West and others for location of road in Butler township, on lands owned by Robert Work, Ira West, Wm. Wheazell. Viewers appointed, Ed. Kellam, Harris Rogers and John Zord.

Petition by J. J. Imhoff and other for vacation of private road in Stafford township. Viewers appointed B. F. Greenwood S. Wartenbee and J. Hendershot.

REPORTS.

The following report of the Grand Jury was received and accepted.

We, the Grand Jury, report that upon a personal examination and inspection of the County Jail, find the same in as good condition as a building of that character can be kept, but unfit to be used as a jail being unhealthy, badly ventilated and not susceptible of much improvement by repairing, and we reccommend that the Commissioners, of said county, take action at an early day with a view to the erection of a jail, suitable to the enlightenment of the age, and the wants of th county.

Viewers report unfavorably to change of road in Smithfield township, on lands owned by A. McCoy, T. McInterfer's heirs, T. G. Kissel, Lentz's heirs, John Campbell Chas Rempis, G. Schwatzer and Wm. Fee. Petition not granted.

Viewers report favorably for vacation of road in Butler township. Remoustrance entered by J. Shryock, Ira West, W. I. Work and J. A. Miller. Reviewers appointed, W. Teeters, Danl. Grogg and Danl. Swibart.

Viewers report for location of a road in Richland township, on lands owned by M. Kline, J. Kirkpatrick and Lucy Wrench Location approved and confirmed.

Viewers report unfavorably for a road in Wilmington township. Report confirmed.

The live stock on the farm now, consists of 3 horses, 1 colt, 7 cows, 13 head of young cattle, 30 head of sheep and 31 head of hogs.

The average number of inmates in the Assylum during the year was 20. There were 2 deaths, Daniel Brown, June 2nd, and Mary E. Flickinger, June 7.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and he having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation it justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine that mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ROTHSCHILD & BROS.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872.' We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, wool en goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed,' they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool casimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $15,00, custom made $16,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

Considerable travel enables us to say that there is nothing of a discouraging character in the appearance of the coming wheat crop. In some low spots, where the water has stood for some time; or elevated positions which have been bare of snow during the severest part of the season, the young plants are somewhat damaged; but in most other places they appear in good condition.—La Grange Standard.

LAMB—DEPEW.—At the M. E. Parsonage on the 10th inst., by Rev. A. W. Lamport, William N. Lamb, of Noble County, to Lucy E. Depew, of DeKalb County.

THOSE of our friends who expect to have work in the line of brick laying, plain and ornamental plastering, &c., &c., will advance their best interests by calling upon Mr. Thos. J. Jones, of Butler. He is a first-class mechanic, and works at fair prices. 4t

CALKINS' CHAMPION WASHER

PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

Is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver. Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers CALKINS BROS. & CO., [illegible] Canal St., Chicago, Illinois.

DON'T forget the concert to-morrow night.

BOYS are very noisy on the streets. Better [illegible]

THE wood market has been pretty well supplied this week.

ARE you going to the Concert?

BILL BURROWS has [illegible] the other day, and sensations of unutterable joy prevailed over him.

School and Blank Books, Wall and Window paper. Splendid lot at Davenport & Co.

WE learn that the wife of Hon. T. Y. Dickinson, of Waterloo, died last Tuesday morning.

SOME men never read a newspaper, and are fond of saying so with evident delight and gusto; but if an item slip in uncomplimentary to them, and the way they swear is terrible to hear.

Young men, who have been honored with invitations to leap year parties, express themselves anxious to have social matters conducted thenceforth and forever on the leap year plan.

Prof Straub will sing at the Concert to-morrow evening.

REMEMBER that Davenport & Co. have received their spring stock of wall and window paper. They have the largest stock ever brought to Auburn, at the Pioneer Drug Store.

A conductor of a freight train on the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, fell from the train at LaGrange on Monday afternoon, and was so badly injured that he died on Tuesday morning.

OUR best local talent will participate in the Concert to-morrow night.

T. B. TOTTEN has sold out to a Mr. Martin, Portage County, Ohio. The poultry business was too heavy for T. B. If you ask him he can tell you all about it. The new proprietors will take posession in a few days.

THE MODENWELT, for March, is before us full of those handsome dress paterns, which the ladies so much admire. This is without doubt the best fashion magazine published, and those who do not take it should send for a sample and convince themselves of its superority in this respect.

IF you want to enjoy yourself go to the Concert to-morrow, Friday, evening.

BUILDING MEETING.

Another meeting will be held at the Court House in the interest of the Building Loan Association, at which time a discussion will take place as to the merits of the institution. Subscriptions to stock will also be taken, and we hope a large number will be in attendance.

Remember the Concert Friday evening, at the Court House.

Judge Clapp has returned to Albion with the promise from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company that the Extension shall be built on the south line if right of way and depot grounds are furnished by the citizens on route. These terms are so liberal, that there is little doubt of the location of the road through Albion, [illegible] commenced in April.—La Grange Standard.

A WORK OF MERCY.—$150,000.00 in 3000 cash prizes is to distributed legally, March 28th, 1872, at Omaha, in aid of the sick, and destitute, at Mercy Hospital.—This enterprise is endorsed by the Govenor and best business men of Nebraska.—The Tickets are $3 each or two for $5—For full particulars, address. Pattee & Gardiner, Business Managers, Omaha, Neb.

ONE of our juveniles is determined to have the paper bear his last production entitled 'The Cow.'

A cow gives milk, beafsteak, liver, suet and skin. Its tong is good to eat, hits horns is good for makeing buttons, its hair is for morter. The feet is made of glue. It can kick, toss, bellow and run.

It eats hay, Wild Oats, grass, and corn husks & apples. When it comes out of the pasture it watches close, bellows & walks slow. When it is getting milked it tosses its tale about and it comes out of the cow warm. It keeps eating when it is getting milked, and that's all about the cow.

ONE would not at first thought, suppose that it would make much difference to the general public whether houses were kept neatly painted or not. But it does effect everybody in a community. Go into a town of unpainted houses, and a scene of ruin, poverty and played-outedness at once overtakes you. A well painted town conveys an idea of thrift, neatness and prosperity that at once attracts attention. People speak well of such towns. They do not fail to condemn an unpainted one.—Val. Messenger.

THIS is a feature in a town that most of our citizens appreciate. There are a few that can't appreciate anything but money, and consequently have not painted up their property.

A terrible tragedy occurred near Daleville, a short distance from Muncie, on the afternoon of the 29th ult. A young woman named Williamson, daughter of Willis Williamson, went to the residence of a Mr. Remsburg, on Wednesday, and was to have been married to a young man named Landry the next day. She was followed by her father who tried to dissuade her from marrying Landry, but without avail. He then returned and on Thursday morning again asked her to give up her lover. This she emphatically refused to do, when he stabbed her twice, killing her instantly. He then drew a small revolver and shot himself twice, but at last accounts was still alive, and most likely to recover.

LEAP year has not been cultivated much [illegible] old maids, why [illegible] strong gender are multitudinous. They are as the sand on the shore; 'they are waiting, they are waiting!' "As the lark is up to meet the sun," so should you meet the sun. "As the bee is on the wing," so should you be hunting a son-in-law for your parents. Old Pro. Crastination is the theif of time.

GRAND CONCERT.

To-morrow (Friday) night, a grand concert will be given at the Court House, by Prof. Straub's Convention of one hundred singers. To judge from the rehearsals this will certainly prove the finest musical entertainment ever given in this place. Our friends from the country who would like to hear something in this line of a first class character, should not fail to attend Our friends of Waterloo, Butler, and other places are expected to be present.

Auburn Academy.

The Spring term of this institution will commence on next Monday. There has been some little change in the corps of teachers, Mr. Houser going out. Mr. M. F. Long, of this place, is to fill the vacancy. There will be but one lady teacher, Miss. Hull, during this term. Prof. McIntosh enters upon the term with renewed vigor, after the short respite from his labors during vacation, and we doubt not but that it will prove an interesting and important one to all who attend.

MAN KILLED.—We learn that a brakeman, by the name of Brown, was killed on the Air Line Road, last Sunday morning. His body was discovered at the bridge about a half mile east of Waterloo, and the exact manner in which he came to his death is not known. Some think that he came in contact with the bridge and was either instantly killed or knocked between the cars and run over. His absence was not discovered until the train got to Edgerton, when the trainmen telegraped back to Waterloo, to the agent, who took a hand car and proceeded east in search, when the remains were discovered as above stated. Several trains had passed soon after this one, and his body was fearfully mangled and bruised. His father is the Station agent at Edgerton, Ohio.

ANOTHER CHANGE.—We understand that Nathan Tarney, our popular miller, has sold his mill to a gentleman from Ohio.—There are a good many business changes taking place in this place. All can see that Auburn is going to be an excellent point for business, and many will take advantage of time by coming in early to secure a good location.

We want a few more manufactories, such as a foundry, hub and spoke factory, and many other lesser institutions that could certainly flourish here, and bring in a good revenue.

During the next year several important features will be made to the place. Such as a large three story brick block, a public hall, a brick hotel, and unnumerable dwellings, and to this we want to add a number of large and small manufactories. The prospects for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad has given a new impetus to business here, and we hope that it will still increase until we have a county seat that will be in harmony with the excellent county we live in.

REWARD.—Our excellent old friend, Dennis Laningham, Esq., brought us a good load of wood on Thursday last, as a reward for publishing the COURIER for one year. It seems that he had lost confidence in publishers in this county, and had made a remark to his wife one day that the first man who would publish a paper in Auburn for twelve consecutive months, should receive from him a load of wood as a donation. His good lady reminded him of the promise the other day, and the wood came as above stated. Now all we've got to say is, if there are any more like Mr. L., we want them to come down as handsomely as he did. We have started on our second twelve months, and we are grateful to our farmer friends as well as our town people for many acts of kindness and esteem. Mr. L. thinks the COURIER the best paper ever published in the county, but we can make many improvements if we are but sustained and supported by those who ought to take a county paper. There are hundreds that are not doing this, and now we want your assistance, if it is but two dollars a year, to help us accomplish this result.

FOR the information of the public, and in the interest of our own personal convenience, we desire to state, that on Monday and Tuesday of each week all of our time is occupied by the performance of editorial duties. It is utterly impossible for us to give visitors that attention we would otherwise bestow upon them when favoring us with a call. We are always pleased to see our friends, but they must not take it unkindly if they do not find us as talkative on these days as is generally the case after the forms have gone to press and the paper is ready for distribution.—Ligonier Banner.

OUR friends are welcome.—Val. Messenger.

HERE to. We never expect to put on so much dignity and style, but that we can say a word to a visitor and especially our patrons. Therefore we give you a general invitation to come and see us at any time and on all occasions.

WE hardly need invite attention to the new advertisement of Messrs. Root & Co., of Fort Wayne—it speaks for itself. This firm is noted in all the 'Wabash country,' and a long way beyond it, for their liberal use of printer's ink. They have a faith in its efficacy which their crowded salesrooms abundantly prove to be not unfounded. They have established a reputation all over this section, and the 'New York Store' is known to everybody and in every nook and corner. The same liberality they display in advertising their business, is carried into every department of their immense establishment. Their stock is always full, and their shelves are always loaded with fresh and seasonable goods. The members of the firm are honorable, enterprising gentlemen—'live business men' in the best and broadest sense. Read their advertisement carefully.

'You are beautiful, and I adore you,' said a gentleman to the belle of the evening. 'You are frightful and I hate you, was the response. 'That's right, my dear, stick to the truth, and don't get in the habit of complimentary lies, as I have.'

MR. EDITOR:—Since Messrs. Aiken and Hall visited our place, in the interest of the Chicago & New York, Air Line R. R., I find quite a diversity of opinion in regard to the purposes of the Baltimore & O R. R. Co.

As I understand, the difference of the demands of each, are about equal—the former asking two per cent of the taxables of our county, the other the right of way—the two items being about the same.

Now, as we paid for [illegible] from Tiffin to Chicago which has become our property, and are asking right of way between the same points that is under our control, which survey and right of way we can turn over to which ever company we please. Of course it will be passed over to the one that will build the road first. I think under the circumstances our people out to treat the agents of both companies with the utmost courtesy, refrain from expressing any opinion at to the [illegible], and [illegible] give every encouragement possible to each. We need at least one of the roads, and both would be of great benefit to us, one or the other of Companies will certainly build the road Therefore let us be discreet and thereby secure the building of the road by one or the other of the companies. D.

TAXPAYERS should remember that Saturday, April 13th, is the last day they have to pay taxes without the penalty attached

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT.—The Ft. Wayne Sentinel came to us last week donned with a spanking new dress, and a beautified brand splinter new head. It done our heart good to see our old favorite getting out of the slough of stern necessities, and rise to the position she has so long deserved. The present proprietors means business. Mr. Fleming is no sooner firmly settled in his new position, than a change is effected,—old things are done away with, and a grand re-construction takes place until the faithful Sentinel rings forth her warnings, in clear beautiful words and the amusmogrification is complete. The sterling qualities, and the great business energy of the new proprietor has spoken, and this together with the immense popularity and fine literary accomplishments of Mr. Dumm, have placed the Sentinel away up in the scale of ability and excellence, until now its friends gladly acknowledge it as the best in the state. We are glad to note this, and trust that the change will be a synonym for a substantial financial success.

Those Oysters.

MR. EDITOR:—An interesting episode took place here one day last week which somewhat ruffled the heretofore calm waters of Life Insurance business. A gentleman by the name of E. D. Carey, representing the National Co-operative Insurance Co., of Chicago, and Mr. James Griswold, of this place, agent for the Connecticut Mutual, got up an animated discussion at Stall's shop. Mr. Carey made his statement relative to the co-operative plan, giving facts and figures which somewhat ruffled our usually, even tempered friend, James, who responded by calling Mr. C. a liar and and a fool. I am pleased to mention, however, that Mr. Carey acted the gentleman by replying courteously, thereby showing his respect for old age. Finally Mr. G. claimed that the dividends on a life policy would cancel the premiums and leave his policy self-sustaining, in from sixteen to twenty years, and as a proof of this, he said that he had a policy that was now, self-supporting, that his dividend were larger than his premiums. Mr. C. differed with him in this opinion, and again was subjected to those epithets, but not making them he made the proposition, that if Mr. G. had the proof to sustain his own policy, he, Mr. C. would pay for the oysters, if he had not told the truth, then Mr. G. was to liquidate all claims for bivalbes. This was agreed to. A jury was appointed, consisting of Mr. Yandes, Dr. Knorr, J. A. Porter, C. C. Shaffer and L. Bowers.—Mr. Griswold instructed these gentlemen to base their decision on the policy which he held, handed the policy and papers to these gentlemen to all of which Mr. Carey agreed.

The committee retired to the post office building, examined the police and papers which Mr. C, said would prove what he claimed; if they did not he would pay for an oyster supper.

The committee returned and reported that Mr. G. was wrong, not only did the policy and papers prove that he was wrong, but they proved the absence of what he had said and desired him to prove.

The oysters have not put in an appearace as yet, but all are looking forward with the livliest anticipations, and it is thought that as they have been so long coming, they will taste good when they do arrive. INSURANCE.

HOW TO GET WORK DONE ON A FARM.—Every farmer is at times oppressed with a sense of an overwhelming number of things that require to be done. We have a nervous man in such circumstances commence one job and before he had got fairly started, abandon it, for something that seemed more pressing, merely to leave this in that same unfinished state; and when night came he had accomplished little or nothing, and passed home to sing on a sleepless bed think what he should do on the morrow. A young famer could not adopt a better rule than to repeat to himself every morning: 'Whatsoever thy hand finds to do, do it with thy might.'—And act on it. When a job is commenced finish it before beginning another, but at the same time attend to the little things. But if you happen to get behind, strike a lively gait, do one thing at a time, when it is done, take a little rest by immediately commencing another, and in this way you will pull through in good time.

WHITNEY'S Musical Guest for March is a model number. Mr. Whitney gives us, in the leading article, a very interesting description of his adventures 'Down the Mississippi,' through New Orleans and Havana. There is also an abundance of new music in this number. 'Our Home over There' is a very good song, and the quartette, 'Welcome to Spring' is pretty and appropriate. Then we have a sacred hymn, two four part glees, two Sabbath School choruses, a beautiful march by L. Mathias, and 'Sylvan Waltz,' by Frank M. Davis. The Guest is only $1,00 per year, Address, W. W. COMMISSIONERS' PROCEEDINGS.

The Board of Commissioners of DeKalb County, Ind., met in pursuance of law at the Auditors office on March 4th, 1872.—Present, Daniel Gonser, George Ensley and Wm. Richmond.

PETITIONS.

A petition by Philip Gushwa, for bridge on road leading north from Corunna, in Fairfield township. Daniel Gonser appointed to make such order as may be advisable in the matter.

Petition by Geo. S. West and others, for location of a road in Butler township, on lands owned by [illegible] and Joseph Shryock. The Commissioners refused to appoint viewers because the petition was not signed by a requisite number of those living in the vicinity.

Petition by B. F. Cornelius and others to change road in Troy township, was dismissed for want of sufficient signers.

Petition by G. S. West and others for location of road in Butler township, on lands owned by Robert Work, Ira West Wm. Whetsell. Viewers appointed, Wm. Kellam, Harris Rogers and John Zord.

Petition by J. J. Imhoff and other for vacation of private road in Stafford township. Viewers appointed B. F. Greenwood S. Wartenbee and J. Hendershot.

REPORTS.

The following report of the Grand Jury was received and accepted.

We, the Grand Jury, report that upon a personal examination and inspection of the County Jail, find the same in as good condition as a building of that character can be kept, but unfit to be used as a jail being unhealthy, badly ventilated and not susceptible of much improvement by repairing, and we reccommend that the Commissioners, of said county, take action at an early day with a view to the erection of a jail, suitable to the enlightenment of the age, and the wants of th county.

Viewers report unfavorably to change of road in Smithfield township, on lands owned by A. McCoy, T. McInterfer's heirs, J. G. Kissel, Leonard's heirs, John Campbell Chas Rempis, G. Schwatzer and Wm. Fee. Petition not granted.

Viewers report favorably for vacation of road in Butler township. Remonstrance entered by J. Shryock, Ira West, W. I. Work and J. A. Miller. Reviewers appointed, W. Teeters, Danl. Grogg and Danl. Swihart.

Viewers report for location of a road in Richland township, on lands owned by M. Kline, J. Kirkpatrick and Lucy Wrench Location approved and confirmed.

Viewers report unfavorably for a road in Wilmington township. Report confirmed.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and he having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation is justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine the mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ROTHSCHILD & BROS.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872.' We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonshingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, wool en goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 80 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed,' they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool casimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $16,00, custom made $18,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

Considerable travel enables us to say that there is nothing of a discouraging character in the appearance of the coming wheat crop. In some low spots, where the water has stood for some time; or elevated positions which have been bare of snow during the severest part of the season, the young plants are somewhat damaged; but in most other places they appear in good condition.—LaGrange Standard.

LAMB—DEPEW.—At the M. E. Parsonage on the 10th inst., by Rev. A. W. Lamport, William N. Lamb, of Noble County, to Lucy E. Depew, of DeKalb County.

THOSE of our friends who expect to have work in the line of brick laying plain and ornamental plastering, &c., &c., will advance their best interests by calling upon MR. THOS. J. JONES, of Butler. He is a first-class mechanic and works at fair prices.

HOUSEHOLDERS CALL [illegible]—I have the celebrated Rhodehamel Scrubber and Carpet Stretcher; a first rate article for cleanin and mopping up floors, and putting down carpets. Call and get one. I am also agent, to supply merchants by the dozen at factory prices.

Mighty Sociable.

The following extract is from Mark Twain's new book, entitel 'Roughing It,' now in process of publication. It is an amusing illustration of a back settler's view of New York life.

In Nevada there use to be current in the story of an adventure of two of her nabobs, which may or may not have occurred. I give it for what it is worth:

Colonel Jim had seen somewhat of the world, and knew more or less of its way; but Colonel Jack was from the back settlements of the State, had led a life of arduous toil, and had never seen a city. These two, blessed with sudden wealth, projected a visit to New York City—Colonel Jack to see the sights, and Colonel Jim to guard his unsophistication from misfortune. They reached San Francisco in the night, and sailed in the morning Arriving in New York, Colonel Jack said:

'I've heard tell of carriages all my life and now I mean to have a ride in one; I don't care what it costs. Come along.'

They stepped out on the sidewalk, and Colonel Jim called a stylish barouch, but Colonel Jack said:

'No, sir! None of your cheap turnouts for me. I'm here to have a good time, and money ain't any object I mean to have the nobbyist rig that's going. Now here comes the very trick. Stop that yaller one with pictures on it—don't you fret—I'll stand all the expenses myself.'

So Colonel Jim stopped an empty omnibus and the two got in. Said Colonel Jack:

'Ain't it gay, though? Oh, no, I guess not! Cushions, and windows, pictures till you can't rest. What would the boys say if they could see us cutting a swell like this in New York? By George! I wish they could see us.'

Then he put his head out of the window, and shouted to the driver:

'Say, Johny, this suits me!—suits yours truly, you bet! I want this shebang all day. I'm on it, old man! Let 'em out! Make 'em go! We'll make it all right with you, sonny!'

The driver passed his hand through the strap-hole, and tapped for his fair—it was before the gongs came into the common use. Colonel Jack took the hand and shook it cordially. He said:

'You twig me, old pard! All right, between gents. Smell of that, and see how you like it.'

And he put a twenty dollar gold piece into the driver's hand. After a moment the driver said he couldn't make the change.

'Oh, bother the change! Ride it out. Put it in your pocket.'

The omnibus stopped, and a young lady got in. Colonel Jack started for a moment, and then nudged Colonel Jim with his elbow.

'Don't say a word,' he whispered. 'Let her ride, if she wants too. Gracious, there's room enough.'

The young lady got out her porte mounaie, and handed her fare to Colonel Jack.

'What's this for?' said he.

'Give it to the driver, please.'

'Take back your money, madame. We can't allow it. You're welcome to ride here as long as you please, but this shebang's charted; we can't allow you to pay a cent.'

The girl shrank into a corner bewildered. An old lady with a basket clambered in and proffered her fare.

'Excuse me,' said Colonel Jack. 'Your are perfectly welcome here, madame, but we can't allow you to pay. Set right down there, and don't be the least uneasy. Make yourself as free as if you was in your own turnout.

Within two minutes, three gentlemen, two fat women and a couple of children, entered.

'Come right along friends,' said Colonel Jack. 'Don't mind us. This is a free blow-out.'

Then he whispered to Colonel Jim: 'New York ain't sociable place, I don't reckon. It ain't no name for it!'

He resisted every effort to pass fares to the driver, and made everybody cordially welcome. The situation dawned upon the people, and they pocketed their money and delivered themselves up to covert enjoyment of the episode. Half a dozen more passengers entered.

'Oh, there is plenty of room,' said Colonel Jack. 'Walk right in and make yourselves at home. A blow out ain't worth anything as a blow-out, unless a body has company.' Then, in a whisper to Colonel Jim: 'But ain't these New Yorkers friendly? And ain't they cool about it, too? Icebergs ain't anywhere. I reckon they'd tackle a hearse, if it was going their way.

More passengers got in, more yet, and still more. But seats were full, and a file of men standing up holding on the cleats overhead. Parties with baskets and bundles were climbing up on the roof. Half suppressed laughter rippled up from all sides.

'Well, for clean cool, out and out check, if this don't bang anything that I every saw, I'm an Injun,' whispered Colonel Jack.

A Chinaman crowded his way in.

'I weaken,' said Colonel Jack. 'Hold on, driver! Keep your seats, ladies and gents. Just make yourselves free—everything's paid for. Driver, rustle these folks around just as long as they've a mind to go—friends of ours, you know. Take them everywhere; and if you want more money, come to the St. Nicholas, and we'll make it all right. Pleasant journey to you, ladies and gents; go it just as long as you please—it shan't cost you a sent.'

The two comrades got out, and Colonel Jack said—Jimmy, its the sociablest place I ever saw. The Chinaman waltzed in as comfortable as anybody. If we'd stayed awhile, I reckon we'd had some niggers. By George! we'll have to barricade our doors to night, or some off these ducks will be trying to sleep with us.'

A minister at a colored wedding wishing to make some humrous remarks, said, 'On such occasions as this it is customary to kiss the bride, but in this case we will omit it.' To this ungallant remark the indignant bridegroom very pertinently replied, 'On such occasions as this it is customary to give the minister $10, but in this case we will omit it.'

Something to Touch the Heart.

Coleridge relates a story to this effect;

Alexander, during his march into Africa, came to a people dwelling in peaceful huts, who knew neither war nor conquest. Gold being offered to him, he refused it, saying that his sole object was to learn the manners and customs of the inhabitants.

'Stay with us,' said the chief 'as long as it pleaseth thee.'

During this interview with the African Chief, two of his subjects brought a cause before him for judgment. The dispute was this. The one had bought of the other a piece of ground, which after the purchase was found to contain a treasure, for which he found himself bound to pay. The other refused to receive anything, stating that when he sold it with all the advantage, apparent or concealed, which it might be found to afford.

Said the Chief, looking at the one:

'You have a son,' and to the other, 'You have a daughter; let them be married and the treasure be given them as a dowry.

Alexander was astonished.

'And what,' said the Chief, 'would have been the decision in our country?'

'We should have dismissed the parties,' said Alexander, 'and seized the treasure for the king's use.'

'And does the sun shine on your country?' said the Chief; 'does the rain fall there? are there any cattle there which feed upon the herbs and green grass?'

'Certainly.' said Alexander.

'Ah,' said the Chief, 'it is for the sake of these innocent cattle that the Great Being permits the sun to shine, the rain to fall, and the grass to grow in your country.'

At a Louisville church, one Sunday, while the organ was playing vociferously, a good lady whispered to neighbor in the pew, had to raise her voice quite high in order to be heard. Suddenly the organ changed from loud to soft, when the lady, not taking note of the organ, was heard to say to her friend: 'We fry ours in butter.' Perhaps the congregation did'nt snicker.'

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE
FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. Walker, Proprietor. R. H. McDonald & Co., Druggists Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Billious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Billious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of
PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND
PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
Mar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Line, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas city, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN.

BY D. H. HOWARD.

Jerusalem, the golden!
O city of the blest!
O heavenly land of promise!
The weary pilgrim's rest!
Safe through the thorny journey,
Freed from the strife of sin;
Within the wals of jasper,
The pearly gates within.

What peace, beyond all telling!
What joy, for those whose feet
Stand by the crystal river,
And walk the golden street,
With boughs of palm, like victors,
Arrayed in robes of white,
With hymns of glad thanksgiving.
They throng the halls of light.

They thirst not, neither hunger,
Who gain that bright abode,
With oil of love annointed
As kings and priests to God.
O dear and blessed vision
The Seer of Patmos tells!
What glad and hopeful things
The prophet's voice reveals.

Behold the Tabernacle
Of God is now with men,
And He will dwell among them,
And heal their grief and pain.
And he that overcometh
Shall be the Father's heir
Within the glorious city,
And dwell forever there.

Adam Poe's Great Fight.

The celebrated fight between Adam Poe and the Shawnee chief, Black Feather, has been spoken of in the histories of early Kentucky, but I believe the particulars of the combat have never been given to the public.

The fight was remarkable, not only on account of the well known prowess of the parties engaged, but with the exceeding stubborness with which it was conducted and the many different phrases it assumed before it ended.

They literally fought on the earth, in the air and under the water.

Adam Poe, one of the first settlers of Kentucky, had often expressed a desire to meet the Shawnee chief in a hand to hand combat, and these boastings having reached the ears of Black Feather, he declared his intentions of seeking out the desiring whiteman.

This, for two seasons, he actually did, but circumstances combined to keep them apart for the time. Finally, however the opportunity came.

Adam Poe and his brother had been out hunting, and were returning, toward sundown, bearing a buck on a pole between them.

When passing a small thicket, a shot was fired at them, the ball lodging in the head of the deer, which hung next to Adam Poe.

To drop their burden and rush for the ambush, was the work of a second, Adam taking the right and his brother the left hand side.

The thicket, proving much larger than either thought, they became more widely separated than they intended than they in intended, and Adam was on the point of returning to where they had left the deer, when at a distance of a hundred yards or so, he discovered the gigantic form of the Shawnee chief, who was just in the act of firing upon him.

Adam had time to reach cover before the shot was made, and then began a series of tactics, such as was rarely witnessed in these wilds, for two of the most noted warriors of the day were trying to gain advantage over the other.

Foot by foot they drew nearer each other, leaping from tree, form stump to stump, or rock to rock, as the case might be.

Imperceptible to each other, perhaps, they gradually worked round, until both stood on the verge of a high bluffband, overlooking the river, facing each other, but some twenty paces apart.

Here, from behind separate trees, the wily foeman strove to obtain a shot; and, at last, Adam, thinking he saw his chance fired at the exposed hip of the chief.

He missed his aim, and, like an uncaged lion, the gigantic indian rushed from his cover and bore down upon the in no wise undaunted white man.

Half way they met, the Indian wielding his tomahawk having cast aside his rifle, while Adam laid his hopes and prospects upon the keen blade of his hunting knife.

With a shock they met midway, and then began a struggle such as is rarely witnessed between the human kind.

Poe was not quite so tall as the Shawnee but he was fully as strong, and much more active; and so the fight was upon an equal footing.

For many minutes they struggled back and forth upon the grassy level, now closing in the attempt to throw each other; and, failing in this again resorting to blows, dealt with tomahawk or knife.

By this time both were wounded in several places, the chief probable the most severely of the two.

At length, making a savage stroke with his weapon, the grasp of the redskin slipped, and the light ax went whirling far out into the river.

In an instant the Indian grappled, and a struggle, fiercer than any that had yet taken place, ensued—each putting forth every effort, until, approaching too near the verge of the precipice, they missed footing, and went tumbling into the stream locked in deadly embrace.

The advantage now lay with Adam. He being a practised swimmer, while he quickly discovered that his opponent could not swim at all.

The Indian, aware of this, in turn strove to regain the shore, but was thwarted at every point by Poe, who would jerk him back in deep water, and then both would go under together.

Finally, falling further out than heretofore, the combats were caught up by the current; and quickly born some distance from the land.

The fight was now all in the white man's favor and would have been soon ended, but for an unlooked for and unfortunate circumstance. Adam's brother suddenly appeared up the scene, and taking in his brother's peril, as he thought at a glance ventured upon the dangerous experiment of fishing the chief by a shot.

The ball sped, but not truly, for it struck Adam in the shoulder almost paralising his left arm.

His situation now became desperate indeed.

He could force the Indian beneath the current, but could not keep him there, and seeing that his own strength was rapidly departing, he determined to try and out wind the enemy.

With this object he suddenly threw his arm around the savage's neck and together they disappeared beneath the whole surface.

Adam's brother, standing upon the bank unconcious of the harm he had done witnessed this scene in dismay.

Long he waited for the appearance of one or the other until at length, becoming alarmed, he leaped into the stream and swam to the spot.

He reached it not a moment too soon.

Adam had 'out winded' the Indian and in doing so had nearly drowned went under himself.

He came feebly to the surface and would have sank again but for his own brother's aid.

They both reached the shore in safety, but Adam Poe never fully recovered from the terrible exertion of that fight.

A Timely Hint

In no way can peace be maintained during the coming season better than by preparing a good supply of stove wood for use during the hurry of the planting, haying and harvesting seasons. Now is the time to see that it is prepared and placed either in the wood-shed or near the kitchen.

It is anything but agreeable to cut or saw wood when the mercury in the thermometer reaches an altitude of one hundred and ten or fifteen degrees. Just you think of it a moment. The wood pile is sure to ax-identally take your attention when you have the least time to attend to it.

In nine cases out of ten you will have to cut wood when you by reason of over work and weariness, will have constitutional objections to doing it.

Again it constitutes a pretty source of annoyance to the good housewife to be continually getting out of wood, and then the chronic amiableness of your character gradually disappears before the oft-repeated request of 'Job, do please get me a little wood before you sit down.'

Now, in view of the fact that much valuable time is lost by failing to prepare wood for the summer season, and that the little word 'please' too often finds a substitute in that of 'must,' the safest way, both economically and socially, is to get the wood.

A Horse Giving an Alarm.

Zion's Herald gives an account of a horse in New Hampshire that performs a part of the duties of a shepherd. He was kept in a pasture adjoining one where a flock of sheep were feeding. One day he came full speed to his master who was speaking to a friend on the road that passed the farm and winnied to attract attention. As he did not heed the horse's mission, the animal galloped back to the sheep pasture and again returned and whinnied as before. Again he swiftly returned. As he had failed to make his master understand his meaning twice' he went to the farm house, put his head in at the open window and whinnied again. The farmer's wife being sure there was trouble in the pasture, followed the horse. He seemed pleased that he had attracted attention at last and trotted on before the lady, he led her down to the pasture and putting his head over the fence seemed to say: 'Look!' The lady did, and there she discovered that a savage dog had caught a sheep and was holding it by the throat, in spite of all the poor creature's efforts to escape. On being discovered the dog let go his hold and springing over the fence into the field, fled hotly pursued by the enraged horse who would gladly have trampled him beneath his feet.

Lesson in Political Economy.

A certain Judge living in the vicinity of Portland, Oregon, having had a load of wood brought into his yard, a Chinese wood-sawyer applied for a job of sawing it

'How muchee?' asked the Judge.

'Hap dollar,' replied John.

A bargain was about to be struck, when an Iriph American citizen demanded the job.

'How much?' again asked the honorable Judge.

'A dollar and a half,' replied the American citizen.

The Judge demurred, saying that the Chinaman had just offered to do the same work for half a dollar. 'He said 'as I prefer to encourage with American labor, I will pay you a dollar and a half.

The Judge returned some hours afterwards and to his surprise, found the Chinaman, and not the white man at work upon his wood pile.

'How's this, how's this?' said his honor' 'who told you to saw my wood?'

'Melican man,' said John.

'How muche he pay?' enquired the Judge.

'Hap dallar,' said John.

The Judge accepte thisd lesson in cheap Asiatic labor.

'Phil, my jewel,' said Pat, 'I'm mighty sorry you can't dine with me today.' 'Indeed, and why can't I dine with you?' said the astonished Phil. "Because, my dear,' resumed Pat, 'I haven't asked ye, as yet.'

'Twas None of his Funeral.

A western paper tells a story of a deaf gentleman's mistake: It seems that in the procession that followed good Deacon Jones to the grave last summer the Rev. Mr. Samples, the new clergyman of East Town, found himself in the same carriage with an elderly he had never before met. They road in grave silence for a few moments, when the clergyman endeavored to improve the occasion by serious conversation.

'This is a solemn duty in which we are engaged,' he said.

'Hey? What do you say, sir?' the old man returned. 'Cant you speak louder? I'm hard of hearin'!'

'I was remarking,' said the clergyman, 'that this is a solemn road we are traveling to-day.'

'Sandy road. You don't call this 'ere sandy, do ye? Guess you ain't been down to the south deestrict. There is a stretch of road on the old pike that beats all I ever see for hard travelin'. Only a week before Deacon Jones was sick, I met him drivin' his ox team along there, and the sand was pretty nigh up to the hubs of the wheels. The Deacon used to get dreadfully riled 'bout that piece of road; and East' Town does ahead of all creation for sand.'

The young clergyman looked blank at the unexpected turn given to his remark; but quickly recovering himself, and raising his voice to the highest pitch, he resumed the conversation.

'Our friend here has done with the discomforts of earth,' he said solemnly. 'A senseless clay.'

'Did you say clay, sir?' cried the old man, eagerly. 'Tain't nigh so good to cover sand with as medder loam. Sez I to Mr. Brewer, last town meetin' day, 'if you'd cart on a few dozen loads—and there's acres of it on the river band,' sez I—'you'd make as pretty a piece of road as there is in Harford county.' But we are slow folks here, sir.'

It was, perhaps, fortunate for the clergyman at that moment that the smell of new made hay from a neighboring field suggested a fresh train of thought.

'Look!' said he, with a graceful wave of the hand; 'what an emblem of the brevity of human life! 'As the grass of the field so man flourisheth, and to-morrow he is cut down.'

'I don't calculate to cut mine till next week,' said his companion 'You mustn't cut grass top 'arly; and then, again, you mustn't cut too late.'

'My friend,' shrieked the clergyman, in a last desperate effort to make himself understand, 'this is no place for vain conversation! We are approaching the narrow house for all the living.'

They were entering the grave yard but the old man stretched his neck from the careiage window in the opposite direction 'Do you mean Sqire Hubbard's over yonder? 'Tis rather nearer. They build all them new fangled houses that way now To my mind they ain't nigh so handsome nor so handy as the old fashioned square ones' with a broad entry running' clear through the back door. Well, this is the gettin'-out place, ain't it? Much obleeged to ye, parson' for your entertainin' remarks.'

What is Accidental?

A Des Moines paper says: Mr. Strong, who is now playing with the Irwin troupe in this city, was last season the æronaut of De Haven's circus, and made several hundred ascensions, some of which were fraught with narrow escapes. In the ascensions that Mr. Strong made from Shelbar, Mo., he met with a peculiar accident. All was ready for the aerial trip, and just as he was about to step into the basket some of the men at the ropes let go, tripping him up and he hung by his legs, tangled in the cords. For a moment, the balloon swayed to and fro, and Mr. Strong caught at the first object he could grasp, and that was a lady, catching her around the waist just as the balloon leaped into the air. Up they went in this strange position, with the crowd looking on in breathless horror. The lady thus unwillingly taken aloft fainted and hung a dead weight in his arms, but Mr. Strong kept his presence of mind, and, being an accomplished aeronaut, at last made the decent, landing the lady safely amid the cheers of the assembled throng.

"No, I Thank You."

At a recent spiritual sitting in this city there was present a woman who mourned the loss of her consort, and, as the manifestations began to appear, the spirit of the departed benedict appeared upon the scene. Of course the widow was now anxious to engage in conversation with the departed one, and the following dialogue ensued:

Widow—'Are you in the spirit world, dear?'

The Lamented—'I am.'

Widow—'How long have you been up there?'

The Lamented—'Oh some time.'

Widow—'Don't you want to come back and be with your lonely wife?'

The Lamented—'Not if I know myself! It's hot enough here.'

'Why don't you go to sleep?' said a mother to her three year old daughter

'I am tryin', she replied.

'But you haven't shut you eyes.'

'Well, I can't help it: um comes unbuttoned.'

TRAVELER'S SKETCH.

An Hour With a Snake-Charmer.

'Seeing is believing;' so says proverb, and if any one is anxious to have doubts removed on any subject, no process will be found so effectual as that of careful ocular demonstration—more especially when that evidence is ceptically examined before its reception as truth. Such was my intention when, for the first time in my live I was lately introduced to an Indian snake-charmer.

During a professional ride through the station in which I am quartered, I felt somewhat fatigued with the heat of the sun, which was just then, excessive, and ventured to call on a friend for a short shelter, despite the full conviction that I should find him indulging in that mid-day 'siesta,' so common a luxury to the Europeans living in this climate, and so yet fearfully productive of liver congestion, plethora and splenic disease.

I was not mistaken. 'Never mind me; come in, old boy.' was my friend's salutation, which I answerded in person by entering his bedroom, darkened and cooled by artificial means. Making my way to his bedside, I was surprised at seeing two peculinarly bright glistening objects in the corner of the room. I advanced towards them, but more quickly retired, on being assailed by a loud and unmistakable hiss. Involuntarily a scream in duct was performed by my friend and myself, and the native servants were somewhat startled by shrieks of, 'A snake, a snake! Get a gun!

A consultation was held—of course outside the room, and, I need not say, some distance from the door. Various results were arrived at; some suggesting 'shooting,' others 'smoking.' One, more courageous apparently that the snake should be 'caught,' and then destroyed.

However, as the originator of this bright idea did not seem in haste to carry his suggestion into practice, and as none of us wished to deprive him of the honor, it was agreed to send to the native bazar from an Indian snake-charmer. In the meantime we thought annother look could do no harm. Carefully and slowly was that door opened. Nervously a tremblingly we peeped in—gradually advanced, looking everywhere—jumped at the least rustle or sound' presenting sorry spectactacles of Her Majesty's British soldiers don't like snakes. Why should they?

'Why, he's gone! 'Take care! Look in the bed, cuboard, drawers, nooks, and corners.' No snake!

Then, for the first time, we laughed.

'Hallo! what's this piece of stick near the wall? By Jove, it's his tail! Phew! Don't speak, we shall lose him! Here's the charmer.'

He came, a tall muscular native, a strip of cloth round his waist, his hair hung long and matted except on the center of his head, which was shaved close in a circle, and a turbad covering it, bearing over his shoulders two baskets and his musical instrument made out of a gourd with a single bamboo pipe coming from its upper end and two similar ones from its lower, which being pieced with holes, are played upon like a flute, whilst the breath is blown through the upper and single one.

Before he was allowed to enter the room he was seached, and his baskets and instruments taken from him. Nothing could have been concealed, for his clothing was reduced to its minium and his only carried a short iron

He was shown the hole in which we supposed the snake to be, for now the reptile's tail had disappered. He lay down on the floor, and placing his face close to the hole, exclaimed, 'Burra sapsahib, bahut burra.' (Big snake, your honor, very big.) Without any more preparation he commenced digging round the hole, and removed some off the brickwork. In few minutes he showed us the tail of the reptile, and with sundry incantations in Hindostanee and curious contortions of his body, seized hold of the tail and gradually drew forth the snake. It proved to be a fine specimen of the corba—a black, shiny, wriggling, hissing, deadly cobra, abut five feet long, and at the thickest part eight inches across. This reptile he handled freely whilst it was hissing and darting its tongue out every second. Removing into the yard or compound, he released it. The brute wriggled towards him, and when within a foot or so reached itself up, spread out the enormous hood, and prepared itself to strike at its captor. But the charmer was not to be wounded. He seized his primitive musical instrument, and commenced very slowly to produce low and soft tones very harmonious but unconnected. Snake seemed astonished: his hood gradually collapsed, his head and about a foot of his body that was raised from the ground commenced to ways from side to side in perfect harmony with the music, and to slower and quicker as the time was decreased or increased. As the man played louder the snake got more excited, until its rapid and unusal movements had quite exhausted it, and it subsided.

Again the charmer seized it, and quick as lightning ran his hand up its body holding it firmly by the throat. By pressing on its neck, the cobra's mouth opened and he disclosed the fangs, poison bags, and apparatus complete; thus proving beyond a doubt that it was not a tranied or tame reptile he had been treating like a paying.

Doubts still arose in my mind, however, about the genuineness of the performance, for I could not bring myself to believe that a man would willingly place himself in such close proximity to certain death.

A fowl was now obtained and placed abot a foot from the reptile, which was again set free. With the same movements it raised itself from the ground spread out its hood, and with a loud hiss, apparently of satisfaction, darted upon and seized the fowl by the back of its neck. Hanging there for a few seconds, it let go its hold, and the man at the samb instant seized it, as he had formerly done, by the head.

The fowl almost instantaneously became drowsy, its head falling forwards, and the beak striking with considerable force into the ground. This convulive moment lasted ten seconds, and then the bird lay down as if completely comatose and powerless. In fifteen seconds it gave a sudden start and fell back quiet dead. This was the first time I witnessed death from a snake bite, and it is unquestionably a sudden, quiet, and overpowering poison.

As no deception could have been practiced in this instance, I was anxious to see the reptile killed but the charmer said he would not have it destroyed; that if it were injured the power he had over the snakes would be interfered with, and the next one would no doubt bite and kill him.— He accounted for his easy capture by saying that this was a great holiday for the snakes, and they had been enjoying themselves. 'This one,' said he 'is not living in this house. He has come from his own home visiting, and has lost his way. On this account he got down a wrong hole, and I was enabled to pull him out. Nasty neighbors and abominable visitors these cobras! I will take this snake home and feed him, and make him tame.'

However, we insisted on seeing him made harmless, or compartively so, and directed the man to remove his fangs. This he agreed to do, and performed it in this manner; a piece of wood was cut about an inch square, and held by the charmer to the head of the snake. The reptile seized it as he had done the fowl, and with a dexterous twist of his hand the most primitive form of dentistry was accomplished. The four fangs sticking into the wood were extracted by the roots and given to me. I have them now, and look upon them as more "suicidally" pleasant than a pint of prussic acid or a cask of white arsenic.

Another fowl was now brought and attacked by the snake as before, but without any effect; it shook itself, rustled its feathers, and walked away consequentially. It is alive still, unless some enterprising culinary agent has converted it into 'curry' or 'devil.'

JIM WOLF AND TOM CATS.

A Taffy-Pulling Insident.

I knew by the sympatheic glow upon his bald head—I knew by the thoughtful look upon his face—I knew by the emotion flush upon the end of the old free-liver's nose, Simon Wheeler's memory was busy with the olden times. And so I prepared to leave, because all these were symptoms of a reminiscence sigs that he was going to be delivered of another tiresome personal experience; but I was too slow; he got the start of me. As nearly as I can recollect, the infliction was couched in the following language:

'We were boys then, and didn't care for nothing only how to shirk school and keep up a revivin' state of devilment all the time. This yah Jim Wolf I was talkin' about was the 'prentice, and he was the best hearted fellow, he was, and the most forgiving and oneselfish I ever see—well, there couldn't be a more bullier boy than he was, take him how you would; and sorry enough I was, too, when I saw him for the last time.

'Me and Henry was always pestering him and plastering horse bills on his back and putting bumble-bees in in his bed, and so on, and sometimes we would crowd in a bunk with him, notwithstanding his growling, and then we'd let on to get mad and fight across him, so as to keep him stirred up like. He was nineteen, he was, and long, and lank, and bashful, and we were fifteen and sixteen, and tolerably lazy and worthless.

'So that night you know that my sister gave a candy pullin', they started us off to bed early, so that the company could have full swing, and we rung in on Jim to have some fun.— Our winder looked out onto the roof of the ell, and about ten o'clock a couple of tom cats got to rerin' and chargin' round on it and carryin' on like sin.

'There was four inches of snow on the roof, and it was frozen so there was a right smart crust on it, and the moon was shining bright, and we could see them cats like daylight. First they'd stand off and eyow-yow-yow, just the same as if they were a cussin' one another, you know and bow up their backs and pushed up their tails, and swell around and spit, and then all of a sudden the gray cat he'd snatch a handful of fur off the yaller cat's ham and spin him around like the button on a barndoor. But the old yal'er cat was game, and he'd come and clinch, and the way they'd gouge and bite and howl, and the way they'd make the fur fly, was powerful.

'Well, Jim he got disgusted with the row and 'lowed he'd climb out there and shake 'em off the roof. He had really no notion of don't it, but we everlastingly dogged him, he'd not take a dare, and so on till bimeby he histed the winder, and, lo! and behold you, he went—went exactly as he was—nothing on but a shirt, and that was short. You ought to see him. You ought to see him a creepin' over that ice, and diggin' his toe nails and finger nails in to keep him from slippin'; and, above all, you ought to have seen that shirt a flappin in the wind, and them long, ridiculous shanks of his'n glisten in' in the moonlight.

'Them comp'ny folks was down there under eaves, the whole squad of 'em under that ornery shed of Washington Bower vines, all sittin around about two dozen sassers of hot candy which they'd got into the snow to cool. And they was laughing and talkin' lively; but bless you, they didn't know anything about the panorama that was going on over their heads. Well, Jim, he went a sneakin' and a sneakin' right up to the comb of the roof, till he was within a few feet of 'em, and all of a sudden he made a grab for the yaller cat. But, by gosh, he missed his holt and his heels flew up and he flopped over on his back, and shot off like a dart, went a smashin' and crashin' down through them old rusty vines and landed right in the dead center of them company people; sot down like an earthquake in them two dozen sassers of red hot lasses candy, and let off a howl that was hark from the tombs. Them girls—well, they left, you know. They see he warn't dressed for company, and so they left. All was done in a second. It was just one litte war whoop and a whist of their dresses, and blame the wench of 'em was in sight anywhere.

'Jim, he was a sight. He was gormed with the bilin' hot lasses candy clean to his heels, and had more busted sassers hanging to him than if he was an Injun prince he came a prancin' up stairs, just a whoopin' and cussin', and every jump he gave he shed some chine, and every squirm he fetched he dropped some candy.

'And blistered! Why, bless your soul, that poor creature couldn't reely set down comfortable for as much as four weeks.'

Tame Codfish.

Mr. Buckland, in a recent number of Land and Water, gives an interesting account of a visit paid by him to a pond containing tame codfish at Port Logan, Wigtonshire. The property in quesption belongs to a gentleman by the name of McDougall, and consists of an amphitheatere about one hundred feet in diameter, hollowed out of the solid rock by the sea. All egress from this is prevanted by a barrier of loose stones, through which water passeses freely. On approaching the shore of the pond, many codfish of great size were seen; and when a servent woman who had charge of the fish approached with some muscles, the surface of the water was perfectly alive with the struggling fish. They came close to the edge, and after a little while permitted Mr. Buckland to scratch them on the back, and play with them in various ways. Among other experiments tried by him was that of holding a muscle in his hand, and allowing the fish to swallow his hand in the effort to obtain the muscle. These fish furnish to the proprietor an ample supply of excellent food, the flavor being considered much superior to that of the cod taken in the open sea. Whenever needed for the table, a selection can readily be made from the most promising of those at hand, and the fish secured without difficulty.

Thrilling Incident at the Davenport Bridge.

The single pieces of the chord of the new bridge weigh ten thousand pounds each. The way they have been raised to position heretofore, has been by wrapping a 'fifth chain' four times around the piece to be elevated, when a crab gently lifted them up will pulleys and a wire rope tackle.— Two pieces go up at a time. Late on Tuesday afternoon, one of the pieces had been raised almost to the height intended, when the links in the chain about it were heard to snap. The men below fled from their place, while those above could do little more than stand aside and await the result. Foreman Archer, who was on another portion of the bridge, ran to the scene of terror, and saw at a glance the cause of the fright. Links in three of the chord had snapped in two, leaving that weight of five tons suspended by a single wrap of ordinary chain. It wouldn't do to lower the chord, for the impetus would be sufficient to tear the slight attachmet asunder. Archer threw ropes to the men at the top, and three of these persons clambered to the suspended chord, put the rope around it lashed it to the false work above, and thus relieved the strain on the chain. Then the cord was lowered, a wire rope was substituted for the chain, the piece was hauled up again and put in position.— Had that piece of chain broken, the false work beneath would have given way under it, and gone down with a crash. It is the opinion of Mr. Archer that only the timbers directly under the chord would have been broken, and that the rest of the false work and the span would have stood firm. Others differ with him, and think the whole span—wood, iron, and all—would have gone down in ruin, involving a loss of about $70,000 and the lives of a score of men. However, it is fortunate that the links of that remaining piece of chain had strength enough to allow this difference of opinion.—Davenport (Iowa) Gazett.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAR. 21, 1872

The election of Straw in New Hampshire nominates Grant. We are satisfied with the result.

There seems to be a demand all over the State that Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks shall be our candidate for Govenor. We hope he will. He will cook Tom Browne's meat thoroughly.

The Hon. Thomas A Hendricks of Indiana is zealously in favor of acting with the Liberal Republicans for the redemption of the country from public robbery and corruption and from personal and military government.

The New York Tribune says: 'The salient point in the French Arms scandal is that the Government armories were employed by Gen. Grant's Adminstration, to manufacture cartridges for use of the French in the Aggressive war they opened in 1870 against the Germans. There are other startling features about it, which the debate made clear, BUT THIS IS THE ONE POINT WHICH IS ADMITTED BY ALL SIDES.'

The B. & O. Company is organizing several Crops of engineers for the survey and location of Chicago Extension. Mr. Crocker who was engaged here last summer is to have charge of an Indiana division, and is now organizing a corps of assistants to take the field at an early day. A corps, we understand, now engaged on some of the Company's lines near Pittsburgh is to have charge of this divison—to be here about April 1st.—Defiance Democrat.

The speech made by the Hon. Daniel Voorhees on the floor of Congress a few days since on the subject of Cuban relations to Spain, is one worthy the attention of the whole country. It was full of the strength of Mr. Voorhees' most vigorous and vehement eloquence, and, at the same time, it was replete with facts that fasten upon the Spanish Government the most barbarous cruelties practiced within the present century, and the American Government a servil submission to outrages upon individual life and national integrity that would take rivers of blood to wipe out and purify.

The Pittsburg (Pennsylvania) Post says that it is convinced, from the testimony in the McClure-Gray case, that the Democracy of Pennsylvania have been swindled out of the State elections by frauds in Philadelphia. It adds.

'We believe that Asa Packer was honestly elected Governor by a larger majority than that accorded to Governor Geary. We belive that Philadelphia is to day, and has been for years Democratic by eight to 10,000 majority, and we believe still further that Grant's friends in that city the thieves, rounders and repeaters, have so controlled elections there as to give just what majority was needed to carry the city and State.'

We do not see the necessity for the Republicans holding a National Convention for the nomination of their candidate as the matter has already been settle by leaders of the Grant party. The delegates are instructed to "go in, unanimously" for Grant. That, at once, settled by the whole matter.—Grant is too good a man to loose. Grant is an honest man,—Grant is. We have reference to General Grant, the President of the United States; the great and good man; who endeavors to obstruct investigation that have a tendancy to expose corruption, and more especially, if he is implicated in the scheme. Grant is a good man, and an, honest man to those who will engage as his 'pals.'

Erie.—The so-called Erie Ring has been overthrown, and an entire change in the management effected. Gould was forced to resign and his set of officers displaced. The reform is in the interest of the English stockholders, who furnished most of the cash by which the road was built.

Gen. John A. Dix, of New York, is the new President, O. H. P. Archer Vice President, W. W. Sherman, the banker, Treasurer, and Gen. Geo. B. McClellan Superintendent.

The design of the new directory is to institute a rigid economy in expenses, cut loose from all outside speculations, and to run the road more particularly in the interest of stockholders and the general public—keeping clear of rings.

The New York World say extensive forgeries have been perpetrated on the Russian Empire by an organized band of thieves, who have not entered the Empire but disseminated the forgeries by agents in Russia. One of the gang was arrested in Odessa with a larger amount of forged notes in his possession and has been tried and convicted. The operations of the rogues in bank notes were but a trifle compared with their forgeries of Russian Railway shares. Over fifty thousand roubles worth of these forged Railway shares were seized in Odessa alone, and almost as large an amount in Moscow and St. Petersburg. The Russian secret Police have been sent to nearly all the continental cities as well as to London, to unearth the chief forgers if possible.

Death of Hon. John Colerick of Fort Wayne.

Through a press of matter last week we omitted to mention the sad intelligence that the honored one, whose name appears at the head of this item has passed from life out into the great ocean of eternity. Not yet having attained the vigor of manhood he is laid low by the hand of death, and the bright name he leaves is now only a basis, upon which we only conjecture as to his attainments in the promising future. Mr. Colerick was only in his thirty-fourth year yet he had the reputation of being one the finest criminal lawyers in the State, while his ability, personal popularity and excellent qualities, were so marked and generally recognised that his politcal friends came forward and tendered him the congressional honors of that district two years ago, as the strongest man in the party. But for an unexpected diversion in that party, in his own county, all the other counties giving him a larger increased majority on their former vote, Mr. Colerick would certainly have been the member from elect that district. But if he did not succeed at that time he surely had paved the way for his triumphant election in the coming campaign, and we believe nothing but that fell distroyer could have prevented it. Just as he is ready to reach forth and grasp that which he has so nobly earned, just as he is about ready to enter into the enmentjoy of those honors which a devoted life had brought him, that grim monster which loves a shining mark appears, and what was of mortality is no more, but that blessed immortality has been gathered to the shining shore, where disappointment and seperations are unknown.

'There is no death! the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore.
And near us, though unseen,
Do dear immortal spirits tread,
For all the boundless universe
Is life!—there is no dead!'

New Hampshire.

In commencing upon the result of the New Hampshire election, The Chicago Times says: 'The defeat is abundantly compensated by the moral which it affords. This moral is embodied in the oblivious deduction that the Democratic party alone stands no shadow of a chance to prevent the reelection of Grant. The most hopelessly, pig-headed Bourbon in the party must now recognize the fact that a Democratic candidate for President could not carry more than one-third of the electoral vote. It follows that the hope of resuing the country from imperialism and corruption depends solely on the union of all the elements of opposition. To secure this union, and to achieve the victory which it almost assures, it is necessary that the Convention at Cincinati shall recoguize the wide and spontaneous expressions of popular approval that have been elicited by the election of a candidate which was made at Columbus.'

It is expessions of this kind that Democrats must now look calmly in the face. It is certainly folly to oppose facts or explain away defeats. If there is, in any honorable way, an opporinnity for defeating the re-election of an Administration that is squandering our people's money, practicing constant and bare-fased swindles upon the country, and leading us gradually on to despotism, it is the duty of Democrats to avail themselves of such an opportunity.—There is not much reason to be surprised that New Hampshire went Republican—not half as much as that it went Democratic at the last election. But the concentration of Radical forces shows the power of the Administration and it will be suicidal for the opposition not to recognize these rescources and prepare for them.

Investigations are of but little service to the country, so long as they have no influence in removing the abuses which they expose. The only effect of the exposure of the General Order business in New York has had, is to change the firm name of Leet, Stocking & Co., to Squires & Co. The same thieving transactions are carried on, however, and accrue to the profit of the same rascally proteges of Mr. Grant. Yet the guilt of these men, and the gross injustice practiced upon New York merchants, are now well know to Mr. Grant, if they have not been so before. A similar state of things is found in the recent exposures, by the New York Tribune, of Hulbard, the Comptroller of the Currency and one or two of his subordinates. It was conclusively demonstrated that this mad Hulbard received a bribe of $600, and carriage and horses, and that his chief clerk received about $3,000, for the suppression of a report of a Tennessee Bank examiner, which showed one of the National Banks of Memphis to be in a bankrupt condition several months before it made a public failure. The publication of this report would have saved thousands of dollars to innocent depositors; its suppression was the means of swindling the public and enriching the scoundrels who participated in the fraud. The exposition of this latest Government swindle, shows that Mr. Grant's Government was familiar with the facts at the time that he re-appointed Hulbard. It is but another of an accumulation of frauds, which fix the responsibility directly upon the Administration of Mr. Grant and the extreme Radical party.

We ask the question: Why does not Congress get to work on the reduction of the tariff? or are there too many railroad appropriations on hand yet to be considered, and debates that will occupy what little time there is left until the end of the session? We think it would be of great advantage to the people if it would adjourn entirely, if it intends to continue as unprofitable as it has been. The Senatorial tariff bill embodies, in its late form, an addition of about three hundred articles to to the free list, a reduction of about eight per cent. of the duties now levied on a greater part of them. It is a bill framed explicity in the interest of protection. Of these three hundred articles, nearly all are such as are used in the manufactures in this country, but which, at the same time, are not produced in the United States. This at once shows that the job is to benefit the New England manufacturer, as it gives him the privilege of importing raw material duty free, while all the duties are retained on the manufactured products at the same high rates as at present. The bill is ingeniously drawn to let down as little as possible the pressure of that 'everlasting' protection crew. It is not a bill by which the masses of the people would profit, but it is another of those unsurpassed schemes of Radical unsurpation.

The Cincinnati Convention.

The Times-Chronicle this afternoon publishes a denial which it says is upon the authority of Senator Sumner, to the effect that he has neither consented nor been asked to preside over the Cincinnati Convention and that with the present opinions will decline to do anything of the kind.

The Times-Chroncle in an interview with Senator Tipton, of Nebraska, states that Senator expresses the belief that Dawes will be the nominee of the Cincinnati Convention in May. Also a preference for Trumbull. The Senator is represented as saying that Chief Justice Mason and Governor Butler, of Nebraska, are in sympathy with this convention and that Senator Logan is counted on and that positive assurances have been received that Voorhees and Hendricks of Indiana, will cooperate with and support the movement. He says further, that there are assurances of large colored delegations from the South.

Great Destruction of Cattle. Reports from the West leave no doubt but immense losses have been sustained by the cattle dealers of the West during the winter. A letter from Topeka, Kansas gives the following case:

A Texas cattle trader, brought three thousand head of cattle to this State during the latter part of November last to graze on the 'sunny slopes and evergreen valleys' during winter. A few days since he returned through this place with his herders, 12 in number, with as many ponies, enroute to Texas. He sold his ponies, together with $180 worth of hides, being all that was left out of a goodly fortune, every head of his vast drove having actually frozen to death. I have learned of several such cases.

The New Hampshire Election.

The returns received last night from the election in New Hampshire indicate an Administration majority of about a thousand. A most vigorous effort was made by the adherents of the faction in power to secure an Administration victory, and to that end money has been lavishly expended.—The result is a triumph for the office holders. If New Hampshire, by a streak of luck, had gone Democratic, it would have been a damper upon the prospects of Grant for renomination, while a different result will make his renomination more certain, if not altogether so. The Republican candidate has a large number of workmen in his employ, and he probably gained a large vote through this influence. And besides the contest in New Hampshire was the partisan fight between Republicans and Democrats, with the odds largely against the latter. Grant and his friends were fighting for their political existence and they used a immense power at their control to secure a triumph. If the State has gone the way the returns indicate the result is a victory for Grant, and it will remove what ever doubt there might have been in regard to his nomination. It makes him the candidate of the Philadelphia Convention, and we do not object to that. The opposition to Grant in the Republican party must now crystalize and act. The Cincinnati Convention need not delay for the nominations of the Philadelphia Convention, as they are fore-shadowed by the New Hampshire eleection. That Cincinnai Convention should muster enough Republican strength to become master of the situation. What the country needs is an entire change in the administration of the Government to restore economy, honesty and purity in the conduct of public affairs. The must be the issue in the canvass of this year, and it is one on which the opposition to the present Administration can unite. If the Cincinnat Convention will present candidates, whose personal character will be a guarantee of an honest and intelligent Administration of the Government and if the State and local nominations are of the same character, an irresistible revolution will sweep over the country. That is the lesson of the New Hampshire election.—State Sentinel.

General Tom Browne, Radical candidate for Govrenor, will go down to properiety immortalized in connection with the whisky trade. Down at Vincennes the saloon keepers now label their fancy drinks as 'Whisky Cutlets,' 'Brandy Chops,' 'Peter House Cocktails,' ect. There is said to be a great demand for these new styles of drink among the Radical brethren.—Terre Haut Journal.

The New York Tribune of the 28th ult, contains the following in reference to the Labor Reform ticket, nominated at Columbus Ohio, some weeks since.

The two gentlemen nominated by the Columbus, Labor convention are in the main well known. Gov. Parker has served in the executive chair of New Jersey, and is a Democrat of the more intelligent and anti-Bronbon school. It is confidently announced that he will accept the nomination offered in a forthcoming speech, to be delivered at a ratification meeting in this city.

Judge David Davies, of the United States supreme court, is an old friend of the late President Lincoln by whom he was nominated to the supreme court. He was born in Cecil county Maryland, on March 9, 1815: graduated at Kenyon college, Ohio, in 1832, subsequently studied law in Massachusetts, and also at the law schools in New Haven, Conn. Removing to Illinois in 1835, he was admitted to the bar, and soon after settled at Bloomington in the practice of his professon. In 1844 he was elected to the State legislature, in 1847 severed as a member of the State constitutional convention of that year, and in 1848 was elected judge of the Eighth judicial district of the State. In 1855, and again in 1861 he was reelected to this position. He had long been an intimate personal friend of Mr. Lincoln, and as a delegate to the Chicago convention of 1860 had a large share in securing his nomination for the presidency.—The two had been thrown much together by the practice of their profession in a thinly populated county and the intimacy between them was of the closest and most confidential character. In his third term as curcuit Judge in Illinois he was, in in 1862, appointed by Mr. Lincoln to the position of associate judge of the supreme court of the United States. Mr. Lincoln also appointed him his executor, and the estate of the murdered president was wound up by Judge Davis.

Chased by a Saw Log.

A Canadian who was engaged last week on the brow of a hill, near Pittsfield, Mass., in cutting timber and rolling it to the bottom, endeavored to manipulate a log for its safe decent, but discovered that it was getting the better of him. He was on the under side, and it would not do to let it slide, so he screamed for help. But no help came. His strength was surely and rapidly failing, and there was nothing to do but run for it, and run he did—a fearful race. The natural philosophers say that a log gains in rapidity as it descends. It is otherwise with human legs on a run, even when, as in this case, the descent is steep and icey. There was no turning out, and the log gained with terrible rapidity on the frightened Canuck, and was now just on his heels, when lucklily he spied a hollow in his path, into which he popped with a bound, but had hardly time to huddle himself into his hole, when crash! crash! the log thundered over him, and left him safe, but about the most badly scared man that ever halooed.

Several of our exchanges mention the name of Owen M. Eddy in connection with the office of Secretary of State.

Mr. Eddy is a man of ability and large experience, and should he be elected we are satisfied he would fill the office with credit to himself and honor to the party.

Mr. Eddy is now in charge of the office as Deputy Secretary, and as such has rendered the State efficient service in arranging the office and making indexes to records and files, thus supplying a want which has long been felt by those who were compelled to handle tons of documents in the search for some mislaid record. This labor has been in addition to the regular duties of the office and for which he receives no pay. We think the son of our late Secretary should be elected to succeed him.—South Bend Union.

NOTICE is hereby given that whereas Wyllys Griswold and Abigail Griswold on the 7th day of January A. D. 1857, made a mortgage to the State of Indiana, for the use of the congressional school fund, on the following real estate in DeKalb County, Indiana, viz:

Ten [10] acres of land in the north east part of the south-west quarter of section twenty-nine [29] township thirty-four [34], north of range thirteen [13] east. Also lots number two hundred and thirty-three [233], two hundred and thirty-four [234] two hundred and eighty-nine [289], two hundred and ninety [290], two hundred and thirty-five [235] two hundred and thirty-six, two hundred and eighty-eight [288], two hundred and ninety-one [291], two hundred and thirty-seven [237], two hundred and thirty-eight [238], two hundred and nine-two (292), two hundred and thirty-two [232], two hundred and twenty-nine (229), two hundred and thirty (230), two hundred and twenty-eight, 228, one hundred and fifty-one, 151, one hundred and fifty-three, 153, one hundred and fifty-seven, 157, one hundred and fifty two, 152, one hundred and fifty-four, 154, one hundred and fifty-six, 156, two hundred and twenty-seven, 227, two hundred and eighty-sev n, 287. Also the north part of lots one hundred and fifty-nine, 159, one hundred and fifty-eight, 158, and the east half of lots one hundred and forty-seven, 147, one hundred and forty-eight, 148, in the original plat of the town of Auburn, to secure the payment of three hundred dollars, with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable in advance, according to the conditions of a note accompanying said mortgage made by said Wyllys Griswold whereby he promised to the State of Indiana on the 7th day of January, A. D. 1862, the sum of three hundred dollars with interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum payable in advance, commencing on the 7th day of January 1857 and whereas there was one hundred and four dollars and fifty-eight cents, 104.58, interest due on said mortgage on the first day of January 1872, and said parties have failed to pay the interest thereon and by reason thereof the principal of said note and mortgage has become due.

Now I, William McIntyre, Auditor, of DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, hereby give notice that on the 25th day of March A. D. 1872, the same being the 4th Monday of said month, at the Court House door in the town of Auburn in said county and State I will offer for sale between the hours of 10 o'clock a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m. said land and town lots, or, so much thereof, in a square form, as nearly as possible off the north-westerly corner of said tract, as may be necessary to satisfy said principal and 2 per cent. damages, and costs, amounting in the aggregate to $432 63.

WM. McINTYRE, Auditor.

Dated at Auburn, Feb. 23, 1872.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a Decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Common Pleas Court, in a cause wherein Margaret Buss, Christian Buss and Isaac C. Thomas are Plaintiffs, and Whedon W. Griswold, Josie S. Griswold, Wyllys Griswold, Abigail Griswold, Richard Elson Hollen L. Elson and Gilbert McFarland are Defendants require me to make the sum of Ten hundred and forty-eight dollars, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on SATURDAY, APRIL 6th, 1872.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate to-wit: Lots number two hundred and nineteen, 219, and two hundred and twenty, 220, in the original plat of the town of Auburn. Also lots numbered one hundred and eleven, 111, and one hundred and forty-one, 141, in the western addition to said town of Auburn. Also the north half of the north-west quarter of the south-west quarter of the north-west quarter of section thirty-two, 32, township thirty-four, 34, north of range thirteen, 13, east, in DeKalb County Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and cost, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree interest and cost.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

MANHOOD,

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

BUSINESS good to-day.

Good Syrup 60 cents, at Smith & Hare's

THE weather is somewhat on the March order.

SCHOOL commenced on Monday last, and a large number is present.

Anything in the line of Smoked Meat, at Smith & Hare's.

WE are now prepared to print horse bills in good style on short notice.

Fine-cut chewing tobacco only 60 cents at Smith & Hare's.

THE first fight of the season came off last Saturday between belicose individuals and as a consequence one of them got hurt.

IF your neighbor's hens are troublesome and steal across the way, don't let your angry passions rise; fix a place for 'em to lay!

Charlotte Johnson, a Swede, lately murdered her child at Laporte, was arrested in Chicago, and now awaits trial for the crime.

SAM WINTER, of the Huntington Democrat and John B. Stoll, of the Ligonier Banner talk about purchasing the Toledo Daily Times.

AN exchange makes the following pathetic appeal to its readers: 'if there is any thing you know, worth knowing, that we ought to know, and you know we don't know, please let us know it.'

PERSONAL.—On Saturday afternoon last we were pleased to see in our office, Miss Sylvia Orr, of Corunna, and Mrs. M. F. Long, Jr., of this place. We are always glad to see our friends and therefore we invite you to call again.

A FEW of our small boys pugilistically inclined, indulge in a fight now and then and we are sorry to say older ones stand by and enjoy the scene. If the Marshal, would lodge a few of them in jail it might have a good effect.

Among the numerous signs of Spring are the little signs here and there of 'look out for paint.' Whitewash brushes are in demand; ham and eggs are ripe; and many other evidences are visible. Spring is on the wing.

HANDSOME.—The sign on the building on the corner of Main and Calhoun, north of Court House, Fort Wayne. O. J. Kover, artist, did it with his little pain brush.—He has hung his banner on the outer wall and he need not be ashamed. Take a look at it when you go to the city.

THE Republican nomination for Congressman in this District promises to be hotly contested. The prospects are that the contest will between Hon. A. Y. Hooper, of this place, and Hon. Mr. Baker, of Goshen. Judge Tousley's star is waning. —Col. City Post.

THE initial number of the South Bend Tribune, came to hand last week, and we cannot fail to recognize its claims as a first-class paper. South Bend is being pretty well supplied with papers, and now that the Republicans have two, they ought to elect Smiler Colfax, sure.

C. ORFF & Co., of Fort Wayne, have just received their Spring stock of new goods and are now ready to supply all with new and handsome styles in everything. They have the largest store in the city, and are offering great bargains in all kinds of dry goods. See advertisement.

PROF. S. W. KIMBAL, of Fort Wayne, gave us a pleasant call last Saturday. The Professor is engaged in teaching a class in music, at Butler, and from what we know and have heard, they have secured a No. 1 teacher. A Concert is to be given by this class at that place, at the end of the term, which will be in a few days.

BY a letter received from our old friend, O. P. Meyers, Esq., agent of J. E. Warner & Co's. great Pacific Museum, Menagerie, Circus and Caravan, we learn that they will leave Lansing, Mich., on April 16, its summer route being through States west of Ohio. We may expect a visit during the year.

COMING.—We learn through a private source that a gentleman by the name of Carothers, of Carey, Ohio, will establish a foundry and machine shop at this place, if the usual inducements are held out in the way of donating grounds. Mr. C. is an old and experienced machinist and would be a valuable addition to our town.

FRUIT HOUSE.—Capt. J. B. White, of the Fort Wayne Fruit House, is irrepressible. His business has doubled since the fire, and there is a rush from all sides. He is selling at still smaller profits than ever and his prices are the lowest in the city, even of those who wholesale. See new price list in another column.

THE latest sensation at Fort Wayne, is the finding of a bundle, containing a new born infant, on the platform of a sleeping car. A brakesman found it, arrested it and took it to the calaboose, for being out so late, no doubt, and Charley Fletcher, that fellow that yells around so much about hotels and private houses at every station, has adopted the little stranger, and is now happy.

COL. C. A. ZOLLINGER, has purchased Schirmeyers Hat & Cap Store at Fort Wayne, and will add largely to the already fine assortment always to be found at that popular establishment. That very pleasant and agreeable young man, who is always so affable and good humored, will still be found there in all his glory, and can suit you with as nice an article in the chapeau line as you ever saw.

ENGINEERS of the B. & O. Co., have been here for several days—now awaiting books maps and papers before commencing. An office has been rented for two years and to be fitted up with necessary conveniences. They expect to take the field in a few days.

With our citizens, as may be expected, there is no little anxiety felt at the present as to where the stakes shall be stuck in this immediate vicinity.—Defiance Democrat.

[illegible] & FOWLER, of Fort Wayne, keep the largest assortment of shirts collars, and gents furnishing goods, generally than any other establishment in the city. They make this a speciality and can sell at lowest rates. They will be found diagonally across the square from the Aveline House, on Calhoun street.

WE learn that the conductor, Harvey Bowen, who was killed on the G. R. & Ind. Road last week, was thrown from the top of a car whilst in the act of applying the brake. The breaking of the chain threw him off and he struck with such force as to cause his death in a few hours. He had but recently been promoted from baggage master. His father, living in Illinois, upon hearing of his son's death, dropped dead.—Ken. Standard.

THE Goshen Democrat appears again in more than its former glory. Billy Beane, its enterprising editor, is like truth, you can't stop him, crushed to the ground he will rise again, phœnix-like, and he is again master of the situation. It only shows our good will to wish him success but he'll have it anyway, whether we wish it or not.

HATS.—James Harper & Co., the old reliable hatters, of Fort Wayne, have now a large assortment of the most fashionable styles than has ever been offered there before. They are doing an immense trade in the line of silk hats, and we know of several of our townsmen that have ordered one of these shining articles for spring wear. Now would be a good time to hand in your orders for the new styles just out. They make them to order, and sell at reasonable terms.

THE following allowances were made to Township Trustees, by the Commissioners at their last session:

Newville Tp., J. A. Robinson, Trus.	$43.75
Franklin, Miles Waterman	30.00
Stafford, H. H. Wanemaker	48.25
Fairfield, John Treesh	87.25
Jackson, Peter Shaffer	90.00
Concord, T. S. Murry	100 00
Fairfield, Saml. Greenamyer	125.00
Smithfield, S. B. Mottinger	51.75
Troy, W. B. Emerson	92.50

MARTIN & SON, successors to T. B. Totton, having been duly installed in their new quarters, are now ready to supply all demands in the line of groceries, etc., at the lowest ruling prices. The new firm comes highly recommended as prompt business men, and we trust our citizens will extend every encouragement in their power. They will be found at the old stand where they will be pleased to wait upon you

ONE of our property holders, as will be seen in another column, protests against the survey ordered by the Town Board.—If this will be of any benefit to the town, there should be no objection to it, but on the other hand, if it will result in no practical good, and if a majority of the property holders are opposed to it, then it ought to be abandoned. There are some lines that must be located in Spencer's addition, but whether a survey of the Old Plat is required is another question. The columns of the COURIER are open to the public for an expression of their opinions, and if it is found advisable to take a survey, we hope it will be done, and if not, that it will be abandoned.

OUR friend Craig, of the Bluffton Banner, don't seem to take much stock in our getting the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.—He stands alone in the belief that it will pass on the southern line. He says "The real fact is, we have actually secured the road; and every town and county along the line is preparing to pass in their checks for the required amount." We think the people along that line will have passed in their checks a great while before they get the B. & O. Railroad. No, Bro. Craig, it won't do. We know there is some efficacy in newspaper blowing, but it's hard work to keep a stiff upper lip when everything is against you. We get the road sure, providing the company conclude to locate on this line. Remember in the mean time that we get the road.

THE Goshen Times expresses its preference for Representative to Congress from the Tenth District in this style: "We have a candidate in the person of the Hon. John H. Baker, of this city, who is too modest to press his own claims with that persistency that characterizes others possessing less merit, and he is certainly too honest to stoop to the low trickery that is too often resorted too by professional politicians who, though not so worthy, are more unscrupulous in accomplishing their designs.'

IF we are to have a Republican, and we confess that the probability is that we will; so long as so many of the voters of this district insist on corruption and profligacy in high places, if we are to have one of these, let us have John H. Baker. We believe he is a good man, somewhat inclined to be an honest, upright Republican, but, of course, not perfect, an impossibility almost with such terrible associations. We demand that John H. Baker of Goshen, be nominated.

B. L. & S. A.—A meeting was held at the Court House last Monday evening, in the interest of the Building Loan & Savings Association, and it was determined to raise the requisite amount of shares, if possible, without delay. Five hundred shares of $200 each, giving us a capital of $100,000, and by one dollar being paid in each month on every share, we have five hundred dollars to loan monthly. It ought not to be less than this, and we hope that everybody interested in the growth and prosperity of the place will come forward and take all the stock they can not exceeding ten shares. Now, there is not one in this place but what can take one or more shares of stock. All that is required is that you pay one dollar a month for every share that you take.—There are a number of young men, who by this means can save their money and not miss it. Those who are not of age can have their parents subscribe for them, and thus realize the same as a regular member. It ought not to require much effort to get up 500 shares if all do their duty. And no one should hesitate because it is a good investment, better than a savings bank because interest is paid monthly instead of yearly. A committee has been appointed to solicit subscriptions to capital stock, and a meeting is to be held at Guy Plum's office, in the Court House, next Saturday evening, and every body who can should be present, as they may desire to organize. Let everybody turn out.

THE CONCERT.

The Concert by the members of the musical convention, under the leadership of Prof. Straub, of Lansing, Mich., came off last Friday evening at the Court House before the largest audience, perhaps, that has ever assembled in this place for a similar purpose before. Many of our friends from the country and adjoining towns flocked in until the large court room was comfortably filled. The class, composed of about eighty singers, had been under instructions about two weeks yet each singer gave forth evidence of having good culture and training, even for that short period. Every pupil felt that they had made rapid progress in the musical art, and are not slow to express their high opinion of Prof. Straub, and the thorough system which he introduced.

There were choruses, quartetts, duets, songs, etc., all of which were rendered in an admirable, pleasant and effective manner, and the audience was not slow to appreciate to judge from the liberal applause manifested.

There were several singers from abroad, Mr. Treesh, Shaffer and several young ladies from Sedan. Mr. Bacon and others from Butler Center, and Mr. Snyder, from Harlan, all of whom contributed to the success of the entertainment.

It is now proposed to get up a four days County Convention and have the best talent of the county assemble here for special instruction by the Professor. This will only include those who have already some practice, and can read music. It is thought that it can be arranged so that the tuition will be quite reasonable, and arrangements will be made by the citizens here to provide for those from abroad so that they will be at no expense while here Prof. Straub has left so good an impression wherever he has been, that all are anxious to have him direct this convention, and we doubt not but that he can and will do it to the satisfaction of all. A committee has been appointed to ascertain the desire of our friends in other towns, and we hope they will meet every encouragement.

Do You Take The Union.

The Valparaiso Messenger in response to some remarks says, of us: "The Union is one of the best democratic papers in the State and deserves the support of every Democrat in St. Joseph county.—The better the support the better the paper can be made. Let Democrats support their local press."

But we do not have the support of every Democrat in this county, although there is no other Democratic paper published here. Not even one third of the Democrats in this county are taking their county paper. We must candidly say to them it is a shame and disgrace. If Democrats in this county will do their duty we can make a paper that will be a source of pride and profit to all.—South Bend Union.

And such is the case in almost every county. Democrats are slow to patronize their own county papers. There are over one thousand in this county that do not take the COURIER, and yet they expect a paper to be published for the good of the party. While they subscribe largely for eastern papers, they manifest no interest for county papers.

We know of one or two Democrats that have stopped the COURIER, and subscribed for the Day Book, or some other city paper, because it did not cost so much.

Now, if the Democratic party of this county don't want a paper published in their interest, we want to know it, and we'll move our material to some point where they do. We can't work for nothing, just for the fun of it, and we don't propose to. There are quite a number of generous, whole-souled Democrats here, who have stood by us like men, and if we had a few more such there would be no fear of a paper prospering in this county. Democrats all over the county interest themselves in getting up clubs for city papers, but how much of an effort is made for their county paper? And this year above all others should find Democratic papers largely patronized, for it is through this party and a few of the honest Republicans that the great corruption and profligacy of the present administration is to be corrected, by the over-throw of Grant himself. Then, gentlemen, it is high time you were doing something for your county paper, it is not too late yet.

Smith & Hare sell Queensware at very low figures.

Still Another.

We find the following in the Kendallville Standard of last week:

"The road to commence at Newark, Licking county, Ohio, and passing Delaware, Richmond, Kenton, Ada, Columbus, Grove, Kalida, Paulding, Antwerp, Auburn, Kendallville, Goshen, Elkhart, Niles, and terminating at St. Joseph, in the State of Michigan. There was a meeting held at Delaware, and other points, last spring, for the purpose of organizing a company to building a road on a portion of this same route, but passing Bryan in place of Kendallville, and terminating at Grand Haven, in Michigan, but they failed to fully organize. Since then a company has been organized to build a road from Columbus, Ohio passing Lima, Defiance and Bryan, thus cutting off the route contemplated for the former road from Newark. Now, if the people in those towns in Indiana mentioned in this proposed road will unite with those of Ohio and organize for the purpose of building the road from Newark to St. Joseph, I think there is no doubt such a road would be built. The people along this line should loose no time, but attend to this matter as soon as possible—the sooner and better

Fire at Monroeville.

Last Thursday night a fire broke out at 10½ o'clock, in Keint & Kennedy's bakery, in Monroeville, Allen County, a one story frame building situated on Main street, one door north of the Democrat office.

The flames were quickly communicated to the adjoining buildings, and by two o'clock a. m., the entire block was consumed.

The following is a list of the losers:

Baker Brothers, grocers	$4 000
D. A. Row, boot & shoe store	900
T. H. Foster, printing house	2 000
Thomas Ryerson's building	300
G. A. Conrad, boot & shoe store	1 000
Monroe House	3 000
C. H. Schick's building	4 600
M. Heller, dry goods store	1 000
J. M. Miller, saloon	500
Total	$16 700

There was not a cent of insurance on any of the buildings.

"Therefore are They Before the Throne of God"—Rev. VII, 15.

BY P. V. HOFFMAN.

The good shall stand before the great white throne
The pure in heart shall wear the lily robe
Of spotless white. The victors over self
And sin, shall wear the mitre and the crown,
And wave the scepter through eternity
The path is narrow and the gate is straight
That leads unto the Father's house. And they
Who enter in must tread the way by prayer,
Must lean upon His arm, who gave himself
To save his own from death; must walk by faith
And not by sight. And when they fall, must rise
Again by prayer. And He will give them strength
To tread down all their foes. The stubborn heart
All black with sin and haste, will make to glow
With love for fallen man; the selfish soul
Will change to feel another's woe. And then.
The fountain pure, the stream that [illegible]
Must bless the world where e'er it flows. They work
[illegible] by prayer. They feed the poor
That hunger here below; yet more they strive
To give the bread of life to those who starve
Their spirits for the wisdom from on high.
God's children seek the hut and rich man's hall,
Where sickness pales the cheek of youth and chills
The brow of age, to cool the burning lips
And smooth the pillow of the sufferers there.
They lift the fallen from the depths of crime,
And teach them how to live, and how to die.
They build the church and rear the dome to make
A house where God shall deign to meet with them
In warmest love, and place their slipping feet
Upon the steadfast rock. Their love takes wings
Of light and soars across the land and sea
To where the Birman worship wood and stone,
Or Hindoo casts his babe in Gange's flood
To still the anger of his heathen god.
And missionaries labor there to sow the seed
Of life and truth; to plant the cross, and point
The dying to the Lamb of God. And then
When many years are passed and yet no life
'Tis seen, they sow again the precious seed
And water it with tears. At last the blade
Is seen, and soon the stock, and now we see
The desert white with sheaves and hear the song
Of India's children coming from afar
To sit with Jacob's God. And thus it is
The faithful toil to do the Master's will,
And thus they live to make life glorious.
And when the king of saints shall come to take
His Israel home, they round his throne shall stand;
Some far, some near, according to their works.

Town Survey.

MR. EDITOR:—I see by a notice published in your last issue, that the Board of Trustees of our town has employed or ordered H. C. Peterson, Esq., our County Surveyor, to survey the original plat and Spencer's addition of our town. The notice does not state the reason of such survey, nor am I informed as to its purposes. Now, by what authority the Board of Trustees have employed a surveyor to survey my property, I know not, nor can I imagine. If they have a right to survey this town and ascertain the location of lots or part of lots, they may change the original corner, or lines, six inches, and if they can change it six inches, they can change it six feet, or six hundred feet.

Now, I most solemnly protest against this action and give the Board and the Surveyor notice that I will not in any way recognize their survey or pay one cent for it, from the simple reason I do not want or desire it, and that they have no legal right to establish my lines or cornes. I think it a put up job to make buiness, and a fee for a surveyor. Of course I do say that Mr. Perterson had a hand in getting up this thing, for that would be dishonorable, but under the fee bill if there are five hundred lots in those plats, his fees would amount to over one hundred and twenty five dollars, to say nothing of chainmen, axemen &c. The Town Board should re-consider their action in this regard.

Messers Wood & Williams successors to J. W. Case, are making preperations to open a fine and complete assortment of Spring goods, and will be enabled to offer rare bargains to their customers. They are men of experience and reliability, and having recently come among us, we trust that they will meet with a liberal patronage.

SHERIFF PLUM returned from Indianapolis last weak bringing with him two inmates of the asylum at that place, Mrs. Francis Burtneil of Fairfield township and Edwin Howgett of Wilmington.

Mysterious.

THE Columbia City Post, of last week, gives account of the sudden and strange disappearance of the Hon. John S. Cotton, a resident of that township, from his family. On Saturday morning, March 2, after eating his breakfast as usual, although a little earlier than common, from the fact that himself and wife had spent the entire night watching at the bed side of a grand child, he informed his wife that he believed he would saddle his horse and take a trip during the day to the west part of the county for the purpose of collecting some old claims due him that part of the county. After getting his horse out he bade his wife a fond and affectionate adieu, and informed her when about to start, that she need not expect him home until late at night. Several old friends between this place and Larwell met him as he was proceeding westward and conversed with him noticing nothing unusual in his manner or conversation. The last seen of him on the day aboved mentioned was about a half mile south of Pierceton, where a considerable number of his old friends were attending a public sale. Since that time nothing has been seen or heard of him at any point, although his wife, son, brothers and friends have been diligently searching for him. All trace seems to have been lost of his whereabouts. His wife, thinking that he might have gone on a visit to a daughter, in Illinois, repaired thither by rail last week, but failed to find him there after waiting several days for his coming. His failure to visit the parties against whom he had the claims, which he informed his wife he desired to collect; his strange and reserved seclusion in his home for several months together with the ill health with which he has suffered for a year past, excite the gravest apprehension that he may have left his home in an aberrated condition of the mind.

Mr. Cotton, has for many years past been one of the most prominent and popular men in the county, and has held many positions of honor and trust at the hands of our people.

THE Methodist church in this city, was burned last Thursday night. There had been prayer meeting in the new addition built on the back end of the church, that evening, and the fire must have caught from some defect in the chimney, or from stove. The alarm was given about twelve o'clock, but the fire had made so much headway that it was impossible to check it. The organ, seats, etc., were removed but the building and bell were a total loss. The bell was melted where it hung and the metal ran down in streams. The church had been built about thirteen years, and was a heavy timber frame, making a very hot fire. Fortunately the buildings were mostly covered with snow, and the wind favorable, so that there was not much danger of the fire spreading. There was an insurance of $3,000 on the building, which is probably about all it was worth; but the inconvenience of being without a church until a new one can be built, is considerable.—Kendallville Standard.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and he having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation it justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine the mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ROTHSCHILD & BROS.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers; equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address [illegible], Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 12 Lloyds St. Buffalo, N. Y., or E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York: "Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool cassimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $18,00, custom made $18,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

The election in New Hampshire has settled two things. It has removed the faintest shadow of a doubt as to Grant's renomination at Philadelphia; and it has proved that the Democratic party, acting by itself and according to its old ideas, has not the ghost of a chance for carrying the Presidential election.—New York Sun.

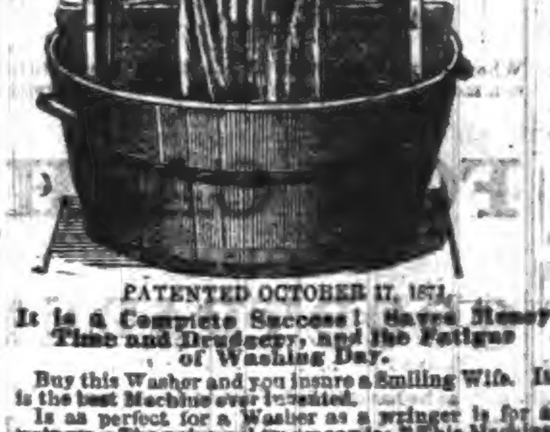
CALKINS'. CHAMPION WASHER



PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever Invented.

Is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver. Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers CALKINS BROS. & CO.,
39 S. Canal St., Chicago, Illinois.

'Don't be afraid,' replied he, 'I am as much ashamed of it as you are.' That set tled it.

Letter to Farmers.

Beloved Farmers:—Agrikultur is the mother ov farm produce; she is also the step mother ov gardin sass.

Rise at half past 2 o'clock in the morning, bild up a big fire in the kitchen, burn out two pouds of kandles an l grease yure boots.

Wait pashuntly for da brake. When day dus brake, then commense tew stir up the geese and worry the hogs.

Too much sleep is ruinous tew geese and hogs. Remember yu kant git rich on a farm, unless yu rize at 2 o'clock in the morning and stir up the hogs and worry the geese.

The happiest man in the world is the farmer; he rizes at 2 o'clock in the morning, he watches for da lite tew brake, and when she dus break, he goes out and stirs up the geese and worrys the hogs.

What is a lawyer? What is a merchant What is a doktor? What is a minister? I answer, nothing.

A farmer is the nobless work ov God; he rises at 2 o'clock in the morning, and burns out haff pould ov wood and two kords ov kandles, and then goes out tew worry the geese and then stir up all ov the hogs.

Beloved farmers, adew.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

IT Gathers, Cords, Quilts, Frills, Hems, Fells, Tucks, Braids, Plaits, Ruffles, Puffs.

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

'Never mind the obituary, Judge,' said a Montana culprit, when the court became pathetic in pronouncing the sentence. 'Let's fix the time for the funeral.'

A Danbury German is named Wachschleighemshamel. How would you like to stand on a back stoop with the thermometer 11 degrees below zero, and call that chap into breakfast?

A Missouri woman recently eloped, leaving the following note to comfort her husband; 'Dear William—Good bye; don't mourn for the children, because none of them are yours.'

The America sojourners at Pompeti are preparing a grand reception for Gen. Sherman. Pompeii is a town whose inhabitants were burned out some time since and did'nt resurgam to any great extent.

Postsmouth, N. H., has a dog that chews tobacco and takes his 'tods' as regularly as he get them. It is noticeable, however, that no respectable dog in the neighborhood will associate with him.

Indianapolis has a self sacrificing Bohemain and a model husband in the person of M. G. Lee, of the Commercial. One of the daily journals of that city announces that the said Lee 'has gone South for the benefit of his wife's health.

A mammouth cave, the rival of the Kentucky phenomenon, is reported in Grant county, Wis. It is said to contain oceans of water, and adventurous parties have rowed in boats to a great distance within the cave. Considerable mineral wealth is also reported.

The shoe factories at Auburn, Me., are turning out over 100 pairs of shoes an hour, and it takes about 500 barrels of flour annually to make the paste used in them.

'I think,' said a farmer, 'I should make a good Congressman, for I use their language. I received two bills the other day with requests for immediate payment; the one I ordered to be laid on the table; the other to be read that day six months.'

'My son,' said a good mtoher to her hopeful, 'did you wish your teacher a happy New Year?' 'No, ma'am,' responded the boy. 'Well, why not?' 'Because,' said the youth, 'she isn't happy unless she's whipping some of us boys, and I was afrid if I wished her happiness, she'd go for me.'

Smith thought it was morally wrong to take the animals for food, and he resolved to quit it and live on vegetables. But one morning he gave way to temptation and walked into a beef-steak. 'I don't know,' said he, 'that it's any harm to eat a piece of this cow, since it's dead and the matter can't be helped; but I'll be hanged if ever kill one!'

The only mention of paper money in the Bible is where it says a dove brought the green back to Noah.

'What's in a dress?' says a popular writer.—Sometimes a great deal and sometimes a precious little.

'We shall not be open to-morrow,' said a Parisian shop keeper to a Yankee customer. 'Ah!' said American, 'can you tell me from where does the balloon go up?'

Smith and Jones were at the menagerie and the conversation turned on Darwin's theory. 'Look at that monkey,' said Smith 'Think of its being an undeveloped human!' 'Human!' said Jones, 'It's no more human than I am.'

'Gerty, my dear,' said a teacher to one of her pupils, 'you have been a very good little girl to-day.' 'Yes'm, I couldn't help being good; I had a stiff nech,' said Gerty with perfect seriousness.

BOUND TO PLEASE HER.—A bashful young man was escorting a bashful young ady, when she said, entreatingly, 'Jabez, don't tell any body you beaued me home to-night.'

'Don't be afraid,' replied he, 'I am as much ashamed of it as you are.' That settled it.

Letter to Farmers.

BELOVED FARMERS:—Agrikultur iz the mother ov farm produce; she iz also the step mother ov gardin sass.

Rise at half past 2 o'clock in the morning, bild up a big fire in the kitchen, burn out two pouds of kandles an l grease yure boots.

Wait pashuntly for da brake. When day duz brake, then commense tew stir up the geese and worry the hogs.

Too much sleep iz ruinous tew geese and hogs. Remember yu kant git rich on a farm, unless yu rize at 2 o'clock in the morning and stir up the hogs and worry the geese.

The happiest man in the worlo iz the farmer; he rizes at 2 o'clock in the morning, he watches for da lite tew brake, and when she duz break, he goes out and stirs up the geese and worrys the hogs.

What is a lawyer? What is a merchant What iz a doktor? What is a minister? I answer, nothing.

A farmer is the nobless work ov God; he rises at 2 o'clock in the morning, and burns out haff pould ov wood and two kords ov kandles, and then goes out tew worry the geese and then stir up all ov the hogs.

Beloved farmers, adew.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois was as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Line, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas city, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

AN "ECHO."

Under that tree! Well, sit ye down!
It has grown hot since we left town.

You'd like to hear the tail I'd tell
Of Mary Jane, of Cowslip Dell!

You see cottage there in view,
The smoke up-rising in the blue,

Ah, many a hope too bright to last!
But let that go! 'Tis past long past!

Yet somehow when the fields are green—
There take a bite!—there's ham between.

Well, I went courtin' Mary Jane,
Who bloomed and blushed in Cowslip lane.

She said me 'Nay,' but with a smile
That told it was humbug all the while.

And hopping still, I still loved on,
Till in between came brother John.

One night he swore a dreadful oath,
If she said yes he'd kill us both.

[By both himself and me, I mean,]
And since that time he's not been seen.

And Mary Jane has still denied
My prayer that she would be my bride.

Lest she, through love's assent, should be.
The murderer of himself and me.

Why what's the matter man! Look here
It is, by George, it is a tear!

No, you don't mean so! Well I swan
If you ain't him—that lost John!

The Three Coachmen.

I heard the story a long time ago, and think it good enough to tell,—and not only good but pointing a life lesson which the wise may heed.

A certain gentleman advertised for a coachman, and among the numerous applicants who answered the call he found three who evinced a sufficient knowledge of their business to suit him, and from these three he would select his man. For the final test he took them to a point on his preises where a broad table of rock overlooked a deep chasm.

'How near,' said he, to Shawny McLean 'could you drive a coach and four to the edge of that precipice without the danger of going off?'

Sawny measured the table with his eye, and looked down into the deep chasm undaunted.

'I could drive within a foot of it, sir,' was his emphatic answer.

He next put the question to Mr. John York.

John looked and answered with prompt assurance

'I could drive within ten inches of it, sir.'

Next came Barney O'Toole, and he was asked how near he could drive a steady double span to the edge of the precipice with assurance of safety.

Bedad yer honor,' said Barney, after due consideration, 'them fellows bate me inthirely. I should kape me horses as far from such a place as possible!

It may be needless to add that Barney was chosen. C.

Putting the Best Face Upon.

Stiggles was met by an old friend the other day whom he had not seen for several years.

'Bless me Stiggles, old boy. I'm glad to see you. You are looking well. How is it with you?'

'Fair to middling.'

'Married yet?'

'Yes.'

'That's good.'

'Not so very good. I married a shrew.'

'Ah—that's bad.'

'Not very bad. She brough me ten thous and dollars.

'That's a good fortune.'

'Not so good; for I laid it out in sheep and they all died of the foot rot.'

'Surely that was most unfortunate.

'Not so unfortunate; for I sold the pelts for more than the sheep cost.'

'In the truth, that made ample amendment.'

'Not so much as you imagine. I laid out the money upon a house and the house burned down, with everything that was in it.'

'Bless me! that was lamentable surely.'

'Not so lamentable as it might be. My wife was in it.'

Shingle Your Own House.

Scene, bar-room. Time, midnight.

Wife—'I wish that man would go home if he has one.'

Landlord—'Hush! he'll call for something directly.'

Wife—'I wish he would make hast then for it is time that every honest man was in bed.'

Landlord—'He's taking the shingles off his own house and putting them over on ours.'

At this time James began to come to his right senses, and commenced rubbing his eyes and, stretching himself as if he had just awoke said:

'I believe I will go.'

'Don't be in a hurry James,' said the landlord.

'Oh yes, I must go,' said James, and he started.

After an absence of some time, the landlord met and accosted him:

'Hally Jim, why ain't you been down to see us?'

'Why I had taken so many shingles off my house it began to leak, so I thought it time to stop the leak, and I have done it said James.

The tavern keeper and his wife were astonished.

James is now a happy man, and his wife and children are happy.

Young man whose house are you shingling?

As a stout old lady got out of a crowded omnious in front of the Astor House the other day she exclaimed: 'Well' that's a relief anyhow.' To which the driver eyeing her ample proportions replied, 'So the osses think mum.'

A Bad Spell.

In St. Louis an order has been passed by the Board of Directors requiring that all the pupils of the public schools shall be vaccinated. Below will be found copies of a few of the notes which the children carried to their teachers in relation to the matter. They are literal copies, with the exception that the names are left out.

Bridget H——has had the small poaks last year so she does not need to be vaxinated.

Mina had the small Box.

Charles has Now need of being faxenated for he Had the small pox all ready.

Louisa Must get Waxenaigh She got Waxinergben About Tree years ago.

I testify that my son Willie is waxsionated already,

I Do Not Purfur to Have My Children Vaxinated Now.

Mrs. G. Excuse Mrs. sebert she does not want virgiena woxinated.

My Doughter was speaking about vaxinating I thought it was no use she is been vaxinating three times.

Please let him be vexinated.

Mr. Teacher you may get Stephen B—vaccinated.

A. B. B. has had the small pox; for further information call at No.—

Sir: I hereby certify that Emile T—— is twice vaxenated.

A list embracing thirty eight different ways in which the word 'vaccinate' was spelled in these notes from the parents has been prepared, and there are sixty to hear from yet.

Squire Long.

The old citizen of St. Joseph county, Ind., who don't know Esq. Long, of Mishawaka, has no claim the title of 'old citizen.' He was not always a temperance man, although he was always kind hearted and generous.

Before the Squire joined the Washingtonians, Uncle Bill Cladwell, well known in Mishawaka, was arraigned before the Squire for neglecting to pay a small debt which required a trial before a magistrate to convince him that he had ever contracted. On the day of trial the plaintiff appeared with his council and witness all under the influence of liquor. Caldwall comprehended the situation and acting as his own lawyer, asked the court for a continuance of the case, for the reason that,

First—The constable was drunk.

Second—The witnesses were drunk

Third—The plaintiff's attorney was drunk.

Fourth—The plaintiff was drunk.

Fifth—The defendant was drunk.

Sixth—That without intending to show any disrespect or contempt for the court he was compelled to say that the court was d—d drunk.

The case was continued without argument, and the Squire made the proper entry upon his docket to all of the circumstances.

Long still lives, an honest, sober, industrious citizen. Caldwell is still living—just about the same funny old jocker he was thirty years ago.—Plymouth Republican.

A Good Answer.

'Sir,' said a lad coming down a wharf in Boston, and addressing a well known merchant—'sir have you any birth for me on your ship? I want earn to a little something.'

'What can you do? Asked the gentleman.

'I can try my best to do whatever I am put to,' answered the boy.

'What have you done?'

'I have sawed and split all my mother's wood for nigh two years.'

'What have you not done?' asked the gentleman, which was a queer sort of a question.

'Well sir,' answered the boy, after a moment's pause. 'I have not whispered once in school for a year.'

'That's enough,' said the gentleman 'you may ship aboard this vessel and I hope to see you master of her some day. A boy who can master a wood pile and bridle his tongue must be made of good stuff.'

A Wine Bath.

An American traveler desiring while in Paris to take a bath, his physician recommended a wine bath. In the employ of the establishment was a colored man whom they had known in America, and of him he inquired how they could afford to give a wine bath as cheap as seventy-five cents.

'Why, massa,' said the negro, 'that wine has been in the bath room for one week, and you are the thirty-eighth person that bathed in it.'

'Well, I suppose they throw it away when they are done with it.'

'Oh! no massa; they send it down stairs for the poor people, who bath in it for 25 cents.'

'An then what do they do with it afterwards?'

'Bottle it up and send it to America, where they sell it for French wine.'

* * *

Parson—'What's a miracle?'

Boy—'Dunno.'

Parson—'Well if the sun were to shine in the middle of the night, what should you say it was?'

Boy—'The moon.'

Parson—'But if you were told it was the sun, what should you say it was?

Boy—'A lie.'

Parson—'I don't tell lies. Suppose I told you it was the sun; what would you say then?'

Boy—'That you wasn't sober.'

Sheep's Wit.

A Scotch law lord was seated one day on the hillside of Bonally with a Scotch shepheard, and observing the sheep reposing in what he thought the coldest situation, he observed to him, 'John if I were a sheep I would lie on the other side of the hill.' The shepherd answered: 'Ay my loard, but if ye had been a sheep ye wad have had mair sense.'

FOOLING A PIRATE.

There lived many years ago, on the eastern shore of Mount Desert, a large island off the coast of Maine (a now fashionable place summer resort) an old fisherman by the name of Jedediah Spinnet, who owned a schooner of some hundred tons burthen, in wihch, together with four stout sons, he was to go about once a year to the Grand Bank for the purpose of catching codfish. The old man had five things about which he loved to boast—his schooner 'Betsy Jenkins' and his four sons.

The sons were all that the father represented them to be, and no one ever doubted his word when he said that their like was not to be found for fifty miles around. The oldest was twenty two, while the youngest had reached his sixteenth year, and they answered to the names of Seth, Andrew, John and Samuel.

One morning a stranger called upon Jedediah, to engage him to take to Havana some iron machinery belonging to steam engines for sugar plantations; the terms were soon agreed upon, and the old man and his sons immediately set about, putting the machinery on board; that accomplished, they set sail for Havana, with a fair wind, and for several days proceeded on their course without an adventure of any kind. One morning, however, a vessel was descried off the starboard quarter, which with some hesitation the old man pronounced to be a pirate. There was not much time for doubting for the vessel soon saluted them with a not very agreeble whizzing of an eighteen pound shot just under the stern.

'That means for usheave to,' remarked the old man.

'Then I guess we had better do it, hadn't we?' said Seth.

'Of course.'

Accordingly the 'Betsy Jenkins' was brought up into the wind, and her main boom hauled over to windward.

'Now boys,' said the old man, as soon as the schooners had come to stand, 'all we can do is to be as cool as possible, and trust to fortune. There is no way to escape that I see now but perhaps if we are civil, they will take such stuff as they want, and let us go. At any rate there is no use crying about it, for it can't be helped. Now, get your pistols and see that they are surely loaded, and have your knives ready, but be sure and hide them, so that the pirates shall see no signs of resistance. I few moments all the arms which the schooner afforded with exception of one or two old muskets, were secured about the person of on Down Easters, and they quietly awited the coming of the schooner.

'One word more boys,' said the old man, just as the pirate came round under the stern. 'Now watch every motion I make, and be ready to jump the moment I speak.'

As Captain Spinnet ceased speaking the pirate luffed up under the fisherman's lee quarter, and in a moment more the latter's deck was graced by the presence of a dozen as savage looking mortals as ever eyes looked upon.

'Are you the Captain of this vessel?' asked the leader of the boarders, as he approached the old man.

'Yes sir.'

'What is your cargo?'

'Machinery for steam engines.'

'Nothing else?' asked the pirate with a searching look.

At this moment Captain Spinnet's eye caught what looked like a sail off to the south and east'rd but not a sign betrayed the discovery, and while a brilliant idea shot through his mind he hesitatingly replied;

'Well there is a little something else.'

'Ha, what is it?'

'Why sir, p'raps I had't ought to tell,' said Captain Spinnet, counterfeiting the most extreme perturbation; 'Yer see it was giving me a sort of trust, and it wouldn't be right for me give it up. You can take anything else you please, for I can't help myself.'

'You are an honest codger at any rate,' said the pirate; 'but if you would live ten minutes longer, just let me know what you've got on board and exactly the place where it lays.'

The sight of a cocked pistol brought the old captain to his senses, and in a deprecating tone, he muttered—

'Don't kill me sir, don't, I'il tell all. We've got forty thousand silver dollars nailed up in boxes just for'ard o' the cabin bulkhead, but Mr. Defore didn't suspect any body would have thought of lookng for it there.'

'Perhaps so,' chuckled the pirate, while his eyes sparkled with delight. And then turning to his own vessel, he ordered all but three of his men to jump on board the Yankee.

In a few minutes the pirates had taken off the hatches, and in their haste to get at the 'silver dollars,' they forgot all else; but not so with Spinnet he had his wit at work, and no sooner had the last of the villain disappeared below the hatchway than he turned to his boys.

'Now, boys, for your lives. Seth you clap your knife across the for end peak halyards, and you, John cut the main. Be quick now, and the moment you have done it jump aboard the pirate. Andrew and Sam, you cast off the pirate's grapplings, and then you jump—then we'll walk into them three chaps aboard the clipper. Now for it.'

No sooner were the words out of the old man's mouth, than his sons did exactly as they were directed. The fore and main halyards were cut, and the two grapplings cast off at the same instant, and as the heavy gaffs came rattling down, our heroes leaped on board the pirate. The moment the clipper felt at liberty, she had swung off, and before the astonished buccaneers could gain the deck of the fisherman, their own vessel was near half a cable's length to the leeward, sweeping gracefull away before the wind, while the three men who had been left in charge were easily secured.

'Halloa, there!' shouted Captain Spinnet, at the luckless pirates crowded around the lee gangway of their prize, 'when you get them 'ere silver dollars, just let us know will you?'

Half a dozen pistol shots was all the answer the old man got, but they did him no harm; and crowding on sail, he made for the vessel he had discovered, which dead to leeward of him, and which he now made out to be a large ship. The clipper cut through the water like a dolphin, and in a short space of time Spinnet luffed up under the ship's stern, and explained all that had happened. The ship proved to be an East Indiaman, bound for Charleston having, all told, thirty men on board, a portion of whom at once jumped into the clipper and offered their services in helping to take the pirates.

Before dark Captain Spinnet was once more within hailing distance of his own vessel, and raising a trumpet to his mouth, he shouted;

'Schooner ahoy! will you quietly surreud yourselves prisoners if we come on board?'

'Come and try it!' returned the pirate captain, as he brandished his cutlass above his head in a very threatening manner, which seemed to idicate that he would fight to the last.

But that his last moment; for Seth crouched below the bulyarks, taking deliberate aim along the barrel of a heavy rifle, and the bloody villain was in the act of turning to his men, the sharp crack of Seth Spinnet's weapon rang its death peal, and the next moment the pirate captain fell back into the men, with a brace of bullets through his heart.

'Now,' said the old man, as he leveled the long pivot gun, and seized a lighted match, 'I'll give you just five minutes to make up your minds in, and if you don't surrender, I'll blow every one of you into the world.'

The death of their captain, and with all, the sight of the pointed pivot gun—the peculiar properties of which they knew full well—brought the pirates to their senses, and they threw down their weapons and agreed to give themselves up.

In two days from that time Captain Spinnet delivered his cargo safely at Havana, gave the privates into the hands of the civil authorities, and delivered the clipper up to the govenment, in return for which he received a sum of money sufficient for independence for the remainder of his life, as well as a very handsome medal from the Governor.

Swallow a Man.

John Thomas was a man of keen wit, and strongly tinctured with a love of the humorous. He had been down to Concord, and had seen the Fakir of Ava perform his wondeful tricks of ledgerdemain. He was relating his experience in the barroom of the Conway House, and among other things he declared that he had gained an insight into many of the magician's manipulations, and that several of the most wonderful tricks he could performed himself.

'For instance,' said he, 'I can swallow a man whole.'

'Bah!' cried Tom Staples, a red faced woodsman, weighing at least two hundred; 'p'r'aps you could swallow me?'

'Yes.'

'I'd like to see you do it.'

'I can do it.'

'I'll bet fifty dollars you can't.'

'I'll take that bet.'

'Then let's see you begin.'

'Not now. I have just eaten supper. I will do it to morrow morning, in the presence of as many witnesses as you choose; and it shall be done in the Square in front of the hotel.'

This was agreed to, and the money was put up. By the following morning the news that John Thomas was to swallow Tom Staples whole had become widespread and a vast concourse, embracing men, women, and children, had assembled to witness the wonderful feat.

At the appointed time the chief actors appeared in the square. John Tohomas was smiling confidently, as though sure of success; while Tom Staples looked a little timid and uneasy, as though not quite at rest concerning what was to become of him.

'Are you ready?' asked John.

'All ready,' answered Tom. 'Begin as soon as you please.'

'Will you have the goodness to take off your hat?'

'Sartin.'

'Now your boots.'

Tom removed his boots.

'Next you will remove your coat.—Those big brass buttons might stick in my throat.'

Tom took off his coat; and as he threw it upon the ground one of the cooks came out from the hotel with a pail of melted lard and a big whitewash brush, which he deposited by the side of John Thomas

'Now,' pursued John, 'You will take off your stockings, and then remove your pantaloons and shirt."

'Eh? D'ye mean for me to strip start naked?' queried Tom, aghast.

'Of course I do. The agreement was that I was to swallow you. You are meat, but your clothes aren't, nor were they in the bond. If you will strip I will give you a thorough greasing, and double the bet if you wish.—I know I can swallow you—or, at al events, I can try!"

Tom gave up beat, and invited his friends into the hotel.

A Modern 'Plea.'

A French paper gives the 'plea' of the counsel in Fisk-Stokes case, as follows:

I. To prove an aliable, and to show that Stokes was in the United States, when James Fisk the younger was killed.

II. To prove that Stokes never carried a pistol, or that if he did carry a pistol it was never loaded, and never fired.

III. That Stokes killed Fisk in legitimate self-defense.

IV. That Fisk carried a Gatling gun in his pocket.

V. That Fisk re-organized the Ninth Regiment for the sole and avowed purpose of making war on Stokes.

VI. That Fisk destroyed the peace and happiness of Stokes' home, and that consequently the homicide—if there was any homicied—was legitimate and a sacred duty of Stokes."

VII. That Fisk was a bad man, and it was a good act to put him out of the way.

VIII. That Stokes was insane when he fired at Fisk, and was not responsible for his action.

IX. That Fisk did not die from injuries inflicted by Stokes.

X. That Fisk was killed by the ignorance of his doctor.

XI. That Fisk was not wounded at all.

XII. That Fisk died a natural death.

Grant's majority in New Hampshire in 1868 was 6,977. One-third of that figure is a great victory now.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAR. 28, 1872.

The Pittsburg Post thinks that, as pecuniary considerations controlled Grant in accepting the Presidency, the easiest way to get rid of him would be to buy him out.

Governor Palmer, of Illinois, has notified Governor Baker that the Illinois Legislature has passed a resolution instructing the Canal Commissioners to remove the Calumet Dam without delay.

It is rumored now that General Grant will decline the Philadelphia nomination. This rumor will start anew the exciting and interesting discussion as to whether a duck will swim.

The New York Trbune claims that the anti-Grant element in the Radical party hold the balance of power in New Hampshire, and could have defeated Straw had they been disposed to do so. But will they save the State from Grant?

Mr. Greeley says that if 'the Cincinnati Convention adopts an anti-tariff plank he can be counted out.' There is no necessity of having any platform at all, except opposition to stealing and opposition to Grant, which are one and the same.

Since the close of the war $11,000,000 has been added to the debt of South Carolina, according to the report of the Congressional Ku-Klux Committee, and less than one-tenth of this enormous amount of money has been spent for legitimate purposes.

Senator Sumner is reported as saying that he receives a vast number of private letters daily from the most prominent and respectable Republicans in Massachusetts protesting against Grant's renomination, and expresing good wishes for the Cincinnati Convention.

Here is a pious measure—to be sung in short meter—that is recommended to Gov. Tom Brown—with an e. It comes from a good orthodox source—no less than a bishop—and it is 'meet' that Tom should learn it:

'I cannot eat but little meat,
My stomach is not good;
But sure I think that I can drink
With him that wears a hood.'

Sing!

The Cincinnati Commercial says:

A good platform for the Cincinnati Convention would be:

'Resolved, That we are in favor of the United States under a republican form of government, and opposed to the administration of a military ring.'

That's enough.

Senator Grimes of Iowa said a few days before his death:

'In ability this Administration is the most pusillanimous and contemptible, and in morals the most corrupt and rotten which ever disgraced the American people, and it would be ruinous to the country and the overthrow of the Republican party, to nominate or reelect Grant to the Presidency.'

Michigan sends the latest case of canine inteligence. A storekeeper at the town of Quincy having a pup that habitually upset the paint cans in the rear of the store, rubbed the dog's nose in the spilled paint as a reminder that he must not do so again. Last week the animal again spilled the paint, and, observing that his master was engaged in waiting on a customer, rubbed his own nose in the mixture and ran howling out the back way.

Wendell Philips on Tom Scott: 'Your great fellow-citizen, whom some people irreverently call Tom Scott, is at the head of a company controlling $350,000,000. He places one hand on the Atlantic and the other on the Pacific; his influence extends from Saginaw to Mobile, and when he walks eastward from the Golden Gate the wind of his coat-tails. topple over a State Legislature at every stride.

The Democratic papers not only quote extensively from the New York Tribune, but 'display' the articles by setting them in capital letters; especially when the the Tribune tells as big a lie as did when it stated that 'the Government armories were employed by Gen. Grant's Administration, to manufacture cartridges for use of the French in the aggressive war they opened in 1870 against the Germans.' This statement is credited to the New York Tribune. That paper publishes many foolish, silly and wicked lies, promulgated by the jealous old granny and dotard who presides over its columns, but we doubt whether it ever told so silly a lie as the above. The assertion should be taken with a 'Liberal' construction.—Kendallville Standard.

Now that Greeley has denounced the rottenness and corruption of the Radical party, he is called by the above names, though they have heralded him heretofore as the great and honest Horace, who never knew no guile. When Brick Pomeroy denounced the corruption in his own party in New York, his own party papers endorsed him, but when the great and good Horace Greeley, comes down on the maladministration of Grant, those little papers that were wanted to bark their approval as of old, now howl dismally, and call him a liar and dotard. How many farmers in this State believe that Horace Greeley is a liar and dotard.—Rise and explain next October.

It will be remembered that during the reign of Republicans in this State, a Sinking Fund amounting to over $500,000 accumulated in the hands of the State Auditor, which, according to law, should have been distributed to the various counties, as a school fund. This was not done by the last Republican Auditor, nor his predecessors, yet the money was in their hands, and it has been ascertained that they have realized nearly $40,000 as interest on this amount annually, by depositing it in banks and with their friends.—Hence the result under Radical rule was that the tax-payers of Indiana had to contribute $40,000 more than were required, to fill the pockets of these officers. But no sooner is a Democrat elected to fill this position than a change takes place. Hon. John C. Shoemaker, is now engaged in distributing this money to the different counties, as is his bounden duty. How does that compare with Radical rule? Farmers, tax-payers, think of it, and when you come to vote, remember those who have worked for your interest.

Henry Ward Beecher, in a column editorial in the Christian Union makes use of the following truthful paragraph as spice for the whole article:

'Many of the Southern Legislatures have been fields for wildest and grossest bribery. There are a handful of Southern Governors who are as hopeful candidates for the penitentiary as even New York city could produce for its offial plunders. Communities already exhausted almost to the lowest point by the burden of an unsuccessful war. have have been overtaxed, robbed, and made the louest political adventurers. In several cases repudiation comes as the natural consequence. Added to the financial burden and disgrace, has been the humilitation of seeing the places of trust largely filled by men whose ignorance and knavery were equally great.'

In his opinion in the Milligan case, Judge Davis expresed the following sound sentiment:

'This Constitution of the United States is a law for rulers and people equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes ofmen, at all times and under all circumstances. No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented by the wit of man than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the exigencies of the government.—Such a doctrive leads directly to anarchy and despotism, but the theory of necessity on which it is based is false, for the government within the Constitution has all the powers granted to it which are necessary to preserve its existence, as has been happily proved by the result of the great efforts to throw off its just authority.'

It is very significant to notice the comments of the various journals throgh out the country upon the nominations of the Labor Reform Convention. Without reference to party, and only with such exceptions as are bound hand foot to the Administration, the acknowledgements of the distinguished merits of Judge Davis and Governor Parker have been of the warmest and most enthusiastic kind. Newspapers of such varied, sentiments as the New York Tribune, New York Sun, the Brooklyn Eagle, in New York Express, Chicago Times, and of many other journals, both Republican and Democratic,—all over the country, unite in speaking of these gentlemen in terms of sincere respect. It is more significant that the Democratic journals have all joined in this Democratic tribute, and it seems to indicate that Judge Davis will be, so far as they are concerned, the most acceptable candidate that the Cincinnati Convention could put in nomination.

Tragedy at Dayton Ohio.

The following particulars are fornished of the tragedy which occured at Dayton, O., on the 9th instant: The murder was committed by the father, Leonard Marquaad, who is evidently insane from spiritualism. The story of the affair which the man himself tells, is, that a few days ago he read a chapter to his family from the bible, and then, rising up, accused his wife of being a witch and using whitchcraft.—He says that his oldest daughter confirmed him in the accusation. He says also that on Saturday night he told his wife that he wanted their children to leave; that both he and his wife stripped themselves naked and knelt down and prayed for 15 minutes. They then stripped two children, took them out and drowned them and laid them side by side on the bank of a stream.—They then dashed out the brains of their infant, and left it lying in the woods, after which they returned home and went to bed. After lying there 15 minutes he told his wife that he wanted to send her to heaven also, and immediately fell upon her and strangled her to death. After that, he arose and prayed till 2 o'clock in the morning, when he went to the nearest neighbor, and told the whole story. Marquand is a German farmer, and has been in the country about 18 years.—The murdered woman was his second wife.

Gov. Gratz Brown on the Cincinnati Convention.

The friends of Governor Brown gave him a complimentary serenade at the Missouri State capital on the evening of Washington's birthday, and called him out in a speech in which he set forth his views on pending public questions with great freedom and boldness. We copy the concluding paragraphs in which he touches upon the Cincinnati Convention:

And now before closing these hasty remarks, let me advert to one other topic. All this controversy which excited such attention here from the pronounced manner in which the issues were developed, has gone forth into the arena of the nation at large. The same evils of executive domination have become so apparent as to evoke a large protest from republicans in almost every State that it was deemed necesary to subdue. This had led to extend organization on thhe part of the liberal republicans, and a call to meet in national convention at Cincinnati on May 1. There is alarm in high quarters at that call, and the storm signal has been set from the mast head. The result is a varied and persistent attempt to mislead the public as to the purpose and meeting of that convention. The press, the telegraph, private announcement, and all the arts of political strategy are used to give out an impression that it has been adjourned, that it won't take action, that no one will attend. Now I desire to put the minds of our radical friends, many of whom I see here tonight, at rest on the this subject of their daily scheming and nightly dreaming. I desire furthermore by this statement, so far as my voice can reach elsewhere, to reassure the liberalists of other States, that they need not be misled by any such reports.

The liberal republican convention will meet in the City of Cincinnati on the first day of May, and rest assured it will then and there take full account of this attempted prostitution of the republican party to the corrupt service of one man. From an extended correspondence by the committee in charge, I am assured that it will be largely attended and will have to assist in its deliberations many of the first statesmen of the nation—tried heroes of the long anti slavery controversy, and equally heroes to-day in the conflict to sustain the freedom of all against a despotic system of central authority. You will have every state outside of New England, and several from there, largely represented by well-accredited republicans, earnest in their faith of reform. And when they gather there, my friends, I venture the prediction they will give a good account of themselves and shape out work that will give the office-holders double duty until November next. (Cheers.) There will be no faltering, no halting between two opinions, but only manifest the stern purpose of men who know what duty demands of them, and who mean to do it; who realize how much stronger before the uncorrupted people is patriotism than any power of patronage, and who have developed enough of manhood in the grave conflicts of the past score of years not to fear now when the very liberties for which they fought are so much endangered. (Loud cheers.)

The slight "unpleasantness" lately indulged in by a number of Democratic papers in this District relative to Col. McDonald and Mr. Stoll has ceased. The action of the Colonel in this matter, and especially at its close, was manly, honorable and praiseworthy, and he leaves an impression among his friends that can never be effaced, no matter how low and contemptible may be the means employed for its accomplishment.

Articles of association of the Baltimore, Pittsburg and Chicago Railway have been filed at the Secretary of State's office in Indianapolis. The company has for its objects the construction, maintaining operating of a railroad to extend from a point on that part of the eastern boundary line of the State of Indiana, which is the division line between said State and the townships of Hicksville and Milford, Defiance county, Ohio, into or through the counties of DeKalb, Noble Kosciusko, Elkhart, Marshal, St Joseph, Laporte, Poter and Lake, in said State of Indiana, to a point on the western boundary line of said Lake county, a short distance south of its northern extremity. The length of said road, as near as may be estimated, is 145 miles. The present directors of the company are William Keyser, Walter C. Quincy, George B. Dennis, John Gardiner, T. Harrison Garrett, Willian W. T. Taylor and John K. Cowen. The capital stock is named in the sum of $2,000,000, divided into shares of the $50 each.

RAILROAD INCORPORATION.—We yesterday published the certificate of incorporatien of the Indiana division of the Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railroad, the road is to extend about one hundred and forty-five miles through Indiana, from a point opposite Defiance county, Ohio. The certificate of incorporation of the Ohio division of same road has been filed at the Secretary of State's office. The Ohio division will extend from a point in Poland township, Mahoning county, on the boundary line between Ohio and Pennsyvania, through Mahoning, Trumbull, Portage, Summit, Medina, Lorain, Huron, Seneca, Hancock, Wood, Henry and Defiance counties, to a point on the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana, in Defiance country. The capital stock is $3,000,000. The corporators are William Keyser, Walter C. Quincy, George R. Dennis, John K. Cowen and John Gardner.—Ohio Staesman.

Mr. Crocker, an Engineer on the B. & O. Railroad, has located in this city and as soon as his men and instruments arrive from Baltimore will commence the survey of a permanent line from Lake Station to the passage of the summit, about three miles from Westville.—Laport Argus.

Senator Schurz in his late speech in answer to Morton in the U. S. Senate the other day said:

'Sir, the crack of the party whip has lost power in these days of ours. Mere party cant lies stale and nauseating upon the stomach of the people. If you think that the movement which is now growing all over this land is a mere plot of politicians, you will soon discover your mistake. It is a new awakening of the public conscience. It is the reaction against the easy political morals and the spirit of jobbery which have grown and been developed in times of war and of great political excitement. It is an earnest uprising for an honest and pure government.—You can not repel that with party descipline; you can not baffle it with penal statutes. It may be a mere commotion to day; undertake to resist it, and you will find it a great political revolution to morrow. Whatever others may do, I have taken my lot. It is to this cause that my heart is earnestly devoted, and and with this cause I will stand or fall.

Editorial Convention.

The first semi-annual editorial convention for 1872, of the 10th and 11th Districts, is to meet in Kendallville, Ind., on the second Friday (the 12th) of April. So far this organization, has been kept up by about twenty of the publishers of the two districts, while there are more than forty comprised within the territory named. All who have been in the habit of attending these meetings, will freely admit that they have been beneficial to members of the fraternity. If, however, the association is to be kept up exclusively by the few who have been prompt in attending these meetings, while more than an equal number stand aloof from the organization, it is at least questionable whether or not it is best to hold them at all. There has been a number of both pleasant and profitable meetings held, while on the other hand, there have been some that hardly paid any one for the time expended in going to them. If the publishers of the two districts will unitedly join the association, and see to advance its objects and aims, we think that the organization could be made to exert a good influence on the profession, generally; but if a few—less than half—are to do all the work, it is at least, a debatable question, whether we had not better abandon it altogether.—Northern Indianian.

Just our views. If the tenth district is to keep up an association let it have all the roll credit, and not bring in another district to share the honor, that has never helped to sustain it. If the 11th district wants a union of the two let them attend, if not, let us keep up our own, independent of any other.

UP AND AT THEM.—The time is now at hand when it is the duty of every Democrat to gird on his political armor and prepare for the coming contest. The enemy is already in the field, as they know their all is at stake in this important struggle. They know that their record for the past few years will not bear investigation and that if they can not succeed in covering up and keeping concealed the many frauds that have been practiced under the present administration their power is for ever lost. The more honest element of their part, unwilling longer to bear the burdeds of dishonesty and corruption which characterize their leaders, is deserting their ranks. It only remains for us to go to work in earnest, and if we are united, the time is not far distant when Democratic principles will again predominate. But we must work as a unit. The designs of the Radical leaders can not be thwarted except by concert of action among the patriots of the land; and concert of action can only be secured by a thorough and complete organization in the Democratic ranks. Democrats, let us be up and doing. In every township let us come together and immediately establish a basis of operation upon which we may successfully battle the enemies of justice and liberty. Let us take the necessary steps to disseminate political information among the people, and encourage the circulation of good, sound Democratic newspapers.

The Bucyrus, Forum says:

Some time since we adverted to that fact that the ministers had quit preaching politics and were now at their legitimate business, preaching 'Christ and Him crucified.' A number of Republican papers admitting the correctness of our statement, bewailed the fact. But lo! what do we see as a result of doing the will of the Master instead of doing the will of the Devil? The Ministry are united, vitalized with piety and keenly alive to the salvation of souls. The churches are unusually well attended. Revivals are everywhere common. Tens of thousands are being brought from 'darkness unto light,' and the spirit of Divine Love and Charity is shedding its blesed influence upon the sons and daughters of men.—Bucyrus Forum.

Tammany has ordered a new enrollment, and every one going on the list must take the following pledge: 'I pledge myself to use my best endeavors at all times to secure the nomination, election and appointment of honest and capable Democrats to all places of public trust to preserve the integrity of the Democratic party, protect the ballot box from frauds and violence, and to discountenance and bring to justice all persons guilty of bribery and corruption in the administration of National, State, county or municipal government.'

The Hon. J. B. Grinnell, of Iowa, thinks that the relief of the party demands the retirement of General Grant, and he can not discover any violation of principle in urging the substitution of the some 'Republican statesman' in his place. This would imply that the Hon. J. B. has no confidence in either the President's Republicanism or his statesmanship. He is undoubtedly right on the latter point, but for a model Radical, Grant heads the list beyond all question.—St. Louis Times.

Wendell Phillips says: 'Mr. Sumner will not under any circumstances support General Grant; he entertains the most contemptuous opinion of him. During a recent conversation I had with him at Washington, Mr. Sumner said that the President was the most ignorant, corrupt, dishonest man living. If there was no other choice, Mr. Sumner would rather not vote at all than vote for Grant.'

MANHOOD,
How Lost, How Restored.
Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

SCHOOLS progressing finely.

☞ USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP ☜

JUST think of it. Quite a fall of snow on the 21st of March.

THE material for the new brick block is about all on the ground.

REMEMBER the meeting at the Court House next Saturday evening.

The Charity Islands in Saginaw Bay are to be made a summer resort.

The height of impudence—taking shelter from rain in an umbrella shop.

THIS is splendid sugar weather. Those that have trees should improve it.

NEARLY all our merchants are east for the purpose of laying in their spring stock.

THE weather is getting more like spring than it has been for the past week or two.

ONE of our fine-haird clerks, full of business, you know, got a counterfeit $10 bill shoved on to him. More experience wanted.

THE weather is pleasant, and the roads in good condition for this season of the year.

ST. PATRICK'S day was enthusiastically celebrated by the Irishmen of the United States.

☞ DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

THE quantity of wood received at the Woolen Mills is a sure indication that operations are soon to commence.

GRANT will go through the Philadelphia Convention as easy as one of John Sherman's land-grabs goes through the Senate.

WE have a large water-fall on our table that was picked up on the streets a few days since. The owner himself must call and get it.

ONE of our sports went to a concert, last week, at a neighboring town, and on his return says he did'nt see what he wanted to. Wonder what it was.

TAXES.—Our tax pa ers should remember that only a few days remain in which to pay their taxes without having the penalty imposed. All should take advantage of this.

IF you want a good fitting boot or shoe go to C. S. Hare's to get them. He has just received a large stock of all kinds and intends to sell at very low prices.—See his new advertisement in this issue.

THE contract for building the new Court House, at Decatur, Allen County, Indiana was let to Christian Boseker, of Ft. Wayne the Contractor now constructing the Defiance Court House. His bid was $78,979.

FARMERS.—Spring work will soon commence and you will need a good plow perhaps. You cannot do better than to call at the Pioneer Hardware Store where a large assortment is offered at lowest prices.

WE are grateful to the enterprising establishment of Markley, Schrader & Co., of Fort Wayne, for a handsome pair of fine boots. They are the ne plus ultra of the fashion, easily and neatly fitted and of splendid stock. This firm keeps a large and varied assortment of boots and shoes, and have just received an immense spring stock which is to be sold at low prices.

F. B. DAVENPORT & Co., have got a machine for cutting Wall and Window paper It does its work very nicely, and all those who buy their paper of them can have it trimed, all ready to hang without charge for cutting.

AN exchange says if you want a first-class head-ache in the morning, sleep in a room where a kerosene lamp is turned down low, so as to give but a faint light. This receipt does not fail once out of ten times.

WE visited the Post office at Columbia city last week, and found Brown busy as a bee. The Post is flourishing. We called to see Bro. Baker, but as it was the hour of noon, we suppose he was out taking his "meat."

We see that our friend Dr. R. Elson was in attendance at the Wabash Valley Dental Association at Fort Wayne last week. The attendance was large, and no doubt each were benefited by the interchange of opinions.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Building, Loan and Savings Association are increasing. Only a few more remain to be taken, and we hope they will soon be disposed of. A meeting will be held at the Court House next Saturday evening, to finish up the business and organize. Let all be there.

THE North Indiana Annual Conference, of the M. E. Church, will hold its session at Muncie, Delaware Co. Ind., commencing March, 27th, Bishop Scott, D. D. Presiding. The territory of this conference embraces the north east quarter of the State Goshen being within its bounds.

PERSONAL.—J. H. Woodhull, Esq., of the law firm of Woodhull & Croxton, of Angola, gave us a call last Monday. As will be seen by card in this issue, they attend courts in this county. Both are able lawyers and all matters entrusted to their care will meet with prompt attention.

A FELLOW who cught to know, says: "Married men, whose business compels them to keep late hours, will find that there is nothing which can console their wives for the evenings they spend alone so well as a nice dress pattern or a bonnet, and if the husband would only get in the habit of taking home some such little souvenier of remembrance, they would find their rest undisturbed, and have no occasion to see what time it was when they came in."

MUCH of the wheat on the ground appears to be entirely dead, and it hardly seems possible that the coming crop will be up to the usual average. We are told that on the high ground the roots appear to be entirely dead, while on the low ground the moisture during the dry weather kept the wheat alive and in such places a fair crop may be expected. It is too early to form a correct opinion of the matter, as a few warm days may materially change the appearance of fields that are now nothing but bare ground.

OUR preachers have gone to conference, and we have no evening services on Sunday. Bad for our young folks.

NEW GOODS—Pioneer Hardware has received in the past few days about 60,000 pounds of new goods, consisting of iron, nails, sash, doors, glass, paints, oils, plows, &c., bought for cash. Builders and contractors will do well to call and see John before purchasing elsewhere, as they may avail themselves of bargains not excelled in northern Indiana.

STONEWARE.—We learn from a late circular that Messrs. Eddy & Remington, the energetic proprietors of the Jackson Stone Ware Co., will still continue in the business, and are adding largely to the facilities of the already extensive establishment for the manufacture of all kinds of stone ware, fire brick and fire clay. Being personally acquainted with Mr. Remington, we can recommend this firm to all as prompt, reliable and honorable in all business transactions.

Sedan Brevities.

A series of meetings are in progress at the U. B. Church, at Green's Corners, one half mile south of town. Rev. Mr. Martin pastor.

Samuel Aleman has rented his hotel stand to Mrs. Shimp, who will conduct the business hereafter.

Wanted in Sedan—A Sunday-school,
G. M. C.

CONCERT.—The concert given by Prof. Irwin, at Corunna, on Friday evening last was a grand affair. The programme consisted of sentimental and comic pieces. all of which were well executed, and it was plain to be seen that the Professor was master of his art. We noticed some among his class that attended the Convention at this place, and now as we are about to have a County Convention, at Auburn, we would like to see a large number of the above school attend. On account of space we are unable to give the half, but here let us say that the young man who sung the song entitled "apology," done bully.

PERSONAL.—We were pleased to meet our excellent friend J. C. Davis, Esq., of Fort Wayne, the other day. Mr. D. is the general freight agent of the P., Ft. W. & C. Railroad and its branches now centering at Fort Wayne. Though there are manifold duties to perform in the position, he also fills the position of County Commissioner, having been elected during the split at last election. He has made himself quite popular in this position, and though the next Democrat may have 1,500 votes to spare, Mr. D. will give him a close rub. A good officer has a power with the people. If he is beaten it is to be hoped that it will be by as good a man as himself.

An agent Darling came down here last week, from Waterloo, and sold several instruments, and if what he says is true, he has been making Waterloo pay pretty dearly for their whistle. Instruments that he sold here for $125, he says he sold in that place for $200. A crippled soldier had just about perfected a sale of an instrument, he was acting as agent for here, when this man Darling brought down an instrument, set it up in the same house without saticitation, and by blowing, and a fall from $200 to $125 sold it. It was a mean dirty trick that no gentle man would be guilty of. We warn our friends at Waterloo and other places to beware, "there's something rotten in Denmark.'

WATERLOO.

Waterloo presents many indications of coming improvements. The magnificient School House in course of erection will make one of the leading features of the place. A large new brick church is also to be built, several new store rooms, and a number of dwellings. We are glad to note this evidence of prosperity in our neighbor, and we can heartily say, God speed you. We love to see everybody prosper, and though there are a few envious souls in every community, we believe a majority can say the same thing.

We learn that an accident occurred about four miles west of Waterloo, in which a young man was severely injured. It seems that several brothers, by the name of Stutz, sons of Jacob Stutz, were out in the woods chopping, when a tree was lodged against another, and that one out and lodged against the third. In cutting the third the lodged trees fell, and one of the boys named Samuel, in getting out of their way run under the third, which crushed him down breaking his leg in two places. A dog which followed the boy was instantly killed.

TRUE ECONOMY.—The country is at present flooded with cheap and inferior goods of every description, which are heralded to the public in flaming advertisements, and which find a market among those who have yet to learn that "true economy" consists in buying a first class article from an established and first class house. This being the case, you cannot do better than to call at the old reliable Hat and Cap Store of Jas. Harper & Co., Phœnix block, Fort Wayne. They keep a large assortment of the latest styles at low prices. Silk hats are made to order and a fit warranted every time. Go and see them.

SEEDS.—DeGoff Nelson & Co., of Fort Wayne, have the best reputation as dealers in field and garden seeds, a fact that our farmer friends are learning quite rapidly. This firm do a fair honest business, and deal honorably with all. Their seeds are tried and tested before placed in the market and all can rely upon them just as they are represented. We notice that seeds from Detroit and other points are for sale here, but we would prefer to risk those of Fort Wayne to any other. They can be obtained at their establishment on Calhoun street in the city.

CONDITION POWDERS.—A great many brands of the above powders have been thrown upon the market by as many irresponsible persons who had no other object than to make money on the established reputations of others. But their time was short and one by one they disappeared as manufacturers. Not so with David E. Foutz, of Baltimore. For years he has maintained himself before the world in this department, and to-day he is the acknowledged champion in its manufacture. The Foutz Condition Powders have never been equalled, and having stood the test of years, should receive the patronage of all horsemen. For sale at Davenport & Co.'s Drug Store.

BUTLER.

We paid this enterprising town a visit last Monday, and found it as lively and interesting as ever. Butler needs only the Eel River railroad to make it a capital point for business generally. If this could be secured, and we believe it can, new enterprises will spring up, a new impetus will be given to trade, and the citizens generally will be encouraged to such steps as will add importance and interest to their place. It is a beautiful and thrifty place as it is, and has within its limits many citizens who are capable of engaging in any department of business. We noticed a number of new improvements going on, and learn that others will follow soon. It has now several handsome business blocks, not equaled in the county, and there are evidences in and about it that speak well for the enterprise and industry of its citizens. It is certainly a good point in which to engage in almost any department of trade, and our readers abroad contemplating re-moving to some place to improve their financial condition, will find it possessing many attractive features in this line. We are glad to see so fine a town in our county, and trust that when it and Auburn are bound together by the iron bands of the Eel River road, the citizens of each will be imbued with a still closer feeling of love and friendship for each other. We have as friendly a feeling for Butler as we have for any other place in the county. We visited the public schools, under the Superentendece of Prof. Bowersox, and found it the largest and most interesting we have yet seen. The building, though large and commodious is filled to its utmost capacity, and if the juvenile population increases much more there will have to be an addition made to the present edifice. About two hundred and sixty scholars are in attendance, and the proficiency made by each is highly gratifying.

In the business line we find our enterprising friend F. F. Conners, doing a splendid business in the Harness and Saddle business. He keeps a fine assortment sells low, and being an agreeable fellow, finds plenty of patrons.

J. Greenamyer, keeps a very fine assortment of Boots & Shoes, and by his prompt attention to busines, is doing a very fair trade.

G. W. Young & Co., the popular Dry Goods merchants, display a very fine stock in this line, and are ready to meet all demands made upon them at low prices.

Geo. Hensler, the well known Hardware merchant, is just receiving an immense stock of new goods, and farmers generally are invited to give him a call. You'll find the affable Fay ready to supply your wants with his accustomed urbanity.

W. F. Smith is "dishing out" groceries in a lively manner, and is realizing an increased trade.

P. J. Keefer & Co., are building a new barn for the livery business, and as they keep first-class stock, there is no doubt of their meeting with abundant success.

The Great Western Hotel, kept by W. E & T. C. Sargent, is one of the finest houses we ever stopped at. Everything neat and clean, excellent "grubb," and nice rooms, make it so. We pronounce it first class. The Butler Hotel is also in a flourishing condition, and is recieving its share of patronage.

We were pleased to meet Senator Fosdick, of that place, an agreeable and accomplished gentleman, notwithstanding his political inclications.

We called at the office of J. E. Rose, Esq., the finest law office in the county, and had a pleasant chat. We learn upon good authority that his friends will present his name as a candidate for Common Pleas Judge, and we believe he would fill the position with ability and credit to the county. Rose is our man as a "meatist.' Our friend, Dr. Barnett, gave us a cordial welcome—a genial, talented gentleman of the true Democratic ring. We found A. F. Pinchin, Esq., smoking his pipe of peace, and ready with his usual promptness to attend all legal business entrusted to him.

Rev. J. Shaffer, the talented and accomplished minister of the Lutheran Church, and a pleasing, agreeable gentleman has our thanks for favors.

We attended a concert in the evening at the Lutheran Church, given by the local musical talent of the place, under direction of Prof. Kimbal. Though the class had been practising but a short time, we were fully convinced that Butler can now boast of some very fine singers. Several ladies who participeted in the exercises gave fourth evidence of possessing good voices under excellent culture, and the class as a whole were above mediocre in the art. The selections were good, the solos sang with much expression and effect, and the chourses were full, rich and spirited. We trust that they will be represented in the County Musical Convention soon to take place at Auburn, UNIQUE.—Col. Battles, that veteran in the book and publishing line, that gentlemanly scholar and literateur, has been in our place working up subscriptions for several standard works, and has met with considerable success. The works are issued in volumes monthly, and delivered every month by carrier. Thus you can obtain a book worth dollars by paying for it monthly. It is an admirable plan by which all can obtain a library without much capital. We are glad to learn that the Colonel is doing well.

A COMMUNICATION appears in another column, relative to an article which appeared in the COURIER several weeks ago, taken from the Fort-Wayne Sentinel. The writer seems to think that we ought to know things he knows but what no one else knows. If he knows we don't know what he knows how are we to know what he knows, we don't know. Eh? If so why not. There is one thing we do know and that is, if P. V. Nasby is one of the editors and publishers of that paper, then its editors and publishers do not all lead a "virtuous," "moral" and "religious" life Nasby is one of the worst "bummers" in the country, as we know from personal observation. We copied the item from the Sentinel and that paper is generally right. We believe it from what we have already seen. However, when our friends write to us, we trust it will be upon some local topic, interesting to the general reader.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, for April, is already at hand, sparkling with rich gems of thought, and brilliant with many colored fashion plates. Ladies you should have this number just to see the styles for the coming season.

Communication.

EDITOR COURIER.—We noticed in your issue of Feb. 28th, that you request any one to give you information of things you ought to know and don't know. We saw in the same issue an extract from the Ft. Wayne Sentinel a piece headed "Atheism and Crime," in which are statements false and by your copying we suppose you endorse, which we believe you would not do did you know the facts.

We think first you ought to know that the Index is not devoted to Free Love communism, or any other issue destructive to any well regulated society.

2nd. You ought to know that the editors and publishers of that paper are not infidel to any truth or virtuous principles in life. But that the highest principles of morality and religious life are taught as the best and highest incentives of human action.

3d. You ought to know that among those who take that paper, and practice the principles of free religion and liberal thoughts are found the least possible proportion of crime, punishable by law.—To satisfy yourself of this last position we will refer you to the statistics of crime in the Auburn State Prison, of the the State of New York. There you will find something over forty preachers of the gospel orthodox, and the ballance believe in the saving principles of christianity as taught by their fellow inmates of the black cloth, not one Universalist, Spiritualist or Free Religionist, deemed worthy of a residence in that free institution. By making inquiries you will find that institution to be a fair sample of all the others in the United Stated.

Again you ought to know that the statistics of insanity in the State Insane Asylum of Indiana as to causes religious out of 1,739, of the Methodist, 686, Catholic, 363 Baptist, 288 Presbyterian 336 Disciples, 174 etc. But not one Universalist, Spirtualist, Free Religionist or Liberalist, so you can perceive if any belive is the cause of disorder in society, it is not as you have supposed from the teachings of those who believe that man is the noblest work of God, and because of his nobleness should stand upright in his integrity, not because he fears a hell but because he reveres the truth.

You presume because an Index was found on the person of a murderer, he must have purchased it for the consolation it would impart to him. We should presume that he stole the paper from some worthy person who regreted its loss. But had he posessed himself of it and perused it carefully before the henious crime was committed there would have been one less murder in corroboration of the evil effects of such false teaching as the doctrine of total inherent depravity.

Yours truly,
GEO. W. CARPENTER.

Warsaw.

We had been led to believe by sundry newspaper articles, previous to our visit to the above place, that though you had visited all other places, there would still be a missing link in the great story of "wondrous scenes and things of note," did you fail to visit the enterprising city of Warsaw, so valise in hand, we sallied forth, determined to see the spot on which our friend Reub. has done battle so valiently and long. Warsaw is a nice town,—they have a pond or lake near by where they obtain large quantities,—and will make a fine city some day providing a few more fires are indulged. Fires have a tendency to purify, and that's why it is doing Warsaw good. It takes a great deal of fire, however, to do a little good in that place, and this being the case, we have tried to imagine how much caloric would be required to purify the county politically, and we are led to exclaim, "a few." Tom Browne evidently had Warsaw in his eye when he spoke of meat, for the citizens there generally look healthy, lots of cheek and rotundity of form—especially in front, and this, we are assured by the aforesaid Brown, is brought about by a plentitude of "meat."

We went over to see the Indianian office, and found it a marvel of beauty externally, perhaps as attractive and stylish as any similar structure in the place. It is really handsome, and is pointed out as one of the features of the State. You enter the counting room by a door, and when you get on the inside, you will see a number of busts of eminent men, among whom you may distinguish Quin Hoosier, trying to play the statue, but he couldn't fool us. He was standing on the marble topped counter and looked very nice, but somebody just then smiled or said "meat," and he came down like a little man. We heard a ruby voice, exclaim in an adjoining room "meet me 'oonlight lone," and we innocently thought of Reub. Williams, but we afterwards believed that it was another fellow heavy on the meat. This office is most complete in all its appointments, a monument to the energy and enterprise of its clever proprietors. We regret not having seen the General, he being absent at the time of our call. We were pleased, however, to meet the sterling editor of the Union, Mr. Zimmerman, who seemed to be busily engaged in doing good even in that barren political waste. Mr. Z. has lately enlarged his paper, and is making a valiant fight for the Democracy. He needs the encouragement of every Democrat in the county, and there is no reason why he should not have it.

We met for the first time since the excursion to Nebraska, our accomplished friend Dr. Davenport, a gentleman of high professional attainments and great popularity. He is a Democrat of the true metal and has a host of friends all over the State.

We formed the acquaintance of Van Long, Esq., a gentleman of marked legal ability, and an old wheel horse of the Democracy. Being a fluent speaker and ready debater, we dont see why he would not make a strong fight in his district for Congressional honors. They would have to call "Hero Tous," several times and then the combat would be one sided after all.

AT a Hebrew fair fair, recently held in Indianapolis, a silver set was voted to the most popular candidate for Governor. Any one could vote as many times as he pleased by paying for it. Hendricks received the most votes, and Democratic papers are greatly tickled over the result. They always could beat us in buying votes. Indianian.

Perhaps. But this very moral party possesses the unaccountable and peculiar characteristic of aggregating more votes from a fewer number of voters than any party extant.

ALTHOUGH we print within 115 of as many newspapers as there were Democratic votes polled in Porter county for Col. Eddy in 1868, there are still some wealthy Democrats in Valparaiso and Porter county who are waiting patiently to see whether we will make the Messenger a success or not before they will give us their patronage. We don't know what to think of their Democracy. The best thing these Democrats can do is to send us a two dollar bill in a letter and we will forgive them, By the eternal we won't otherwise.—Messenger.

Here's a county out west all of whose Democratic voters except 115 take their county paper. Here's DeKalb county an old and prosperous county, where Democratic voters take there county paper except about twelve hundred. Quite a contrast. How long must it be so

THOSE of our friends who expect to have work in the line of brick laying, plain and ornamental plastering, &c., &c., will advance their best interests by calling upon MR. THOS. J. JONES, of Butler. He is a first-class mechanic, and works at fair prices. 4t.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and he having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation it justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine the mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ROTHSCHILD & BROS.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers, equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc. to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool casimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $1 ,00, custom made $18,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

CALKINS'
CHAMPION WASHER

PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

It is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver. Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers, CALKINS BROS. & CO.,
70 S. Canal St., Chicago, Illinois.

SMITH & HARE.

American Epigrams.

Franklin said may things that have passed into maxims, but nothing that is better known and remembered than, 'He paid dear, very dear, for his whistle.'

Washington made but few epigrammatic speeches. Here is one: 'To prepare for war is the most effectual means of preserving peace.'

Did you hear of old John Dickenson? Well, he wrote of Americans in 1768, 'By uniting we stand, by dividing we fall.'

Patrick Henry, as every schoolboy knows, gave us, 'Give me liberty or give me death,' and 'If this be treason, make the most of it.'

Thomas Phine had many quotable epigrammatic sentences: 'Rose like a rocket, came down like stick; 'Times that try men's souls;' 'One step from the sublime to the ridiculous,' etc.

Jefferson's writings are so besprinkled that it is hard to select. In despair we jump at 'Few die and none resign,' certainly as applicable to office holders now as in Jefferson's time.

Henry Lee gave Washington his immortal title, 'First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countryman'

Charles Cotesworth Pickney declared in favor of 'Millions for defense, but not one cent for trib ute.'

'Peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must,' is from Josiah Quincy, 1811.

John Adams did not say, 'Live or die, survive or perish, I'm for the constitutions,' but Daniel Webster said it for him.

The revolutionary age would fill our article, had we time to gather the pearls. Coming down, we pass greater, but not more famous men.

Davy Crockett was the illustrated author of "Be sure you are right, then go ahead."

Andrew Jackson gave us 'The Union it must be preserved.'

Benton almost lost his identity in 'Old Bullion,' from his 'hard money' doctrines.

Scott's 'Hasty plate of suop' lasted his lifetime.

Taylor's battle order, 'A little more grape, Captain Bragg,' will be quoted after he is forgotten 'by all the world and the rest of mankind.'

Seward is known for the 'irrepressible conflict' whenever the English language is spoken.

Rufus Choafe gave us 'Glittering generalities.'

Tom Corwin's 'welcome with bloody hands to hospitable graves,' gave him more unenviable criticism than any other saying of his.

Calhoun gave us 'State rights' as a most prenicious and absurd equivalent for national supremacy under the constitution.

'Douglas supplied a 'spuatter severeign,' through it is probable that Cass invented it and Calhoun named it.

Stringfellow was the orriginal 'Border Ruffian.'

War times gaves us no end of epigrammatic utterances. Those of Lincoln alone would fill a volume; chiefest off all these that god-like, noble sentiment, 'With charity for all, and malice toward none.'

McClellan's chief exploit was tomake us acquainted with the phrase, 'Change of base.

Grant gave us 'Fght it out on this line,' 'Unconditional surrender,' 'I propose to move immediately upon your works,' 'Bottled,' and a hundred others.

Sherman first gave utterance to the great truth, showing at once statesmanship and military sagacity, 'The confederacy is a shell,' and he had the felicity of practically demostating his own theory by the 'March to the sea.'

Sheridan's character and his style of fighting are best expres sed by 'Sent them whirling up the valley.'

These Unfeeling' Railroaders.

Ill-treatment by a conductor is thus described by a Kentucky paper:

'Your fare if you please, madam.' said the conductor to an elderly lady, who had got aboard at a way station. The elderly lady looked up, and drawing fort a letter, spoke with a voice that was shrill.

'Two of Mr. ———'s children is dead, and they've writ me to come to the buryin', to-day. Isn't it terrible?'

The conductor looked as shocked as possible, and expressed his sympathy.

,And,' continued the old lady, 'I want you to let me ride free.'

'I can't let you ride free unless you have a pass,' returned the conductor.

'No, madam,' replied the conductor; 'I am sorry to say that the rules of the road are very strict, and I am not allowed to discriminate.'

'Well, I think you oughtn't to charge folks for going to a furneral,' said she.

'If we let everybody going to furnerals ride free,' again spoke the conductor, 'it wouldn't pay. Besides, it would be encouraging the furneral business in a way that would cast a gloom over the entire country. Your fare is a dollar and a half, madam.'

'Well,' retorted the old lady, drawing out a well-filled purse, 'I think you might let me go free, specially as I am going to a double furneral. Mr. ———'s childred is both dead, and they'll be buried in the same grave, I reckon.—It's terrible!'

And the old lady wiped her eyes, and paid her fare. As the conductor moved on, she returned to a passenger and remarked, with some indignation, 'These railroaders is certainly the most unfeelin' folks I ever seed.'

A Secret.—'How do you do, Mrs. Tone—have you heard the story about Mrs. Lady?'

'Why, no, Mrs. Gad—do tell!'

'Oh, I promised not to tell for all the would; no I must never tell on't. I am afraid it will git out.'

'Why I'll never tell on't as long as I live, just as true as the world; what is it, come tell.'

'Now you won't say anything about it, will you?'

'No, I'll never open my head about it, never. Hope to die this minit.'

'Well, if you'll belive me, Mrs. Funday told me last night, that Mrs. Trot told me that her sister's husband was told by a person who dreamed it, that Mrs. Trouble's oldest daughter told Mrs. Nichen's that her grandmother heard by a letter that she got from her third sister's second husband's oldest brother's step-daughter, that it was reported by the captain of a clamboat arrived from the Feejee Islands, that the mermaids abont that second wore shark-skin bustles stuffed with pickled eels, toes!'

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists and Gen. Agents, San Francisco, California, and 32 and 34 Commerce Street, New York.

PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND
PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
Mar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

DAVID E. FOUTZ, Proprietor,

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Lile, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas city, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Three Kisses of Farewell.

There, only three, my darling,
Separate, solemn, slow;
Nor like the swift and joyous one
We used to know
When we kissed because we loved each other
Simply to taste love's sweet,
And lavished our kisses as the summer
Lavishes heat,—
But as they kiss whose hearts are wrung
When hope and fear are spent,
And nothing is left to give, except
A sacrament!

First of the three, my darling,
Is sacred unto pain
We have hurt each other often
We shall again.
When we pine because we miss each other,
And do not understand
How the written words are so much colder
Than eye and hand.
I kiss thee, dear, for all such pain
Which we may give or take,
Buried, forgiven, before it comes
For our love's sake!

The second kiss, my darling
Is full of joy's sweet thrill;
We have blessed each other always;
We always will.
We shall reach until we feel each other
Past all of time and space;
We shall listen till we hear each other
In every place;
The earth is full of messengers,
Which love sends to and fro;
I kiss the darling, for all joy
Which we shall know!

The last kiss, oh, my darling,
My love—I cannot see
Through my tears, as I remember
What it may be.
We may die and never see each other;
Die with no time to give
Any sign that our hearts are faithful
To die as live.
Token of what they will not see
Who see our parting breath,
This one last kiss, my darling, seals
The seal of death!

The Civil Service Catechism.

No one has any business to say that the morals of applicants for office, or of officeholders, will not be improved by the new system adopted by the President, nor has any one the right to believe that taking the power of potronage out of the hands of a Congressman, not proven to be of a corrupt mind, and giving it to a president charged with being at the head of half a dozen 'rings' will not be civil service reform, with a vengence, if understood aright an applicant for any position of note must make application to the President, who refers them to the Board of Examiners, and the board then proceeds to inquire into the fitness of the candidate for a consulship.

Chairman—Look me stright in the face and tell me why a grindstone isn't square like a cocoanut.

Answer—On account of the Democratic party.

Chairman—Correct, sir, now sir why is it that a black cat can see better in the night than a gray one.

Answer—The disloyalty of the Democratic party.

Chairman—Correct again, another thing who started that vexatious question about Mr. Grant's soretailed colt, and if so, wherefore and why not.

Answer—The Democrats sir, did it to hurt his sensitive feelings I will go before any court and swear that the colt is bob tailed and always was.

Chairman—Before going further let me embrace you and we will take a drink on account of the government and this government it has lost a faithful officer by keeping you concealed under a strawstack.

Now sir, why isn't there eight days in a week.

Answer—On account of the Democratic party sir.

Chairman—Right again, one more question what made Cain kill Able.

Answer—The Democratic party urged him into it.

Chairman—Correct as a mathematician Well that is all. We did intend to ask you why a sawbuck had four legs, and a clothes horse only two, but your answers have convinced this board that your political education is all that could be desired. Your head is level and you are true of appointment. Be prompt in remitting your political assessments, and don't put down less than $500 to the next Grant fund.

Next candidate for office under this noble government will please step in and answer the same questions or words to that effect.

How it Feels to be Hung.

A Frenchman, writing to the Gaulois, gives an account of his sensations while hanging himself, which may be of benefit to persons of a suicidal turn of mind, and who would like to know 'what the thing is like.' As if preparing to hang up his coat, he drove a nail into the wall, and therefrom suspended himself by a looped cord, which he fastened about his neck, and then slowly kicked away his chair.—From the crown of his head to the soles of his feet he felt a 'general mixing up of the fluids of the body.' This was succeeded by a flashing, dancing light before his eyes, and thence rippled into space in concentrated at a single focus, and thence rippled into space in concentric circles. His head seemed compressed in an iron ring; needles without number seemed to dart from the ends of his fingers and toes; then there was a terrible snapping at the nape of his neck, and a serpent seemed to wriggle down his spine. His last sensation was one of pain at the throat and shoulder-blades. He had expected to wake up and find himself dead, but kind—or unkind—friends cut him down.

Looking Ahead.

'Do you allow any reduction to ministers?' said a young lady to a salesman in a well known sewing machine agency on Washington street, Boston, the other day where she had been trying to drive a bargain.

'Oh, yes, always. Are you a minister's wife?'

'Oh no, I'm not married,' said the lady, blushing.

'Daughter, then?'

'No.'

The salesman looked puzzled.

'I'm engaged to a theological student, sir.'

The reduction was made.

The First Man—Adam One Hundred Miles High.

[Max Adeler in the Pittsburg Leader, Feb. 28]

We learn from a recent book that Adam (whom many of our readers will doubtless remember as the first man) was, according to rabbinical tradition, one hundred miles nigh. If this is really true, every one of us ought to be fervently thankful that the race has dwindled since adam's day. It is appalling to think of the inconvenience and expense to which we should be subjected if we retained Adam's dimensions. A man would require we should judge, trowsers fifty miles long and about four hundred furlongs of suspendeders.—And if were to preserve the proper proportions in our dress, we should each require about sixty thousand cubic feet of high hat. When a small family of such men died they would occupy the entire State of Pennsylvania as a cemetery; and the way the undertakers would accumulate charges for coffins would be simply frightful. So it is better as it is Adam did very well while he was alone in the world; but just at present a man of his inches, who lived in Philadelphia, could hardly sit down without mashing Dancaster out of existance.

We learn from an English paper that during some recent explorations by a party of scientists among the ruins of Ninevah, a petrified umbrella was found in one of the temples. A description of the interesting relic is not given; but if it is a green gingham umbrella with a hook on the handle, it is probably ours, for we missed one of that kind several years ago, and just as likely as not it may have found its way to Ninevah. We admit that we cannot imagine how it got there, for we have no recollection of ever lending it to Jonah, and we repose to much confidence in the integrity of that prophet to suppose that he would have carried it off with him after one of his visits to our house. The theory that we left it in the temple ourselves is hardly plausible, because we do not remember having gone to the church in Ninevah; and it is absurb, anyhow, to suppose that the sexton of the temple would have permitted that umbrella to remain in the pew for years, until it was petrified, without embezzling it. Certainly it is very strange. We can not account for this umbrella, but we are willing to take it, and accept the chances of its being ours. No man shall ever say that we shirk responsibility when it falls upon us.

Fossil Elephants in Alaska.

It has been generally supposed by scientific men that the fossil elephant of Siberia had no representative in the same latitude on this continent. Recent examinations of the Yukon river in Alaska, however, have established the fact that the remains are even more plentiful on the west than on the east side of the North Pacific. Enormous quantities of bones are found, and a supply of ivory sufficient to last the world for centuries. The valleys of all the streams and all the low grounds are filled with bones and tusks, so that every vessel now arriving from these remote possessions his part of its cargo made up of these new-found remains. The elephant whose range was formerly almost universal, is now confined to a small portion of Africa and Asia, and it would seem as if the species was in process of slow extinction. Neither Europe nor Amrrica, which onced swarmed with them, has new either a climate or vegetation fitting to their existence. Their remains are likely to give Alaska a value not previously suspected.

The Deacon Puzzled.

Deacon Johnson is a great temperance man, and sets a good example of total abstinence as far as he is seen.

Not long ago he employed a carpenter to make some alterations in his parlor, and in repairing the corner near the fire place it was found necessary to remove wainscoting, when lo! a discovery was made that astonished everybody. A brace of decanters, a tumbler and a pitcher were cozily reposing there as if they had stood there from the beginning. The deacon was summoned, and as he beheld the blushing bottles, he exclaimed:

'Well, I declare, that's curious, sure enough. It must be that old Baids left them when he went out of this 'ere house thirty years ago.'

'Perhaps he did,' returned the carpenter, 'but deacon, the ice in that pitcher must have been friz mighty hard to stay till this time.'

IT is about fifty seven years since the battle of New Orleans was fought, and yet we have considerable over a hundred veterans in the city. One of them in his statement to the pension agent, who inquired his age, said:

I reckon I'se 'bout forty, sir; 'pears to me I'se dat old.'

But my man I am refering to the war of 1812, explained the official.

Of course you are.

Well, then, if you are only forty years of age you could'nt have been there.

Couldn't I?

No.

And I ain't no veteran?

No.

Well, then, boss, jis make me a volunteer. I ain't proud about it.

A visitor to the Supreme Court is horrified because one of the nine Judges has been seen to eat molasses candy while on the bench, and after the repast, lick his ten fingers with great satisfaction. Would he have been better pleased if the Judge had allowed his fingers to remain dirty? It is impossible to suit some people.

A Horrible Story.

An occurrence which makes the very blood freese within the veins of the reader, came to light last Monday over in Clifton, Calumet county, Wis. Thomas Downing, who for some time has lived alone in a small shanty back from any road, over in that locality, and quarried stone for a livelihood, was taken violently sick at his home on the 22nd of last January, with bilious fever, and was confined to his bed from that time until Monday Mar. 4. During the long weary days of his illness no one called; no one to lend a helping hand in administering to the wants of the suffer, and all because the location of his residence was so secluded that he had not been missed from his daily round of toil. Last Monday, however, came the good Samaritian. A gentleman who had sold Mr. Downing a quantity of butter last fall called at his residence on Monday to make a collection on the same. Upon approaching the house there were no visible signs of life, but from the interior emanated pitiful wails that were most harrowing to the soul. An entrance was forced, and the suffering man found on his bed with boots and clothes all on, in which condition he had past the length of time stated without the comfort of fire, and for the past fifteen days without food or water.—In this dying condition he was lifted from his cot, and conveyed to the house of a near neighbor, medical aid at once summoned, and at this writting, he is announced in a fair way to recover.

This certainly is a most singular case, which can be better imagined than described, and if Thomas is permitted by the gods to rally from his afflictions he will be justified in advocating to the best of his ability, the blessedness of the credit system.

Boys said a school teaher the other day, what is the meaning of all that noise in school?

It is Bill Smith, sir, who is imitating a locomotive.'

Come up here, William, said the teacher if you are turning into a locomotive, it is high time you were switched off.

That locomotive went switched off, had a tender attachment.

As the 4:30 train from New York reached Stamford, Tuesday, says the Hartford Post, an antique looking dame thrust her head out of the window opposite the refreament room door, and briefly shouted 'Sonny!'

A bright looking boy came up to the window.

Little boy, said he, have you a mother?

Yes, ma'am.

Do you love her?

Yes, ma'am.

Do you go to school?

Yes, ma'am.

Do you say your prayers every night, my boy?'

Yes, ma'am.

Can I trust you to do an errand for me?

Yes, ma'am.'

I think I can, too,' said the lady, looking steadily down on the manly face,—Here is five cents to get me an apple. Remember God sees you.

At a recent trial, the counsel for the prosecution, after severly cross-examing a witness, suddenly put on a look of severity, and exclaimed:

'Now, sir, was not an effort made to induce you to tell a different story?'

'A different story from what I have told do you mean?'

'That's what I mean.'

'Yes, sir; several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they could'nt.'

'Now, sir, upon your oath, I wish to know who those persons are?'

'Well you've tried about as hard as any of them.'

A gentleman in London, lately, in making return of his income to the tax commissioners, wrote on the paper: 'For the last three years my income has been somewhat less than £150; in future it will be more precarious, as the man is dead from whom I borrowed the money.'

DISSOLVING THE OLD FIRM.

'There goes a fine catch for some girl. I wonder he remains a widower. It is three years since his wife's death.'

'Now, Jane Austin, it is not a bit of we for you to sit at the window and watch Captain Arden as he passes. He will never marry you, or any other woman. His life is devoted to his daughter,' said a sister spinster, who, at one time had spent many hours watching the handsome captain.

A few moments after the above conversation, Captain Arden entered the reception room of a young ladies seminary. Scarcely had he seated himself when his neck was encircled by fond, clinging arms, and a sweet, childish face was pressed close to his. After returning his darling's caresses, Captain Arden looked earnestly for a moment into her beautiful eyes, the asked, with great anxiety:

'What is the matter my love? Something is troubling you, I see. Why so sad?'

'Oh, papa, you love me better than anything in the world, do you not?' the child sobbed.

'Why, Flory, little girl, what do you mean?' her father asked, amaized by her agitation.

'You do not say you always will.—And is it true what the girls all tell me; you will marry somebody some of these days, and then your poor Flory will only have a little nite of your heart.'

'You silly little love, to let these girls teas you. Come, we will make a solemn compact, Flory. Now give me your hand, and look right into my eyes.—Now I promis never to wed any woman, or to seek to win the love of any, as long as my daughter remains true to her father; while you are with me, giving me your entire love. What say you? Will you promise this too?'

'Gladly, gladly, papa!' Flory answered, with another fond embrace.

Then, with a doubtful look, she asked: 'But, papa, you only mean that I must not care for any man save you? That is it, is it not?'—a bright flush mounting to her fair brow 'because I do love Ada Foster dearly. She is my friend, and is so good and wise too! older than I—by narly five years—and—'

'Very well, Flory, you can love your friend Ada as much as you choose;—but do not let me hear of any other love. And this voyage I shall make to the sea will be the last, my child.—By the time I get back, two years hence, you will be old enough to preside over our home; then we will be seperated no more.'

Flory was very beautiful, and many brothers and cousins of her companions sought to win some sign of favor from her. But all of no avail. So when the two years had passed by, and Captain Arden returned to his child, both, after an enquiring glance into each other's eyes, were fully satisfied that no other love had entered the heart of either.

At the end of a year a young man came, bringing a letter of introduction from his father, one of Captain Arden's dearest friends. This young man was not only welcomed with great cordiality but Captain Arden insisted that during his stay in town he should become his guest.

Thus it was that Fred Fulton was thrown into constant society of Flory, who had all her life had a pashion for black eyes and raven locks.

And there was Fred, just such a hero as all blonde girls are sure to dream about. Then he had such a touching, taking sadness with him that went straight to Flory's kind sympathetic little heart. But she fought bravely against the spirit that came stealing over her, and really either would have kept herself away from him or sent Fred off home, had not the duties of hostess prevented.

The next best thing was to get some one else to come and help to entertain her guest.

Ada Foster had, a few weeks previous to Captain Arden's taking his daughter from school, been sent for by an aged relative to come and live with her. Thus the friends had been seperated.

Often Flory wished that Ada could be with her, saying: 'That I should not think so much of his dark eyed stranger.'

Ada's Aunt died about that time, leaving her in possession of a large fortune.

How Flory rejoiced, not only in her friend's good luck, but more in her freedom. Now she could come to her, be again her daily adviser and confident So she wrote to Ada, begging her to come. And she came.

But, alas, for Flory's thoughts about banishing Fred from her heart—daily he grew dearer! And now the poor girl upbrided herself for ingratitude in thus allowing any stranger to share the heart that should belong entirely to such a devoted father as hers.

Fred visit was drawing near its close. A few days previous to his leaving he found Flory alone, and told her his heart's story. But, poor fellow, his hopes received a very sudden check. Flory dismissed him—solemly declaring she could never marry.

So Fred went away very miserable and Flory's bright eyes grew sad, her merry voice ceased its carrolling about the house. Her father grew very uneasy, and declared she must be ill. So to relieve her father's anxiety, Flory feigned a happirer mood. But somehow her efforts were of little avail. Captain Arden's jokes grew less frequent, and his merry, ringing laugh was seldom heard. Even Flory's winning little ways failed to satisfying or make him happy.

Truly a wonderful change had come over the once happy little household.

'What's the matter with Flory?' and 'What troubles papa?' were the thoughts which agitated the minds of and daughter.

Ada Foster was the only wise one of the three. She knew well enough what the trouble was with the captain, as well as Flory. For how could she mistake the devotion of Captain Arden's manner to herself? She did not try to deceive herself about it. So, to save four persons from misery, she resolved to bring Flory to her senses first, and trust to chance for the captain following in the same course.

One evening, when out for a drive, an opportunity was presented for Ada to 'open Flory's eyes,' as she said to herself.

They were nearing a fine old mansion, to which Flory pointed and said:

'What a grand old place that is! How I should like to own it!'

'I think it is a very gloomy-looking place, and would like a home of more cheerful aspect,' replied Ada.

Well, it has a very gloomy look. But then there are strange folks living in it—only an old bachelor and old maid They seldom have visitors, and only live for each other. The servants speak of their being the saddest couple ever seen,' said Flory.

'I do not wonder. I've heard the story of those poor, mistaken folks both having scrificed their hearts' best love for the sake of each other, blindly thinking they should find happiness or if not that, content in doing what they called duty. This unnatural way of living never brings either; only years of disappointment and ceaseless regrets.'

'Oh, Ada! Can it ever become so with papa, or I?'

'Flory, I must answer your inquiry by another. Are you happy now, in the sacrafice you are making?'

'I may be by-and-by,' answered Flory, trying to repress the sigh which would come nevertheless

'I think not, Flory; neither are you making your father or Fred very happy.'

'Ada, tell me; what is the matter with 'papa? Does he suspect my heart has wandered a little from him? Yes, it is this, I know, which makes him so sad. Oh, how ungrateful I have been! Dear, good, noble papa!'

'No, Flory; it is not your love for Fred that is troubling your father, I am quite sure. Have you never thought that perchance he, as well as you, may have taken some one else to share his love?' asked Ada, a delicate blush suffusing her face.

'Papa's heart given to another! No, no; he would not breake his pledge to me———'

'No more than you have with him, Flory. But you see how it is, little one. We cannot regulate the impulses of the heart. Love will wander where it chooses; and I think it is the contest against this that is causing all our trouble just now.'

'Our trouble, Ada? Are you unhappy too?' asked Flory, looking inquiring into her friend's eyes.

'Only—because of my dearest friends unhappiness.'

Flory had fixed her eyes very earnestly on her friend. She continued gaze for some minutes, then light seemed to dawn upon her. She caught Ada's hands in hers, exclaiming:

'Oh, I know now! How blind I've been. Oh, I'm so glad! Hush, don't say another word! We shall all be so happy now!'

'Stop, you madcap! What do you know?' asked Ada.

'That I'm going to have James turn the horses' heads towards home. I want to put my arms around papa's neck, tell him my secreat, and win his——'

'And betray another's, Flory?'

'No, no. I've grown very wise at last. You darling Ada.'

A very little while after, Captain Arden sat in his libraay, looking anything but happy. A sigh had scarcely escaped his lips, when his neck was encircled by Flory's arms And she asked, with a comical little smile:

'Papa, what is the reason you and I are not just as happy as we used to be?'

'He drew her within his arms, and said:

'Are sure we are not my darling?'

'Perfectly so papa.'

'What can I do to make you so, my child?' he asked.

By being so yourself, papa.'

He shook his head and was about to reply, when burying her bright head in his bosom, she murmured low:

'Papa, do we not both of us want to disolve the compact we made years ago?'

'My darling, what can you mean?'

'Oh, papa, you know! Do not you and I want to take in new partners?' she said, breaking into a merry laugh, which was finished in a shower of happy tears.

As if by magic, the clouds were banished from his brow, and the happy, genial-looking man of a year ago said:

'So this little truant heart has taken another in to crowd me out, hey?'

'No, no, papa. I love you none the less because I've learned to love—well, just as you love somebody else.'

What a wise little woman you have grown to be, Flory!'

'Yes, papa; I know now that you and I will love each other all the dearer by dissolving the old agreement and entering into another, where no sacrifices will be required.'

'Who is my rival little one?'

A whisper close to her father's ear, with a smiling approval from him; then with a very grave look, she said:

'Ada leaves us next week, papa!'

'No, Flory. Can you let her go?' he asked, the sad look coming back.

'Yes, papa; if you will make her promise to come back and remain forever!' Flory answered, smiling.

Catch her quickly, and pressing her to his heart, Captain Arden went out. Flory heard him enter the drawingroom.

An hour afterward he returned, drew her with him to Ada's side, and said, his voice full of joyful emotion:

'She has promised, Flory. Help me to thank her for making us happy.'

Flory's arms were about her, her lips pressed to hers.

That evening a little messenger was despatched to Fred, bearing from Ada just one word, 'Come.'

After a few weeks more the new partners were united in a firm compact which gives assurance of the purest happiness earth can afford.

Speed of the Earth's Rotation.

The farther persons are from the poles the swifter the rotation of our world on its own axis. At St. Petersburg, in 60 degrees latitude, the speed of rotation is nine miles a minute. At Paris, eleven miles and a half. On the equatorial line, the rapidity of its motion is not far from eighteen miles a minute—which is 580 yards each second. Its whirls on its axis, therefore, is equal to the flight of a cannon ball of 26 pounds forced from a gun by 13 powder. Such swiftness of a mass of matter of the density of this earth, 8,000 miles in diameter, through celestial space, makes one giddy to think of it.

As the earth sways either side of the exact line of its orbit in running round the sun, like a balloon in the air, it has never, since launched into space, gone over the same track twice. In its oscillations it passes each side of the prescribed roadway, crossing to and fro, but never swaying so far from it as not to be back by an attractive force somewhere in the immensity of stellar space, which keeps unrecorded millions of worlds, far superior to this in magnitude, brilliancy, and overwhelming grandeur, in paths in which they are destined to move till the heavens shall be burned as a scroll.

Matter cannot be annihilated. This proposition is admitted to be true in philosophy. But how originated?—That is the question.

Indiana Block Coal.

Before the American Institution of Mining Engineers, which recently held its annual session at Troy, New York, a paper was read to the society by Guiford Smith, Esq., which made reference to the new coal fields of Indiana and the valuable character of the coal desposits found there. This paper states that the name of block coal is applied to a peculiar variety of non-coking bituminous coal, which was originally discovered on the western border of the Appalachian coal field, in the Mahoming region where it is extensively used in blast furnaces as it comes from the mines. Professor Cox, the State Geologist of Indiana, describes it as being a luminated structure, splitting readily into sheets, which have their surfaces covered with a dull, soft fiberous carbotaceous matter, resembling charcoal; while on the other hand it is difficult to break in any direction opposite to the laminae, and this fracture exhibits a finty structure, marked by alternate layers of dull and shining bright coal. In cooking it seldom swells or changes form, and never cokes or runs together, and it is this feature which gives it its present peculiar value as a fuel for smelting iron ores. It is, however, sufficiently bituminous to render it highly inflamable; and the blocks retain their original shape until completely burned to ashes, in such a manner as will admit the ready passage of the blast, and flame the entire mass of fuel, ore and flux.

This block coal is used by five furnaces in Clay County Ind., where it gives higly satisfactory result; and it is said that the pig iron made at these furnaces from Iron Mountain and Lake Superior ores, by the use of this coal, commands at the furnace from two to three dollars More per ton than the same grade of pig iron made in Kentucky and Ohio will command in Indianapolis. These furnaces are all hot-blast. Their combined daily consumption is 300 tons of block coal, 250 tons of Lake Superior and Iron Mountain ore, and fifty tons of limestone for flux. They turnout daily 110 tons of iron and the number of men employed exclusive of miners is 200.

Stone bullets were used until as late as the year 1514, when iron was adopted. It was near the one of the sixteenth century before the laden bullet was adopted.—Stone cannon bullets are still used in the east.

The Brenham (Texas) Banner says that a large panther recently entered a house near Fort Griffin, seized a child sitting on the floor and attempted to carry it off.—Two men who happened to be near at hand, rescued the child, which was not seriously injured.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., APRIL 4, 1872.

Mr. Greeley very civilly asks his party on the subject of embezzlements, how it is that a Paymaster stationed in the Federal city, under the very eye of the Treasury officers, Paymaster General, &c., could draw the amount of $74,000 from the Treasury, $40,000 at a lick, on his own checks payable on the bearer, and gamble it away before his guilty career was arrested. Of many defalcations, this strikes us as that most easily investigated, while it sadly needs elucidation.

The Chicago Tribune says it is gratifying to know that the complaints of all the merchants, of New York City, headed by A. T. Stewart, and the damaging exposures of two Congressional Committees, have at length resulted in transforming the firm of Leet & Stocking into Squires & Co. The Tribune adds: 'When such insignificant causes can proeuce such mighty effects in the way of reform, no one should despair of the future prosperity of the country.'

A CORRESPONDENT writing from Indianapolis, to the Connersville Examiner, suggests the name of J. B. Stoll for Governor, in order to secure the German vote. He goes on the principle, doubtless, that the German vote is everything, the English vote nothing. We would infer as much at least from the suggestion. Had'nt that correspondent better wait until we have about fifty thousand majority in this State, a margin that will enable almost any plug to run in, if he does get squeezed.

The complete returns of the election in New Hampshire are as follows:—Straw,38,738; Weston, 36,588; Cooper,551; Blackmer, 453; scattering, 6. Straw's majoriety over all, 1,137. Total vote, 76,339. Last year the total vote of the State was 69,729, Pike getting 33,892 Weston, 34,700 Cooper,(L. R.) 782; Comings, (Temp.) 314; scattering, 41. The total vote exceeds that of last year by 6,610.—The republican vote increased 4,846; Weston's increased 1,888; the Labor Reform vote is diminished 228; the Temperance is increased 139 votes.

The card which was published to Mr Grosvenor, the Chairman of the Missouri Liberal Convention by Horace Greeley and other prominent Republicans of New York, indicating their intention of being present at Cincinnati, and of supporting the movement came at a good time, appearing just after the New York World article, in which it was maintained that the Liberalists were too weak to show their hands. The World is not always sound on political matters, nor sagacious in its prognostications. This is an instance of it.

It is now conceded that "a considerable quantity of arms and ammunitien' was sent to France, after the administration was made aware of the fact that the purchaser was a French agent—General Dyer's testimony before the Investigating Committee reveals the fact, thouhh it is pretended the contracts were previously made It is, no doubt, a rotten transaction, and a violation of our obligations as a neutral, between France and Germany This is one of the acts of the military 'ring' an organization which managed the San Domingo job, and had its fingers in the Custom House dish of New York

Chas. A. Dana, the editor of the New York Sun, is in downright earnest in his charges of malfeasance against Gen. Grant's Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Dana has been summoned as a witness in the investigation, and he announces himself ready to establish all the charges he has made against Mr. Robeson. This gentleman is said to have made two millions of dollars in the two years he has been Secretary of the Navy. The Sun says; 'The frauds are so numerous and so glaring, and each of them are known to such a number of responsible persons whose testimony can be corroborated by documentary parol evidence beyond Robeson's reach to bribe or falsify that, notwithstanding the great odds in his favor, we are confident he can not escape the punishment he merits.'

Forty two thousand of the Radical voters of Kentucky are negroes, yet, the State Convention the other day voted down a resolution which had been introduced and which demanded an equitable share of the offices for the colored population. This is exceedingly characteristic of Radicalism in its ingratitude as well as its inconsistency. It is ingratitude, because it is to the negroes that the Radicals largely owe their balance of power. It is inconsistent, because the negro votes have been won over to Radicalism by promise of official rewards. It will not require a very great while for practice of this kind to disabuse the theoretical [illegible] of devotion which the colored people hold to Radicalism.

The richest people in the world are the Cherokee Indians. They number 16,000; own in fee simple 4,000,000 acres of the best land on this continent, and have in the hands of the United States Government on which they annually receive the interest, $3,000,000.

The Elections.

HARTFORD, April 1.—Returns from ninety towns show a loss of 69 votes for Jewell, counting Hubbard's total vote and 990 Temperance and Labor Reform votes against him. This does not count New Haven, which gives Hubbard only 397 over all.

DETROIT, April 1.—Charter elections were held to-day in nearly every city in the State, excepting Detroit, and passed off quietly. The Democrats have made gains in several places but it is impossible to give any figures to-night. The Democrats have elected Mayors in Grand Rapids, Bay City, Cold Water, Mt. Clemens, Hillsdale, Ann Arbor, Jackson and Port Huron.

CINCINNATI, April 1.—Seven wards and precincts heard from. The Democratic Judges will almost certainly be elected. Yaple leads his opponent for Juuge by fiteen hundred. The other Democratic candidate for Judge, O'Connor, has two Republican opponents.

TOLEDO, April 1.—The Republicans carry the city by increased majority There is a large majority in favor of the water works.

Concert of Action.

We endorse the suggestion of the South Bend Union, for a meeting of the Central Committees of the 9th, 10, and 11th districts. In speaking of this matter the Union says that "with concert of action among all who are opposed to the continuance of the Grant dynasty, and who will not endorse the past corruptions of the radical office-holders in this State, we are measurably sure to carry the October election; and we have but little fear that the State Convention will so do its work as to bring about such concert. And yet it cannot be denied that State Conventions in Indiana of both political parties have generally ignored the nothern part of the State, and have been controlled by a few wire-pullers around Indianapolis; as was notably the case in the last Radical Convention Our Convention must avoid this error or they might as well yield the contest without going to the polls.

The best way to secure concert of action and justice to the northern part of the State, is to have a free interchange of opinions prior to the Convention. To this end we make the following suggestions: That the Central Committees for the 9th, 10th and 11th Congressional Districts meet in their respective Districts and appoint Committees of Conference, who, together with such other Democrats as may choose, shall meet at some appointed place and time, there to consider as to the candidates to be presented from the north. The three districts we have referred to send about one-fourth of the delegates to the State Convention, and could secure the nomination of any candidates they might name."

EMPHATIC.

To Col. Wm. Grosvenr, Chairman Executive Committee of Liberal Republican Convention, Washington, D. C.:

SIR—We, Republicans of New York wish to express our concurrence in the principles lately set forth by the Liberal Republicans of Missouri We make this departure from ordinary methods of party action from the deep conviction that the organization to which we belong is under the control of those who will use it chiefly for personal purposes and obstruct the full expression of opinion on important matters, which, the gentlemen, whom you represent have laid before the people of the United States. We believe that the time has come when political offences of the past should be pardoned; that all citizens should be protected in the enjoyment of the right guaranteed them by the constitution; that federal taxation should be imposed for revenue and so adjusted as to make the burden on the industry of the country as light as possible: that a reform in the civil service shold be made which will relieve political action from the influence of official patronage; that the right of local State govenment, the foundation of American freedom,should be warranted, and the encroachments of federal power checked; and we also believe that at this time a special duty rests on the people away with corruption in office. The exposures recently made in this State have brought to light the evils which are not confined to one party or a single locality, and to disclose the dangers more formidable than any which the Repulic has yet encountered, with the hope that the movement begun in Missouri may spread through all the States and the influence of every political party We accept the invitation to meet in a national mass convention at the city of Cincinnati on the first Wednesday of May next, and we invite all Republicans of New York who agree with us to co-operate in our action.

SUBSCIBE for the COURIER.

Hon. M. C. Kerr.

Among all the persons named as democratic candidates for Governor at the ensuing election none more fully meets the requirements of the occasion, than the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article. That he is an able statesman, an honest man, an industrious, temperate citizen, is admitted by all Althoug serving the people for many years in public life,no word of reproach has ever been lisped against him; his record is clear, his character unimpeachable and his abilities of the very first order No man could better do justice to the radical party in exposing their misdeeds than he, and his words to the people would carry a weight second to none other in the State We know not whether he would accept the nomination, but we think him too good a Democrat to refuse the use of his name for the good of the couse

Gushing Godlove.

[From the Fort Wayne Daily Sentinel.]

That was a very theatrical scene in the Radical State Convention at Indianapolis, in which the ex-chief of the Lafayette Know-Nothings enacted the principal part. It was intended to be dramatic It resulted in being farcical; still, it was theatrical all the same,—full of melting moods and touching tributes of affection. Godlove's personation of the heroine, Niobe, of 'all tears' reputation—was one of the best pieces of comic acting that even the Radical politicians of Indiana have developed for many years. How often the gushing Godlove had rehearsed this thing at home where he has been pleading in a similar fashion under the Caudle lectures that have been poured down upon his devoted head—cannot of course be said; but the sobs came, the tears flowed, the breast heaved,the mucles twitched, Godlove wiggled as energetically as if he had been practicing ever since Grant's failure to give him an opportunity of retiring to private life.

The people of Indiana need not to be told that Orth is as uneasy out of office as a fish is out of water. He served his Lafayette constituency until his Lafayette constituency in Congress could stand it no longer. He enjoyed the privilege for several years of franking his own speeches, and his friends' letters all over the country. Then he was suddenly called upon to retire.—This was too much for the over-zealous Orth's tender feelings. His desire to serve his country could not thus suddenly be cut off. He assumed his favorite character of Niobe and presented himself to Mr. Grant. Orth came very near repeating the history of that traditional office seeker, who commenced with seeking a Cabinet position and finally was content to receive some of the President's old clothes. At least, he commenced with the Ambassadorship to the Court of St. James; then as Minister to Berlin, then a Consul to some obscure place in the West Indies, where it was hoped that the poison of the deadly Upas tree wou'd free the Radical party of so troublesome and persistent an office-seeker. But the result was that the gushing Godlove had to go home empty-handed and heart-broken, to rehearse the tender scene which was to work upon the sympathies of the State Convention.

Gushing Godlove soars with the impetuous boldness of the eagle, and falls with the intensest blindness of the bat. He began with Governorship and when he found that he could not compete with the excellent morals and abstemious habits of biblical Browne, he resolved to throw himself tearfully upon the mercies of the convention, and not to rednce himself to the abject condition of Mother Hubbard's dog, when she went to the cupboard to get him a bon, and

> 'When she got there
> The cupboard was bare,
> And the poor dog had none.'

Godlove skipped the Lieutenant Governorship as unprofitable, and made his tender onslaught upon the office of Congressman at Large. Sweet vision of ample stationery, having his speeches printed for nothing, of sending them gratitutiously to all those to whom he owed a grudge, and of thus triumphing over his enemies, danced before his eyes and crystalized into fantastic shapes in the tearful mist that formed before them. Godlove's tactics were truly womanly and entirely worthy of his fond and gushing nature. As soon as he could overcome his emotion, he took his position upon the stand, with handkerchief in hand, a hogshead of tears in bond, and a reserve of sighs, and sobs, and gasps, and he never gave up until he had gained his point. He called piteously upon the venerable Henry S. Lane to know if Henry would like to have him nominated. Of course Henry wouldn't but how could so gallant an old gentlemen resist the womanly appeal, the wail of grief, the fountain of tears which he saw before him? Then General Lew Wallace was call upon to acquiesce in the great grief of gushing Goldlove. The gallant General could not refuse. Then a one-armed soldier, the brave Gen. Spoouer,who was a candidate, was asked by Godlove to give way, and in so touching a manner that the poor man blushed to think that he had lost only one arm in the service of his country, when the gentle and gushing Godlove had sacrificed,like Artemus Ward, so many of his first wife's relation and had shed so many of bitter but inexpensive tears. Of course the one-armed soldier, endeavoring to hide his empty sleeve, retired abashed.

Thus it was that the gentle and gushing Godlove won over the Radical convention in his favor. And when he had, through tears and tribulations, softened the hardest hearts, he bethought him of a bold coup d' etat, and with a grand, finishing howl, asked if there was one dissenting voice that objected to his running for Congress.—The case had been well worked up; the touching drama artistically played; the climax had been reached, and the gentle and gushing Godlove retired to dry his eyes and chuckle, heartless coquette that he is, over the way that he fooled 'them soft-headed fellows.'

The largest snow flakes of the season fell last Sunday. Wool from a picking machine was nowhere.

The many friends of Col. I. B McDonald and Hon J. B. Stoll throughout the State will be pleased to learn that their misunderstanding has been harmonized, and that there will hereafter be no controversey between them We infer from this, that there will no longer be opposition to the nomination of Col. McDonald for Lieut. Governor, and that Northern Indiana will now be able to cast her vote unanimous for him in Convention. We shall be glad when all differences, are harmonized,and perfect unity established among the conservative elements of the country.—Warsaw Union.

Democracy vs Radicalism.

Pay no attention to Democratic arguments. Pay no attention to Democratic inquiries.—Republican Exchange.

Once upon a time a colored minister was holding forth on the creation of man as follows, to wit: 'An' de Lord made Adam, an' sot him up agin de palin's fur to dry.'

At this moment a white headed sinner arose to his feet, and asked: 'Did you say dat de Lord made Adam, an' sot him up agin de palins fur to dry?'

'Yes, sah.'

'De palin's?'

'Yes, sah.'

'Who made dem dar palin's?'

'Sit down, sah,' exclaimed the exasperated minister, 'Sit down, sah! a few more such questions as dat would spile all de theology in de world.'

And, we may add, that a few more such arguments and inquiries as the Democratic party has indulged in of late would spoil all the Radicalism in the world.—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Common Pleas Court, in a cause wherein Mary Houghton is plaintiff, and Jotham Woolsey and Samuel W. Sprott are defendants, required me to make the sum of five hundred and sixty dollars and eighty-four cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, APRIL 27th, 1872,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

All that portion of the west half of the south-east quarter of section three, in township thirty-three, north of range thirteen east, lying and being south of the Auburn and Spencerville road running through said land, and enough more off the east side of the balance of said described land to make in all fifty acres in DeKalb county, Ind.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

JEREMIAH PLUM,
Auburn, April 1, 1872. Sheriff of DeKalb Co.

The Auburn Courier
OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Snow on the last day of March. How's that?

Lots of fun, at Davenport & Co's., for ten cents.

Lots of boys on every corner. Better be in school, young man.

The Aveline House, under the excellent management of Messrs. Miller & Moritz, is doing a fine business, and is justly regarded as the best hotel in Fort Wayne. They deserve all they get.

The little birds have again appeared to greet our early waking with their morning songs, and soon the gentle frog will be heard, at the twilight hour, tuning his melodious voice in sweetest strains.

Look Out.—Orders for three plug hats were given to Jas. Harper & Co., Phœnix Block Fort Wayne, by citizens of this county last Saturday, and you can now look out for the spring styles. This firm is doing an immense business in this line.

Have you ever tried Davenport & Co's Bayrum Hair Oil? If not don't hesitate a moment in purchasing a bottle. It is well perfumed, and reccomended, for being a great help to the hair. Try it anyhow.

Notice.—To the officers and members of Cedar Encampment, I. O. O. F., No. 65, There will be a special meeting held on the night of April 4th, 1872, for the purpose of installing officers for the ensuing term and transacting other business.

H. E. Altenburg, C. P.

B. & O. Railroad.—Everything still looks favorable as to its location on our line, though we have not heard anything farther from head quarters. Defiance and other points in Ohio seem to be wide awake, and we look for definite and satisfactory news in a few days.

Thelogical Thomas, the Radical candidate for Governor, who has gained a wide and not very popular notoriety on the "meat" question, lifts the pressure at this place to-day, (Thursday). Collectors, Assessors and Postmasters are requested to turn out.

One of the directors of the Chicago, Continental & Baltimore Railroad, Mr. Sturgeon of Rochester, is in receipt of a letter from Col. Merritt, in which the information is conveyed that bankers have been found to take the balance of the construction stock and to negotiate the bonds of the company.—Huntington Dem.

Election.—An election of officers for the building Loan and Savings Association will take place next Saturday evening at the Court House. There only remains a few shares of stock to be taken, and it is expected that by that time all will have been subscribed. Let all interested be in attendance.

The fellow that invented the saying that when March comes in like a lamb, she will go out like a lion, was all sound on the goose, as far as the last one was concerned. This is about the first time it has been verified, however, for the last fifteen years, and when one can guess that well they should receive their due meed of praise.

Newspaperial.—We understand that Mr. Weaver has withdrawn from the Angola Republican, and will soon establish another paper at that place. We believe it will be an improvement on the one named above, and we don't see why Steuben cannot support another. If they would learn to support a good Democratic paper we would have more hopes of the benighted citizens, however.

The pretty little robins—the dear little robins—the gentle little songsters—are robin' early spring of half it's terrors, and chirping their little praises on almost every tree—making humanity believe it is spring time, and causing general happiness.—After the long, dreary winter what is so cheering as the song of the robin. Why it ought to make a burglar ashamed of his business.

Grocers will be rejoiced to learn that by an act of Congress approved March 5, 1872, the law, or so much of it as imposes a tax on 'any can, bottle or other single package containing meats, fish, jellies, shellfish, fruits, vegetables, sauces, syrups prepared mustards or jams,' is repealed. The stamping of these articles was a great annoyance to dealers, and was much more calculated to encourage a system of espionage than to bring revenue into Uncle Sam's pocket.

The people are all sighing for a mess of early greens; but the South's the place to get them if they're only got the means.—They can't be had up here—that everybody knows: for the ground is stiff and hard, and we have our daily snows. But the frost will soon come out, and the seeds will soon go in; then lookout for green things, and dry up all the screechin'! you'll get them by the cart load,—you will, as true as preachin'.

We dropped in at J. G. Fledderman's merchant tailoring establishment, the other day, at Fort Wayne, and learned that he had orders ahead for all he could do for several weeks to come, and requested to announce that no more orders would be taken until they could dispose of what they had. It is not often the case that a business man has to advertise for the public to stay away, and it must be because of the superior manner in which he does his work that he is thus controled. J. G. means business.

European.—These popular gentlemen the O'Connell Brothers, of Fort Wayne, have purchased the brick block just east of the Aveline House, and are remodeling it, and putting in all the modern improvements for a fine new hotel on the European plan. We like these hotels, because one gets the worth of their money. You pay for your room and get your meals where you please. We believe a hotel of this kind will be popular at Fort Wayne, especially in the hands of these gentlemen who have had a large experience in the business.

The devil has got the mumps.

Don't forget to attend the meeting, at the Court House, next Saturday night.

Cobbage.—If there is anything in this world that causes us to loose our equanimity, and fly off at a tangent, it is one thing more than another. This happened last week. One of our popular business men,—we don't like to mention names, but his initials are C. S. Hare,—presented our better half with a new and handsome pair of slippers. The ladies say "beautiful," "perfectly splendid," and we are generous enough to suppose that they mean the slippers, though our friend H. is rapidly establishing a reputation of being a lady's man. One thing is certain he knows what styles will please them, as the large and elegant assortment of goods for ladies wear now on hand at his establishment will testify. A large stock has just been received, and our lady friends should go and see them.

Put it in Writing.—How many misunderstandings arise from the loose way in which business matters are talked over, and then when each party puts his own construction on the conversation, the matter is dismissed by each with the words 'all right,' 'all right.' Frequently it turns out all wrong, and becomes a question for lawyers and the courts.

More than half the litigation of the country would be saved if people would put down their agreements in writing. Each word in our language has its own peculiar meaning, and memory may by the change of a single word, or even by the change of its position in a sentence, convey an entirely different idea from that intended. When once reduced to writing, ideas are fixed, inelastic.

Change.—By a concatenation of small events we loose our popular pastor, Rev. A. W. Lamport, of the Methodist charge in this place, and though the inscrutable wisdom of the last conference, may not accord with our own individual views, yet we submit to the edict that has gone forth, and welcome our new pastor, Rev A. Cone, to his new field of labor. In thus parting with our late pastor, we cannot but congratulate our Angola friends, whom he will serve for the next year, that they have not only secured a eloquent and faithful pastor, but also as a citizen, a gentleman full of quiet dignity, and real worth, one whose highest ambition is to practice what he preaches and whose heart never wants for that good will and love that marks the true christain gentleman.

The new pastor is highly spoken of, and though there was a desire that no change would be made, we doubt not it will all come out well.

The Elkhart Union gives an account of a distressing accident that resulted in the death of a boy 15 years old named Joseph Voisinet. It appears that the lad had taken a double barreled shot gun, called the 'big gun,' and was going northwardly back of the house toward the St. Jo river, with the intention probably of shooting ducks or something of that kind. And it seems that he had got over the picket fence at the corner of the stable or horse barn, and in attempting to lift the gun over after him, the hammer caught on the railing and discharged the left barrel, striking and tearing away the almost entire left side of the face and head, leaving a most horrid sight to look at. His father heard the report of the gun, and hastening to the spot found him lying in a pool of blood, and saw him breath once or twice after he got to him, but wholly unconscious.

New York Air-Line.

[From the Chicago Times.]

The railroad committee of the board of trade on yesterday reported the following resolutions to the board of directors of that body. They will come up to day for adoption.

Whereas, Congress has in consideration a bill for the charter of an air line railway between the cities of New York and Chicago, to be constructed of steel rails, with three tracks; and

Whereas, The increasing demand for greater facilities to trasport the products of the great west to the seaboard requires the construction of said line of railway to measurably provide for the present and prospective great wants of commerce;

Resolved, That the board of trade of Chicago heartily indorse the project as one more needed to supply the present wants of commerce than anything that has ever been projected.

Resolved, That we cannot urge too strongly upon our senators and representatives in congress, the importance of this enterprise, and ask their individual support for such a measure, under proper restriction.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, two and one half cents per mile for through passengers should be the maximum rate, and one and a half cents per ton per mile products of the forest and the soil, and that in no event shall the capital and indebtedness of the company exceed the actual cost of construction and equipment.

Work Ahead.

In the short time that we have been in Auburn, we have seen enough of the character of its surrounding to satisfy us that there does not exist in this part of the State any place which has so many natural advantages which, if properly used, are calculated to increase the population and wealth of the place. The immense amount of wheat, pork, fruit, etc., shipped from here, during the last year; and the low prices of buildings and lots—show that it need not cost the laboring man as much to live here—while wages are about as good as at Fort Wayne.—With the low cost of living—and with railroad connection with the world, there is no reason why manufacturing establishments should not be erected here, and run at a very little cost, comparatively. And it is manufacturing establishments which build up and enrich towns and cities—nothing else will. The more mouths there is to feed, the greater is the demand for grocers' goods; the more backs to cover, the greater the demand for dry goods merchants' stock; the more familes that may find encouragement to come here, the greater the demand for houses—and so we might go on to the end. Other towns around us are aware of these facts, and are alive to the importance of encouraging as many new manufacturing establishments as possible, to start in their midst. Let our citizens be wide awake and look at the importance of this;—let it not be said that with all our advantages we imitated the hare in the fable, and let the tortoise win the race while we sleep.—Awaken from your Rip Van Winkle sleep, for it has been about twenty years, during which, scarcely nothing was done for the development of the place, and now that you have had a good long rest, go to work and do something that will entitle you to some credit in the advancement of the town.

AUBURN RAPIDLY INCREASING.

Twenty Three new Dwellings in Course of Construction.

Though the weather has been quite disagreeable for the most part during the last few weeks, yet our citizens have not been idle. The outlook for the county seat is quite promising, and a careful survey of our improvements to-day discloses the fact that most of our citizens are alive to their interests. There are still a few drones, who seem to be doing but little for themselves or any body else. In their isolated positions they stand and stare and wonder, with a feeling of loneliness pitiable to behold. Like poor Lo, they are being pushed farther out from the confines of activity, by the rapid strides of industry and enterprise. There is only one chance for them. They must catch up the strain that keeps time to the march of improvement, or retrograde still further, and go down to the grave unhonored and unsung.

But we are glad to note that some twenty-three new buildings have been commenced already this season, six or eight of which are now ready for the plasterer. We give a brief report of the location and names of persons making these improvements:

C. Bengtot, 2 story frame, North Main street, Mr. Spake 2 story, North Jackson street, John Day 1½ story, North Jackson street, Mr. Witt 1 story, North Van Beuren-st., M. Witmer 1 story, North Van Beuren-st., Mr. Limeback 2 story, North Van-Beuren-st., J. Showalter 1 story, North Jackson-st., E. Kahlman 1 story, North Jackson-st., C. S. Shrader 2 story, North Jackson-st., D. D. Moody 3 story, Fourth street, John Lawrence 2 story, Seventh-st. H. E. Altenburg 2 story, West Seventh-st. W. M. Baughan 2 story, West Seventh-st., T. Clark 1½ story, South side Seventh-st., S. T. Galloway 2 story, South side Seventh street, Saml Swihart 1½ story, South Van Beuren street, John Lehmiller 1 story South Van Beuren street, E. Foltz 1½ story South Van Beuren street, S. U. Tarney 1½ story, South Main street, Chas. F. Floyd 1½ South Main street, J. L. Penny 1½ South Main street, J. Abright 2 story, South Main street, L. Bowers 1½ story Jackson street.

This does not include any of the new business houses, for which materials are on the ground. There are a large number of additions and improvements generally which we will give at another time Our carpenters estimate that at least seventy five new residences will be erected by next winter. There is not a vacant house in the place, while there is a large demand for houses by persons desiring to move into our midst.

B. & O. RAILROAD.

We take the following items from the Defiance Democrat, of last week:

"The B. & O. Engineers have been employed in running lines south of town this week. Two places west of the Maumee west of Defiance have been surveyed and estimated—one a half mile or so above the mouth of Tiffin River, from Philip Smith's to Stephen Horsey's the other at the Dunning farm, in Delaware township—high opposing banks being found at both places.

Estimates &c. for the crossings of the Maumee and Tiffin Rivers, on the north side will be completed by the first of next week, when reports of both will be ready for the Chief Engineer and Board of Directors for their action.

We understand two lines are being run east of this: one through Celina on the D. & M. R. R. and the southern tier of townships of Wood county to Fostoria, the other more southerly, through the northern tier of townships in Hancock county, passing near to Van Buren and crossing the Dayton Road at Bellmore.

The weather is highly favorable for out door operations and the four corps of Engineers are out on the line in full force.

W. S. of Napoleon is yet writing up the advantages of the Napoleon line, in competition for the B. & O. Extension, publishing his articles, possibly at so much per line, in Toledo and New York papers.—Like an old barrel organ we once knew of, Sheffield keeps tooting along after the tune is out, not recognizing the fact that the B. & O. Company a month ago made choice of the Defiance line for the road.

The Tiffin Tribune states that General Gibson has secured the right of way between this city and Havanna, on the B. & O. line, with the exception of two farms. The grade stakes have all been set, and active work will commence in the spring.

New York & Chicago Air Line.—The following letter has been received relative to this new project:

Chicago, March 28, 1872.

Mr. W. H. Dills,

Dear Sir:—We have now a corps of engineers on the New York line, making a survey of same, and in a few days I shall try to be in Auburn, in reference to the matter, when I hope to be able to say something definite.

Yours truly, Lee A. Hall.

There seems to be a determination upon the part of the projectors of this road to push the work through as rapidly as possible, and while our citizens are more largely interested in the Baltimore and Ohio Road we should give the above project all the encouragement we can.

EEL RIVER ROAD.

We have been asked quite frequently of late, what the prospects were for the final completion of this road. In answer we would say that we are confident that work will be commenced between here and Butler during the coming summer. We met President Collins in Fort Wayne, a few days ago and in conversation we learned that every effort was being put forth for the completion of the line from Roann to Logansport,—that a large force was employed in breaking ground, and it was hoped a short time would finish all the work.

Mr. C. stated that as soon as this was accomplished, the whole active canvassing force would then repair to this place, and use every effort to get the matter in such shape that the work might commence without delay. There is still some little subscription to work up yet, and they could not attend to this until they were relieved from the work on the west end. We still have faith in the project, because we know that a large number of our citizens desire its completion, and when the time comes we doubt not they will step forward and give it encouragement.

[For the Courier.

Mr. Editor:—Having seen a notice in your paper, signed "W. G. Peterson, Surveyor," purporting to be by order "The Board of Trustees of the town of Auburn," of a survey of said town of Auburn to be made on the 15th of April, inst.

Now, sir, with all due deference to the magnanimity and towering wisdom, and practical business intelect of said Board of Trustees, allow me to propound a few inquiries, and make a few suggestions "to whom it may concern," in regard to the order of said Board, in this matter.

1st. By what authority did said Board make said order? Or who petitioned said Board to make such order?

2nd. How is said surveyor to be paid for his services, by taxation or by individual owners of property to be effected by such survey?

3d. Is said survey to merely ascertain the outer limits of said town, or ascertain the locality of each lot, street and alley?

I present the above queries as well for the consideration of said Board, as all those citizens interested.

Now, if there is a surplus in the treasury of said Board, and it is the intention to pay for said survey out of the treasury, I think the money could be expended more beneficially than by making said survey; for example. The past year a good deal has been expended in building elevations in many places to set "coon traps upon." I think it would be better to build embankments to said elevations, so that the "Animals" could get on them.

Again, a survey of said town plat was made a few years ago, and certain points fixed and established so that any person by measurment from said points can ascertain the exact position of the corners of his lot.

The past year said Board also dug and walled up a number of holes at a considerable expense to the town in different localities. Now would it not be well to lay by a portion of said surplus (if there be any) to get water into said holes in a dry time, as a surety against fire.

I would further say that the general impression is (considering the inutility of said proposed survey) that it is a "put up job" for the benefit, and at the suggestion of some particular individual, to extort money from the citizens, for some one, as I do not hesitate to say, from the expressions I have heard in regard to this matter, that nine tenths of the citizens are determinedly opposed to such survey.

Another idea suggests itself to me, this thing is gotten up by the present enlightened and public spirited, and far-seeing Board, just before the expiration of their term of office, so that if they should not be re-elected, the coming generation might see the great good they had done and call them "Blessed."

I would further suggest, that if said order of survey is not revoked before the time fixed therefore, that all the citizens wishing such survey of their property meet said surveyor at the time and place appointed therefore, and all citizens not wishing such survey, will be considered as opposing the same, and that those wishing to have their property surveyed pay for the same themselves and not hurt the Town Board by paying thereout.

An Old Resident.

April 1st, 1872.

After rain and snow comes pretty weather, at least we have been so favored.

Remember the meeting next Saturday night at the Court House, to elect officers for the B. L. & S. A.

☞ USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP ☜

In consequence of one of our hands being on the sick list with the mumps, we are prevented from giving as much attention to the paper this week as usual.

J. V. Jones, Esq., has succeeded in securing almost the entire right of way for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad through London township on very fair terms. A few hard cases yet remain to be disposed of.—Fostoria Review.

☞ DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

Letting—The letting of the work on the Odd Fellows' Hall to be erected during the season, took place last Wednesday.—H. Altenburg & Co., being the lowest bidders for the carpenter work and lumber, were awarded the contract at $1885. F. Picker, was the lucky man for the brick work at $4 per thousand, finding all material except brick.

We have been requested to suggest that the Indianapolis Sentinel called a meeting of the Democratic Press at that city, to confer as to the different political bearings now before the people, and arrive at some conclusion upon which all can be united.

As it is now each paper is putting forward some particular man or political opinion perhaps at atvariance with its neighbor. It seems that the whole press is running wild, simply because there is nothing upon which all can agree until a line of action is marked out. There is no difference in the principle, and from this we feel confident that a meeting of this kind would be fraught with good results.—What does the Sentinel think?

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction, guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros, proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you, and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give our customers' the benefit of it.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and he having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation it justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine the mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

CALKINS' CHAMPION WASHER

PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.
It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.
Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.
Is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."
Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.
The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon. $7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver.
Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers CALKINS BROS. & CO., 304 Canal St., Chicago, Illinois.

A western female who was thrown into a high state of enthusiasm from the refusal of her husband to devote his week's salary to the purchase of a 'Dolly Varden,' slew their only hog with an axe.

An Iowa editor has a letter from a subscriber, who writes. 'I don't want your paper any longer.' The editor says this is to be regretted, as he had arranged to make the paper about six inches longer in a few weeks.

An exchange, describing a fashionable party, speaks of a gallant who whispered to lady 'and took her apart,' and ungallantly adds that 'it is not a very difficult feat to take a lady apart these times, but there is very little left of her afterwards.'

A fertile-minded Parisian suggests that the drop-curtain of the Paris Opera House should consist of one vast mirror, and he expatiates upon the magnificent effect it would create with its multiplication of lights and beautiful women in elegant toilets.

The following notice was posted in fron of the Erie Opera House.

'Pay no attention to orders from Gould or any of his hirelings.'

Underneath it some wag wrote:

'If anybody hauls down this notice shoot him on the spot. JOHN A DIX.'

A guest at a hotel in Belfast, Maine, on being told that dinner way ready, stripped off his coat, and accompanied by his wife, entered the dining room in his shirt sleeves. A waiter brought him a bill of fare, which he regarded curiously, and then laid it down. Pretty soon another was placed in his plate. Then he arose in his wrath, exclaiming: 'I didn't come here to read show bills. I came after some dinner.

A fashion reporter describes some of the toilets at a recent party at Cheyenne: 'The belle of the evening was Miss W.— She dressed faultlessly in a linsey wolsey of the palest shade of cafe au lait, cut en train and trimmed with Chicago relics.— Miss H. wore a polonaise made of blue jeans, postillioned in the back, cut vis-a-vis with a de trop bias, and gored in the most sanguinary manner.'

An Irishman had been sick a long time, and while in his state would occasionally cease breathing, and life be apparently extinct for some time, when he would again come to. On one of these occasions, when awakened from his sleep, Patrick asked: 'An' how'll we know, Jemmy, when you're dead? You're after waking up iver time.' 'Bring me a glass of grog and say to me, 'Here's till yez, Jemmy!' an' if I don't raise up and drink, thin bury me.'

A lad arrested for theft, when taken before the magistrate and asked what his occupation was, frankly answered, 'Stealing.' 'Your candor astonishes me,' said the judge. 'I thought it would,' replied the boy, 'seeing how many big ones there are in the same business as is ashamed to own it.'

A new safe has been invented which makes things very unpleasant for burglars The walls are filled with gunpowder in such a manner that the blows of a sledge or the cutting of a chisel, in the attempt to rob the safe, will ignite the power, blow off the outer crust, annihilate the burglar and leave the contents of the safe uninjured.

The local editor of the Jacksonville Journal wrote, the other day, an item to the effect that 'winter was lingering in the lap of spring,' but the managing editor 'cut it out.' He said the idea was good enough, and original, and all that sort of thing, but it would not do to publish, because the high moral tone of the paper had to be maintained in a town full of seminary girls.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing

Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD,

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr. Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this a imirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

Also Dr. Culverwell's 'Marriage Guide,' price 25 cents. Address

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE
FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 32 Commerce street, N.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

FOUTZ'S CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

How To Go West.

Forty years ago, Illinois is as far west as most people wished to go, and journeys were made in the legendary "Prairie Schooner," but in these days of progress and improvement, the word west has come to mean Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California and the Territories, and the traveler reaches almost any point therein by a splendid line of railroad.

This line of railroad is the Burlington Route which starts from Chicago over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; from Indianapolis over the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Short Lile, and from Logansport over the Toledo Peoria and Warsaw Railroad, and running through Burlington reaches Omaha, Lincoln, Nebraska City St. Joseph and Kansas city, connecting with the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and other railroads running from these cities.

The Burlington route has admirably answered the question, 'How to go West?' by the publication of a truthful and interesting document, filled with facts in regard to time, Connections, Fare &c, and illustrated by a large map, truthfully showing the whole West, which they distribute free of charge. Copies, and additional information, can be obtained by addressing, General Passenger Ag't B. M. & R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

A MOTHER'S WORK.

"She looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness."—Prov. xxxi, 27.

Early in the morning
Up as soon as light
Overseeing breakfast,
Putting all things right;
Dressing little children,
Hearing lessons said,
Washing baby faces,
Toasting husband's bread.

After breakfast reading,
Holding one at prayers;
Putting up the dinners,
Mending little tears;
Good-bye kissing children,
Sending off to school,
With a prayer and blessing,
Mother's heart is full.

Washing up the the dishes,
Sweeping carpets clean,
Doing up the chamber work,
Sewing on machine;
Baby lays a crying—
Rubbing little eyes;
Mother leaves her sewing
To sing lullabies.

Cutting little garmns,
Trimming children's hats,
Writing for the papers,
With callers having chats,
Hearing little footsteps,
Running through the hall,
Telling school is over,
And mamma's name they call.

Talking with the children
All about their school,
Soothing little troubles,
Teaching grammer rules;
Seeing about supper,
Lighting up the rooms,
Making home look cheerful,
Expecting husband soon.

Then, with all her headaches,
Keeping to herself,
Always looking cheerful,
Others lives to bless,
Putting to bed children—
Hearing say their prayers,
Giving all a good night's kiss,
Before she goes down stairs.

Once more in the parlor,
Sitting down to rest,
Reading in the Bible
How His promises are blessed;
Taking all her sorrows
And every care to One,
With that thrusting, hopefull heart
Which none but mothers own.

The Wrong Pantaloons.

The following from the Steuben Republican we publish as a warning to men who are in the habit of staying out late at night engaged in playing billiards, &c.

The following spicy little episode is said to have transpired not a thousand miles from Angola, not long since. It proves quite early that 'mistakes will sometimes occur,' etc.

A gentleman went out one evening to have a quiet game of billiard. He stuck to his cue for several faithful hours, convivialized with his friends still longer, and then went home. On retiring to rest, he was most singularly uneasy, and tossed about for some time without dropping into that peaceful slumber we usually driven from a clear conscience. His lady was annoyed and complained kindly.

It was no use, however, something drove sleep from his eyelids.

At this junction his lady was taken suddenly ill (how fortunate that he was awake!) and he was appealed to hasten off to the nearest drug store in quest of a restorative. He hastily attired himself, double quick down street, rushed into a store, obtained the article so urgently required and produced his pocket book.—Great Cæsar! what had transpired? He had never seen that wallet before; and the pants! they were not his own. Could it be possible he was in his right mind? Was it not rather all a distempered dream? He resolved to see, and without stopping to take the remedy with him, he rushed back to the wife of his bosom. He did not flourish a revolver. He did not smash furniture. He did not strike attitudes like a gladiator. He simply took part in the following conversation:

Jane?

Yes, dear.

How are you feeling?

Better, much better. I think a good sleep is all I now need. How kind in you to go to so much trouble.'

Very kind, was'nt it?

Very kind, dear.'

Jane, shall I strike a light?

If you like, dear.

The light was made.

Jane.

Yes, dear.

Do these look like my pantaloons?

Why, what can you mean dear?

I mean do these resemble the trowsers I wore last evening?

Why, how can I tell, dear? and Jane raised up with some surprised and reluctance, gave a quick glance and screamed outright.

Husband, she said with some embarrassment, you've made a ridiculous mistake somewhere, while out with your friends.—What in the world have you been doing to-night?

That's rather thin, Jane. We don't usually take off our pants to play billiards. When I went to bed to-night I laid my proper pantaloons on that chair. When I dressed to go out the pair I have on fell in my way. I put them on. I discovered at the store they were not mine. I returned at once and now I find the pair I left on the chair are missing.

Jane began to sob, weep and protest her innocence, while the husband paced the floor in deep reflection.

Jane, at last he said, I guess you can go home to your parents to-morrow. You and I have gotten along very well for a year or two, but the thing is about played.

Much of the unhappiness in this world arises from giving utterance to hasty, unkind words.

Counting Twenty Five.

I found the cherished face of Maria Ann wreathed in smiles, the other evening, when I returned from my arduous daily toil. (I am engaged as standing man at a saloon. So many candidates are treating that the saloon [illegible] to be treated. We all drink with every candidate who comes in and it makes business brisk.)

Said my chosen one, 'Joshua, I am afraid you will not always find me an angel in disposition.

Said I, That's so—hic—my dear, I don't seldom find you an 'angel' in—hic—anything.

And you are not always the most pleasant man in the world.

I did not feel called on to reply.

Now, said she, read that.

She had cut an item from the columns of some paper wherein a demented waiter told about some impossible woman who, being troubled with a bad temper, counted twenty five every time she got provoked, and thus became a sweet, aimable and dearly loved ornament of the house of her delighted husband. I read the article as well as the condition of my head would allow, and remarked 'Bosh.'

Maria Ann paid no attention to me but unfolded her plan. She said that every time I got mad I should count twenty five and everytime she got mad she would count twenty five. I asked her who she thought would pay our rent, while we sat and counted twenty five over and over all day long. Then she said I was always raising objections to her plans for our mutual improvement, and I said I was not, and she said I was enough to try the patience of a saint, and I said she was too, and she came for me and I told her to count twenty five; but she forgot all about that, and just tallied one in my left eye.

Then I was going to remonstrate with the poker, and she told me to count 25 and I said I would not; but I did before she had pulled more than half my hair out. Then she made me count twenty five over and over, until I was out of breath and felt real pleasant and good natured. So we went to supper. Now, the cat was curled up in my chair, but I did not see it until I sat down; and I did not see it then, but I was pretty sure it was there, in fact I knew it was there as well as I wanted to, and more too. I felt inclined to rise up suddenly, but as I gathered to spring she brandished the teapot, and said: Joshua, your temper is rising; count twenty five or I'll break your head, and that cat was drawing a map of the Tenth Ward with her claws around behind me, with the streets and boundaries marked in my blood.

I rose to explain, and said, 'My dear—I—'but she caromed on my head with a well shot tea cup, and sprinkled my face with a quart of hot tea, and I sat down and counted twenty five; but it killed the cat. The old fellow died hard though. I could feel him settle as his nine lives went out one by one.

A few days' practice on this rule, under the loving instruction of Maria Ann, has enabled me to conquer my temper completely. Nobody can get me mad now; I am in a state of perpetual calm, I want to see the man that wrote that story. I want to fit him for the undertaker, and make a demand for mourning goods among his friends. Then I can die happy—counting twenty five.

For Boys.

It is not necessary that a boy who learns a trade is compelled to follow it all his life. Govenor Palmer, of Illinois, was a country blacksmith once, and began his political career as a constable in Macoupin county. A circuit judge in the central part of Illinois, was once a tailor. Thomas Hoyne, a rich and eminent lawyer of Illinois, was once a book binder. Erastus Corning, of New Pork, too lame to do hard work, commenced as a shop boy in Albany. When he applied for employment first he was asked, Why, my little boy what can you do? Can do what I am bid, was the answer that secured him the place. Senator Wilson of Massachusetts, was a shoemaker. Thurlow Weed was a canal boat driver. Ex-Governor Stone, of Iowa, was a cabinet maker, which trade the late Stephen A. Douglas also worked at in his youth. Large numbers of men of prominence now living, have risen from humble life by dint of industry, without which talent is as useless as a gold coin on a barren island.—Work alone makes men bright, and it does not alone depend on the kind of work you have to do whether you rise or not—it depends on how you do it.

Corners.

Corners have always been popular. The chimney corner for instance, is endeard to the heart from the earliest to the latest hour of existance.

The corner cupboard; what stores of sweet things had it contained for us in youth—with what luxuries its shelves have groaned for manhood! A snug corner in a wall; who ever objected to such a thing? A corner in a woman's heart; once get there, and you may soon command the entire domain. A corner in the Temple of Fame: arrive at that, and you become immortal.

Ole Bull and the Yankee.

BY PROF. J. JAY WATSON.

An amusing episode in the life of the celebrated Ole Bull occurred recently in Boston.

A Yankee fiddler, by the name of Hill, having heard many wonderful things concerning the great violinist, determed to 'beard the Bull in his den.'

Learning that the 'eccentric Norwegian' was stopping at the Revere House, he wended his way thither, but before arriving at the hotel his courage failed him, and he concluded to hunt up a musical friend to accompany him.

The two proceeded as far as the steps of the hotel, when the friend concluded that he would not go father.

'Well,' says Hill, (who unfortunately stammers considerably) 'I'm b-b-bound to see tha-that great fiddler, anyhow!' and abruptly leaving his less courageous companion, he addressed a servant who was standing near, inquiring if Ole Bull was in his room.

'Give me your card sir,' said the servant and I will see.'

I-I- hain't got no cards, rejoined Hill, what do want a ca- card for?

Gentlemen have cards, meekly remarked the servant.

Do you mean to say -I-I am not a gentleman? said Hill, and the waiter narrowly escaped a broken head.

Without further ceremony, the Yankee made for the office, and ascertaining the number of the musician's room, gave a tremendous rap at the door, his courage rising with the occasion.

Kome een, said a voice.

(We will tell the remainder of the story as related to us by Hill himself.)

As I entered the room I saw a fine looking gentleman standing by the glass shaving himself.

Ha- how do you do sir? said I; my name is Hill. I play the fi-fi-fiddle and I hear you have got a bub-buster.

Yaaze, replied Ole Bull, (for it was the master himself) I haf von very fine instrument. Von't you sit down, Mr. Hill, and I vill show you my violin?

He immediately unlocked the case of his valued Di Salo and handing it to me, asked me to play for him, at the same time resuming his shaving.

Taking the violin I began to show him what I could do, and played everything I could think of that I though would please him.

I never before heard such a vi-violin it seemed to g-g-go itself.

After Ole Bull had finished his toilet, he stepped toward me, and knitting his great shaggy eyebrows, asked me how I liked his violin.

Fir-fir-first rate.

Von't you play someting? said he again accenting the last word.

This was rather an unkind cut, as I had been playing 'something' for at least half an hour; and I turned the conversation by asking him if he would not play something.

Oh yaaze! said he and taking the violin he made one dash of the bow, and the way the notes ran all around the room was a caution to fi-fiddlers in general and myself in particular.

I could almost feel my hair stand on end.

If some one had only hollered 'fire!' so I could had an excuse to suddenly leaving I would of given a new hat.

After the first shock to my nerves had subsided, however, I began to feel at home but I shall never play for a great fiddler again until I give him the first chance to play—'someting'—himself.

Elephantiasis.

A queer thing in Bellevue, yesterday, was a case of elephantsiasis, or swelling of the entire system.

Albert Morrow is the patient. He is 40 years old and has a most pleasing countenance. He was formerly slim in person but twenty years ago his feet commenced swelling. That swelling went on increasing; then it began to crawl up his legs to his knees, then up his thighs to his body. Then the dreadful poison moved through his whole system below his breast bone, his legs and stomach have become immense. He now weighs 500 pounds, and is gaining fast. His legs or thighs measure 4½ feet in circumference. His disposition is cheerful, and he does not seem to be in any pain.

His appetite, the doctor says, is immense, though he himself don't seem to think so.

How much do you eat in a day, Albert? I asked.

Well not very much, he said.

How much?

Let's see, our regular diet, three times per day, is beef, potatoes and soup. I don't know how much I do eat. I suppose one pound of beef, a half dozen potatoes, and a quart of soup. That is at my regular meals.

'That is at your regular meals; how much extra diet do you most generally consume?

The doctor allows me besides my regular meals, 6 ounces of whisky, 4 eggs, 24 oysters, 6 quarts of milk, 1 pound of beef, 5 quarts of beef soup, half pound of crackers, 1 quart of rice, and some gruel.

Great heavens! I don't wander that Albert swells up. The doctor tells me that he consumes the above amount of food daily. He eats constantly, from morning till night. His great appetite had made him financially poor, but physically fat. It would take ten men to earn enough to feed him.—N. Y. Com. Advertiser.

The Widow's Beau.

Service had commenced in the neat little santuary which the inhabitants of Fairmouth had consecrated to the worship of God. The minister had read the Psalm and the Scripture lesson, and the first lines of the opening hymn. The eyes of his people were fixed intently upon him, for he was not only a good, sound, eloquent preacher, but he was a fine looking man, too, and thus enchained usually not only the attention of the true but the false worshiper. The house was very still—the clear, melodious tones of the speaker were the only sounds that throbed on the balmy golden air which the midsummer Sabbath morn had breathed into that holy place. The first syllable of the second line was trembling on his lips, when a rustle at tee door, and the entrance of two persons, a lady and a gentleman, dissolved the charm. In a second every eye turned from the pulpit to the broad aisle, and watched with much more than ordinary eagerness the progress of the couple. A most searching ordeal they were subject to; and when they were fairly and quietly seated in the front pew, immediately before the pulpit, what a nudging of elbows there was! aye, and how many whispers, too! In vain sought the good, the eloquent Mr. B. to seal again the attention of his hearers. They had eyes and thoughts for nobody else but Widow C. and Widows C's young, handsome, and dashing attendant.

How she had cheated them! Hadn't she said, a hundred times or more, that her heart was in the grave of her buried one? that she would never marry again. Hadn't she refused to walk out with any of the unappropriated gentlemen of the village? And hadn't she said she didn't feel as though she could ever wear anything but mourning. In spite of all these protestations, hadn't she come out all at once, dressed in white, and walked arm in arm into church with a young gentleman?

Yes, indeed, she had. She would have pleaded guilty to all these charges grave ones as they were, and to the last two, how many witnesses might have been subpenaed? She was actually dressed in white.

A beautiful robe of India mull, tucked to the waist, with an open corsage, displaying an elaborately wrought chemisette; drapery sleeves trimmed with the richest Mechlin lace; undersleeves of the same expensive material; a white crape shawl; a white lace hat with orange buds and flowers; white kid gloves and light gaiters—such was the description every lady had on her tongue's end to repeat over as soon as service closed. And the gentleman—he, too, was dressed in style. Didn't he wear white pants in the latest style, and white kids, too? Didn't he sport a splendid pin, and massive chain? and didn't he gaze often, and tenderly, and lovingly on the fair creature beside him. Ah! yes, he did so, and there was no further room for doubt. Widow C. had cheated them. She had won a beau, laid aside her mourning, put on bridal attire, and was going to be married in church! But who the beau was, or whence he came, was more difficult to solve.

The services proceeded. The choir sang, the minister prayed and preached and the people wondered when the ceremony would take place, but to their astonishment, they were left to wonder, for when the benediction was pronounced, Widow C. and the strange gentleman walked with the rest of the congregation quietly out of the church. When they reached the pavement he offered his arm very gracefully, and she placed her hand very confidingly on the beautifully soft coat sleeve, and they passed on.

What a noon that was in Fairmouth! What a world of conjectures, surmises, inquiries, and doubts rolled over and over in the brains of not only gossiping ladies, but sober, matter-of-fact gentlemen. "The like of such a thing" had never occurred before in the annals of he village! There was something new under the sun—a lady had a beau and nobody knew of it. Widow C. didn't your ears—not only the right, but the left—burn that day? Ah! we wonder they hadn't dropped off!—surely they must have been crisp and crimson.

The Rev. Mr. B. preached to a crowded house that afternoon—no compliment to him, however. The magnet was in the pew before him. Every one was sure the wedding would take place then: but everybody was again disappointed, and if tongues had run at railroad speed before, they traveled the electric wires. The minister might have preached in Greek that day, and his sermon would have been quite edifyinf. But one subject engrossed the village mind: the widow's beau—that was the topic. After tea, arm in arm with the stranger, she walked the whole length of the village and away out into the cemetery, and never returned until the moon was high.

"A nice looking dress I guess she had," drawled out old Grandma W., as she listened to the gossip of the widow's wanderings. "I am glad I hain't got to wash it, all drabbled up with dew, as it must have been; but I don't s'pose she cared a word about it, she is so carried away with him. But I'll give her a piece of mind the first time I have a chance—see if I don't. Cheating us all in this way!"

But the good old dame began to fear a little by Wednesday night that she shouldn't have the desired oppertunity. She hurried through her washing on Monday, and hobbled over to the widow's as soon as possible, but the door was locked, and one of the neighbors said Mrs. C. and the gentleman went off in a carriage, nobody knew where, very early in the morning. Yes, and never got home till nine o'clock in the evening. Look out Widow C., your character is on the carpet.

If she knew it, apparently she didn't care, for the next day she went sailing with her beau, and the next day rambling with him away off to the mountain, and on the next forenoon went with him in a carriage to the station house, and there not only wept as she parted from him, but actually embraced and kissed him.

"What! in broad daylight?" exclaimed Grandma W. "Well, if I ever seed or heerd the like on't!"

Little Nell, the old lady's youngest grand-child, wondered to herself if it were any worse in broad daylight than at any other time. Perhaps you will wonder too. We do, at least.

There was a very large attendance that afternoon at the weekly meeting of the sewing society. Everybody went that could possibly leave home. And what a chattering there was when the bustle of the assembling was over. There was but one topic, but that was all-sufficient, all-engrossing—the widow's beau—for the gentleman must be her beau, or at least he ought to be.

Everybody had something to tell, or something to wonder about. But suddenly every tongue was hushed, a universal stroke of dumb-palsy seemed to have fallen on the group, as looking up it perceived the lady about whom they were conversing so eagerly, standing in the doorway.

"Good afternoon, ladies," said she, in her usual quiet, lady-like way. "I am glad to see so large and happy a gathering, it is a beautiful day for our meeting." And then she proceeded to the table, helped herself to a block of patchwork, inquired for the sewing silk, which having received, she sat down in the only vacant chair, and commenced hemming a very red bird with a very red wing, on to a very green twig, which latter had already been hemmed on to a square piece of white cloth, and the whole when completed was designed to form the twentieth part of a bed spread. She seemed to be all engrossed with the bird's bill, and spoke to no one Everyboy wondered if she had heard what they were saying when she came; but her placid countenance soon reassured the most fearful, and every one longed to commence a personal attack.

Old Grandma W. was the first to venture. She meant to do "up the matter" very delicately, and in "so 'roundabout a way" that the lady should not suspect her of curiosity. So she commenced by praising Mrs. C.'s dress. "Why, it's a real beauty," said she; "where did you get it?"

"I bought it," was the quiet reply.

"Here?"

"No."

"Where, then?"

"In New York, last spring."

"O, you did, did you? But I thought you wasn't never going to wear anything but black again?"

Every eye scrutinized the lady's face this time in search of a blush, but it continued as pale as usual, while she answered:

"I did think and say so once, but I have finally changed my mind!"

"You have, eh? But what made you?"

"Oh! I had good reasons." Here the hearers and lookers-on winked expressively at each other.

"But didn't you spoil your beautiful white dress on Sunday night, wearing it way up there to the burying-ground?"

"I did not."

"You didn't! du tell! But how could you help it? There was a wonderful heavy dew."

"I did not wear it!"

Here was a damper to the old lady. She had such a long lecture to read on extravagance, and she was so determined to do it, too, when unfortunately for her eloquent strain, Mrs. C.'s dress had hung up in her wardrobe all the time, and she had worn an old black silk!

After a while the old lady took a fresh start. She would not be baffled again. She would find out all about that beau before she went home, "that she would." So she began by saying, "Your company went away this morning, didn't they?"

"They did," was the answer, a wee bit of emphasis resting on the "they."

"He didn't stay very long, did he?"

"Not as long as I wish he had!" was the emphatic answer this time. And how the ladies did look at each other! It was as good as a confession.

"When did he come?"

"Saturday evening."

"Were you looking for him?"

"I had been expecting him a fortnight."

"Why du tell! and you never told on't either! Had he business in the place?"

"He had."

"What was it?" This was rather more direct and blunt than the old lady had meant to put it, and she forthwith apologized by saying, "I didn't mean that—I only thought—I—"

"O! I'd as lief you'd know as not!" said the lady, with a charming air of naivete, "he came to see me!"

O! Widow C., didn't your good name go down? Be careful what you say next, or you'll have only a remnant of character to go home with, and remnants always go cheap.

"He did, did he, and he didn't come for anything else, then? But was you glad to see him?"

"Indeed I was. It was one of the happiest moments of my existence."

"Well, well," said the old lady, hardly knowing how to frame her next question,—"well, he's a real good looking man any way."

"I think so too, and he's not only good-looking, but he's good hearted; one of the best men I ever knew."

"You don't say so, then! But is he rich?"

"Worth a hundred thousand or so," said the lady carelessly.

"Why, du tell, if he is! Why, you'll live like a lady, won't you? But what's his name?"

The old lady's curiosity was now roused to the higest pitch.

"Henry Macon."

"Macon! Macon! Why, wasn't that your name before you were married?"

"It was."

"Then he's a connection, is he?"

"He is."

"Du tell if he is, then! Not a cousin, I hope? I never think much of marriages between cousins."

"Henry is not my cousin."

"He isn't? Not your cousin? But what connection is he then? Du tell, now."

"He is my youngest brother!"

If there was ever rapid progress made in sewin and knitting by any circle of ladies, it was by those composing this society, for the next fifteen minutes. Not a word was uttered, not an eye raised. Had the latter been done and roguish and expressive glance which passed between Mrs. C. and the minister, who, unobserved, had stood on the threshold, a silent spectator and curious hearer, perhaps (mind you, we only say perhaps) they might have guessed more correctly the name, character, standing, and profession of the widow's beau.

How to Prevent Spring Diseases.

It is an indisputable, physiological truth that if the instincts of nature were yielded to in the spring; were cherished in her desire to take less food as the weather grows warmer, as they are yielded to in the autumn in taking more, a very large amount of the deases of spring and summer would be avoided. The great practical lesson to be learned in reference to the subject, a question of health and disease—yes, in multitudes of cases, a question of life and death—is simply this: As the winter passes, and the balmy spring time comes on, do nothing to increase the appetite; eat no more than is called for; do not be uneasy because you have little or no relish for your food; eat less every day The very best way to increase your pleasure of eating is to change the quality of food; use articles less carbonaceous, less warming; send from your table the pork and bacon, and fat meats, etc., and get hold of early 'greens,' the spinach, the turnip tops; pay increasing attention to the cleanliness of the skin; be more in the air; sleep in better ventilated rooms; let your windows be raised high at night and your inner doors be left wide open.

Mr. Clarence King thus criticises a profane teamster, who surrenders his claim:

'No, I can't blaspheme worth a cuss.—You'd jest orter hear Pete Green. He can exhort the penitent mule team to renounce all flesh and haul thirty one thousand through a foot of clay mud under one of his outporings.'

An aristocratic lady, after anxious inquiry as to what would remove paint from her window glass, was told that elbow grease' was the best thing known, whereupon she naively exclaimed: 'Oh! I'm so glad that I have found out. I wonder if they keep it at the apothecary's.'

A small boy could not see why the 'leaves' of tables, not resembling any leaves with which he was familiar, should be so called. At last he found it out.—'I know,' he cried, 'they are called leaves because you can leave them up or you can leave them down.'

At Omaha a few days ago, a red flag was placed in front of a house used for the reception of small pox patients. A large crowd was attracted by it, who besieged the front door and wondered when 'the auction was going to begin.' When informed of the real state of the case they scattered 'in double quick.'

A little six year old boy was asked by his teacher to write a composition on the subject of water, and the following is the production: 'Water is good to drink, to swim in and to skate on when frozen.—When I was a little baby, the nurse used to bathe me every morning in water. I have been told that the Injuns don't wash themselves but once in ten years. I wish I was an Injun!'

Samuel Harriman, of St. Croix, Wis., retired from military life with a brevet Brigadiership. 'Good bye Gen.' were the parting words of his old comrades in the army. 'How are you Col.' was the salutation on reaching Wisconsin. As he approached home this came down to 'how'd ye do, Captain;' and finally when he came home among the boys, he was greeted with, 'Helo Sam, got back again?'

Bidds and his wife were indulging in reminiscences over their dinner nuts and raisins.

'How one thing brings up another,' said the lady, absorbed in pleasing retrospection.

'Yes,' replied Dibbs; 'an emetic, for instance.'

He can't see why she should call him a 'mean thing,' and leave the table in a huff.

One of the best definitions of inconsistency was given by a Teutonic orator at a recent town meeting near Boston, who said: 'It is vonderful, gentlemen, how elastic some men are in deir brains!'

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., APRIL 11, 1872

In Texas one hundred Liberal Republicans have signed a call for a State Convention to send delegates to Cincinnati. California will also send a delegation.

A. T. Stewart, of New-York, it is alleged, will soon commence suits against Lost & Stocking for the money they have black-mailed him out of as an importer.

It is alleged that 500 department clerks were sent to New Hampshire to vote on the 12th, while the records show that there are but ninety-three New Hampshire men emaloyed in them.

The Radicals spent $75,000 in New Hampshire as a means of carrying the State. How long can we expect to maintain the purity of the ballot-box, or perpetuate free institutions under the influence of elections carried by such means?

Now that Tom Browne is a candidate for Governor, why does he not resign the Federal office which he holds? Does he think that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush? If he does, he is about right in this case.

There is no denying that that the Republican party contains the greater part of the intelligence and morality of the nation.—Nation.

Witness the carpet bag scalawags, Gatling gunners, Seneca Sandstone Company, Washington and New York Custom House rings, and Lowery gang

Death of Prof. Morse.

Prof. S. F. B. Morse is dead. He died at New York on Tuesday evening. He will live in history as one of the great men of the world. As an electrician, a distinguished scientific man, and an able and brilliant scholar, he goes down regretted by the wor'd. His age was 81 years.

Horace Greeley says he still stands for protection, but asks that the Cincinnati Convention shall simply leave the people free to decide for protection or free trade, as they shall severally prefer, in choice of members of Congress. He says this is the ground the Repulican party has always maintained and sees nothing in contrast with this in his letter to Mr. Grosvenor.

Congressman Bingham, of Ohio, says the issue in the Presidential election of 1872 is "whether the Democrat or Republican party shall be entrusted with the people's power in the coming election of 1872, for the choice of a Congress and a President.' Well, let the people compare the record of the Democratic party while in power, as to official integrity, with the Radical party of to-day, and then decide.

The bill recently passed by the House in relation to bounties was agreed to by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. It provides that any volunteer who enlisted prior to July 22d, 1861, under the proclamation of the President, and was mustered before August 6th of the same year, shall be paid the full bounty of one hundred dollars, provided that the same has not already been paid.

The fact that Judges Chase and Davis can permit themselves to be talked of as candidates gives the custom house and postoffice editors great distress. "Time was," says the Sandusky Register, with severe rebuke, "when a Judge who thus dishonored the ermine would receive no encouragement from any party." Yet this oft-repeated and virtuous refrain makes no hint at impropriety in the first magistrate of the nation dividing the party and embroiling the country in the interests of a renewal of his office.—Ex.

Hon. Cassius M. Clay, the pioneer abolitionist of Kentucky, has been invited to speak at Sanford on the 15th inst. Mr. Clay says, in his letter of acceptance, that "as faction, another name for the madness of the party has been the ruin of all republics, I shall attempt to speak for the white people to revive a national patriotism, and to rebuild the shattered temple of our liberties upon the solid hard-pan of the Constitution, sisterhood of all the States, and the equality and fraternity of all their citizens."

Thomas Nast is no longer to monopolize the field of political caricature in this country. Morgan, an artist on Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, is contesting the palm with Harper's Weekly, and he is doing the work admirably. Some excellent caricatures on the administration have appear in Leslie's and Grant's weak points are being shown up in a masterly manner. Mr. Morgan has entered on a rich field and the people will heartily second his work. All anti-Grant men should buy Leslie's in preference to any other pictorial weekly.

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Post says General Logan asserts emphatically that he is going to Cincinnati to do all he can to nominate Trumbull.

A Liberal Republican Convention will meet May 1, at Salisbury, North Carolina, to ratify the Cincinnati movement. It is signed by Hinton Rowan Helper and others.

Soldiers' Homesteads.

The Soldiers' Homestead Law, recently passed by both Houses, and signed by the President, is another of those shams so frequently indulged in by the Radical party, as an evidence of the great sympathy they entertain for the soldier. The Waterloo Press says that "this is as liberal an act as the soldier could look for." We give below the provisions of this act, and if any sane, honest person can see any "liberality" in them, we trust it will be properly appresiated. While Congress has given millions of acres to railroad corporations, without requiring an actual settlement, it demands of the soldier that he shall locate thereon at least one year, and improve and cultivate the same before a patent shall be issued. This is the liberality of the Radical party in a nutshell. They cry "poor soldier," and extend a liberal lip service, but when they have opportunity to help him, they turn a cold shoulder. If the soldiers could raise a fund by individual contributions large enough to lobby each house of Congress, a bill might be passed for their benefit.

1st. Every officer soldier, seaman or marine, who was honorably discharged shall, on compliance of the homestead act, receive a patent for 160 acres of public lands, not mineral, including the alternate reserved sections along the line of any railroad or other public work, providing that said settler shall be allowed six months after locating his homestead, within which to commence his settlement and improvment.

2d. That the time which the homestead settler shall have served in the army, navy, or marine corps aforesaid, shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect the title, or, if discharged on account of wounds received or disability incurred in the line of duty, then the term of enlistment shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect the title without reference to the length of time he may have served.

3d. No patent shall issue to any homestead settler who has not resided on, improved and cultivated his said homestead for a period of at least one year after he shall commence his improvements as aforesaid.

4th. Any one entitled to enter under this act and has heretofore entered less than 160 acres under the homestead act, may enter enough under the present act to make 160 in all.

5th. This section provides for the heirs of deceased soldiers.

6th. If any entry under the homestead act has lasped by reason of the absence of the pre-emptor in the navy or army, the entry shall be restored.—Any soldier, sailor, marine, officer, or other persons coming within the provisions of this act, may as well, by his agent as in person, enter on said homestead, provided that said claimant shall, within the time prescribed, commence settlement and improvements on the same, and thereafter fulfill all the requirements of this act.

Now, what is gained in the above except a reduction of time for actual settlement, over the old homestead law? We believe that the soldiers will soon have their eyes opened as to the promises made and reiterated time and again when votes were wanted to place the leaders of this "truly loyal party" in power. They will not be satisfied with this hollow mockery of their rights: We give below part of a series of preambles and resolutions passed by a soldiers' meeting at Kendallville last week, which express the sentiments of this class in every community.

Whereas, Congress has, for several years past, been giving away many millions of acres of the public lands to Railroad Companies and other corporations, thereby fostering monopolies and speculations in the public lands which are at variance with Republican Institutions; and,

Whereas, The claims of the soldiers of the late war, their widows and orphans to the substantial gratitude of the nation are paramount to the insatiate demands of Railroad corporations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the Government should, without delay, donate to each honorably discharged soldier, the widows of deceased soldiers, and to the minor heirs of the same, one hundred and sixty acres of public land, the amount of the same to be greater according to the length of service, and with the privilege of disposing of the same as they may see fit.

The Rev. Mr. Cudworth, chaplain of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, got rid of the following prayer the other day, just before some railroad bill was taken up. The subject seems to have been inspirational;

All Thy works praise Thee, Architect Divine, in all places of Thy dominion. We rejoice before Thee today, that, although fire and waters produce antagonism, from that antagonism we derive power and progress most promotive of human welfare; and we pray amid the fire water of opposing convictions touching a great common interest under consideration that the throttle valve of circumstances may start a power among us which shall force the driving wheel of opportunity along the broad highway of human good, until the grand Democratic terminus is reached—the greatest good to the greatest number. Amen.

If the Democrats of Indiana nominate Dan. Voorhees as their candidate for Congressman-at-large, and we believe they will, that party endorses him and his anti-war record. Will honest Democrats, who were loyal during the rebellion, swallow such a pill?—Mishawaka Enterprise.

As a soldier we answer, yes. What has the war record of any man got to do with the issues of to-day? We can vote for Dan. Voorhees with the firm belief that we would be doing good service in assisting by his election to rid the government of the army of thieves and swindlers that are now holding high carnival, and whom this paper upholds. We believe Mr. V. to be an honest man, and the American people need a few such men just now to save the country from the ruin that seems inevitable under Radical rule. Greeley, and Sumner, and Trumbull, and many others are beginning to see where we are drifting, and we would rather vote to-day for Voorhees with his anti-war record than for Grant with all his military glory, corner lots and bull pups.

Earthquake in California.

A terrible earthquake took place last Tuesday, April 2, in Inyo county, 400 miles south of San Francisco. Many villages and mining camps instinct with life a moment before, and tenanted by unsuspecting denizens, lay in one chaotic mass of ruins, while from beneath the mountainous pile of debris on every side arose the screams of the wounded, the terrified shrieks of those wild with fear, and the agonized groans of the dying.

Refugees say that an awful explosion suddenly occurred, accompanied by a loud rumbling, the ground was shaken violently, lifted upward, thrown forward, the surface rent into enormous chasms of great length and width Houses were crumbled into ruins, in the midst of which the inhabitants were buried; cattle and in some instances humanity hurled into these fissures an immeasurable depth; rocks were torn from their places, carrying death and destruction to everything animate and inanimate before them.

Wonders of Telegraphy.

There are rumors abroad, of a coming revolution in the telegraph business. It is reported that that a new system of transmitting news will soon be put in operation between New York and Washington, the operations of which will make all present systems seem insufferably slow and superfluous. Telegraph machines will be distributed to individuals, who by a little practice will acquire the ability to stamp their messages on a slip of perforated paper in the telegraph cypher. This when taken to the general office will be forwarded to its destination, and then by another machine printed before delivery to the person for whom it is intended. The whole time of the writing, transmission and printing of message of 100 words will be but one minute and twenty-seven seconds, and messages of that length are to be forwarded for twenty cents. The capacity of a telegraph wire in the present system is said to be about 6,000 words in ten hours, but by the new process it is claimed 40,000 words an hour can be trasmitted on one wire without confusion.

Nepotism and Corruption.

Another instance of nepotism and corruption has just been developed in Washington, and the culprit, to save exposure, or rather to prevent conviction of favoritism and malfeasance, has resigned his office. The charges againt Controller Hulburd had become so positive that an investigation was ordered, and during its progress he resigned, the Secretary of the Treasury accepting his resignation. The direct charge against him was that he had appointed his own brother Bank Examiner after it was known he had been proved a defaulter by his former employer. What a wide field was that for a corrupt man to operate! A weak bank or one upon the verge of bankruptcy can pass an examination if the Examiner is purchasable, and Controller Hulburd knows this. And what protection has the public when such officials are placed in positions of great responsibility? And it is charged also, not only, but is susceptible of proof, that a large amount of the contingency fund of the Currency Bureau has been disbursed without authority of law. It appears strange that the Secretaty of the Treasury would accept the resignation of an official while undergoing an investigation of his official conduct. Was he fearful that the disclosures would be damaging to the Administration and be another club in the hands of the Liberal Republicans?

A short time ago a paymaster in the army turned up a defaulter to near five hundred thousand dollars. Is not this case another evidence of the loose way that accounts are kept in the departments at Washington?

With such facts, and they almost as numberless as the sands on the sea shore, under the present order of public affairs, can there be any question as to the necessity of administrative and revenue reform?—State Sentinel.

The Chicago Evening Post suggests that a couple of jackasses be sent to Cincinnati to give "tone" to the Convention. Let the editor of the Post come on.—Cincinnati Commercial.

A few days ago the Hon. Godlove Orth eloquently said to the colored voters of Indiana: "Let no man be deceived." And then he went on and uttered wicked misrepresentations to those simpled colored voters. Can God love Orth, and such things be?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Throughout the State of Michigan the spring elections show large Democratic gains.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Common Pleas Court, in a cause wherein Mary Houghton is plaintiff, and Jotham Woolsey and Samuel W. Sprott are defendants, required me to make the sum of five hundred and sixty dollars and eighty-four cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, APRIL 27th, 1872,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

All that portion of the west half of the south-east quarter of section three, in township thirty-three, north of range thirteen east, lying and being south of the Auburn and Spencerville road running through said land, and enough more off the east side of the balance of said described land to make in all fifty acres in DeKalb county, Ind.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. C. S. HARE,

The District Attarney says it will be sometime yet owing to the presure of his business, before he will be ready to bring the Stokes case to trial. The voluminous bill of exceptions put in by councel for the prisoner is hardly yet digested by the District Attorney.

CALKINS'.
CHAMPION WASHER

PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

Is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in conception, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

$7.50 is all that is asked for this great labor-saver.

Agents wanted everywhere. A liberal discount to Agents and the trade. For terms address the Manufacturers

The editors of this district will "meat" at Kendallville this week.

The muddy season will not prevail much this year. Glad of it.

The Valparaso Messenger has changed to a six column quarto.

The Corunna Academy opened on Monday last, for the spring term.

One of our hands has been laid up with sickness, and we are pressed for help.

The roads for a year past have, on an average, been remarkably good.

There seems to be a rush of business all over town. Let her rush.

Our town, although crowded with people every day, was never more orderly.

What's the difference between a June bug and that fellow that struck oil on last Monday? Eh.

For good five cent cigars go to Smith & Hare's.

Wanted.—Three or four girls to learn the millinery trade. Call first door north of Griswold House.

T. R. Totten and C. C. Clark have not formed a partnership for the sale of organs and sewing machines.

M. Dorland, Esq., a prominent railroad man, now connected with the Air Line, gave us a call last week.

We have not obtained a good boy yet to learn the trade. We should be glad to get a good stout boy from the country.

It is said that if it rains on Easter Sunday it will rain thereafter for seven consecutive sabbaths. Watch it.

Girl Wanted.—A girl about fifteen years, to live with a small family in town. Apply at this office.

The price of groceries reduced at Smith & Hare's.

Seeds.—If you want to obtain good reliable garden seeds go to Smith & Hare's. They keep the best quality, and are warranted.

The opinion seems to prevail that the roots of the wheat are all right, and that with favorable weather there will yet be a good crop.

The Northern Indiana M. E. Conference closed its labors at Muncie, last Monday. The next annual meeting will be held at Logansport.

Capt. John Butt, the old reliable grocery dealer of Waterloo, is doing a fine business, because he keeps excellent goods at low prices.

There did'nt seem to be much effort made towards getting up the four days County Musical Convention at this place. Why thusly?

We learn that the Engineers of the B. & Ohio. Railroad are already in the east part of the county, driving down the grade stakes and will be here in a few days.

The Fruit House, at Fort Wayne, has made another reduction in its prices which was received too late for this week. It will appear in our next.

J. D. Devor, Esq., of the LaGrange Standard and Baxter, of the Press, were in town last week, attending the Radical caucus. Look out for high flyers.

Mr. N. King, the section boss at the Eel River junction wants a lot of railroad ties delivered at that point for which he will pay the highest price.

Thomas Lock, at Waterloo, gives notice of a forgery on a due bill given by him to one John Galligan. He says it has been changed from 75 cents to $75.

There has been a change in the proprietorship of the Eagle Mills. It is now owned by I. M. Thomas and R. Elson, W. W. Griswold selling his interest to the former.

Personal.—Our excellent friend C. P. Houser, Esq., and his accomplished lady gave us a call on Monday of this week.—Abundant success to you, Cal, is the wish of the printer.

W. Schyfer & J. L. Penny, have formed a partnership in the lumber trade, having bought I. M. Thomas' interest and will keep up the supply in all kinds of Pine lumber, Lath, Shingles, etc.

Returned.—Our accomplished friend, Dr. Spooner, who located at Liberty Mills a few months ago, has returned and having formed a partnership with Dr. Ford will continue in the practice of medicine.

For the Ladies.—You want to make your husband go forthwith and purchase one of those nice scrubbers, for sale at Beard's grocery. They are the nicest thing out. No family should do without one.

The wheat looks in a sorry plight.—Prospects even for an ordinary crop bad. Col. City Post.

Not so in DeKalb County. On last Sunday we took a ride through the north part of the county, and saw many fields of wheat that looked encouraging.

Tax-payers should remember that only a few days more remain before a penalty for non-payment of taxes will be collected. Also remember that there may be something due for the Courier, which we will be glad to receive, for you know the machine must be greased.

J. & P. Pierr, of Fort Wayne, are displaying a very fine stock of millinery goods just received. They keep many varieties of bonnet frames, and are able to supply the country trade with good stocks at close figures.

Our business men are cleaning out the gutters in front of their business streets, and throwing the contents upon the street Now, the Marshall should be on hand to remove it, as it is too filthy to remain where it is. This ought to be attended to at once.

The Canada Southern Railroad has 'lit' on the Kendallville line. We are able to make this announcement from the fact, that the Standard says that the best route will get it, and there is none to be found in all—Kendallville, but think that they are located on the superlative degree line. "Barkus is willin'."

The Warsaw Union says that it is whispered around that Billy Williams will be a candidate for Congress in this District, as sertions to the contrary notwithstanding. That was our opinion ever since he was whipped out at the Republican State Convention.

The Bluffton Banner goes for the Fort Wayne Sentinel on the Sarnighausen question. That's right, Craig. We hav'nt got time now, or we would pulverize the whole thing to a jelly in a twinkling. The Sentinel can never make the people believe but that justice was done in the premises.

New Goods.—Those popular caterers to the public taste, Messrs. Boozer & Blattner, of Waterloo, are receiving an immense stock of dry goods, groceries &c., and are now ready to fill all demands made upon them in that line. You will find them obliging, agreeable gentlemen, and their goods as they represent them.

The Waterloo Press seems to think that none but the valliant editors of that sheet, ever served in the army, and ridicules us for taking the part of a crippled soldier.—We want it distinctly understood that we can produce a war record as good as any niger loving advocate of corruption, that ever howled "loyalty."

Lamley & Rosenthal, are now manufacturing one of the best brands of cigars now made. When the red bird brand first came out it was just ordinary, and it has finally about played out. But the cigars made by the above firm are still keeping their former reputation and are doing better now than ever. We would advise our retail dealers to try them and know for themselves.

Venders of patent hay forks and other farm implements are abroad through the country swindling farmers. They generally leave one of their machines and take a farmer's receipt for it, but said receipt, after being manipulated, turns out to be a note for a large sum of money. Farmers should look out for these scoundrels and read a paper before it is signed.

Dr. T. H. Purdy, the celebrated Indian Doctor, will visit Auburn next Monday, and remain three days. The Doctor goes on the plan that if he does not cure you he will ask no pay. We know that he has met with great success in Ohio and elsewhere, and we believe he will give satisfaction in all cases of chronic deseases.—Call and see him at the Weaver House.

During the absence of R. Wes McBride, Esq., at Conference last week, his family were aroused one night by some person trying to get into the house. Not being easily frightened, Mrs. McBride arose, and taking her husband's loaded rifle, carefully raised a window, with the intention of trying her skill at mark upon the intruder; but he made off in time to save himself.—We mention this to let the individual know that his avocation is sometimes attended with danger.—Press.

Hats.—Jas Harper & Co., of Fort Wayne, are doing an immense business in the silk hat trade. Orders are going in rapidly, and the new style is becoming very popular. They put up a very handsome hat, warranted to fit. Now, that spring is upon us in all its vernal beauty, it would really be naughty not to provide yourself with a fashionable tile, with which to welcome her. We suggest a visit to this establishment.

Installation.—The officers for the present term of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 116, were installed last Wednesday evening as follows: Jno. L. Davis, N. G., A. P. Foltz, V. G., S. L. Yandes, P. G., F. E. Davenport, R. S., Albert Robbins, P. S., S. Lauferty, T.

The following were installed as officers of Cedar Encampment, No. 65.

S. L. Yandes, C. P., W. Griswold, H. P. T. B. Totten, S. W., S. Lauferty, J. W., F. E. Davenport, Scribe, S. T. Galloway, Treas.

Excellent.—We had the good fortune to be at Wayne last Monday evening, and attended the concert given by the Conservatory of Music, at that place. The programme was excellent, and each part rendered in fine style. Four young ladies played on two panios producing a sound as of one instrument. Miss. Nettie Piper sang charmingly, while Bartlett, the teacher of vocal music, posesses one of the finest voices we ever heard. Mr. Lang also participated to the entertainment of all present. The conservatory is doing splendidly, and is meeting with a hearty support from all sections. The next term commences April 17th.

ANOTHER RADICAL DEFAULTER.

Defalcations by prominent Radical officials seem to be the order of the day.—So numerous have they become of late that startling discoveries of this kind are being made right in our midst. The last sensation in this line is that of the heavy defalcation in the Fort Wayne Postoffice by the Deputy Postmaster, Geo. W. Durgin. Fort Wayne was the scene of considerable excitement last Friday morning, when a detective discovered the fact that there was a deficit in the Postoffice of $8100. And when we consider the one who perpetrated this act of perfidy, we are still more convinced that there is little honesty throughout the entire workings of the government. Durgin was the avowed leader of the Radical party in Allen County, one in whom every confidence was rested, and yet he has come to grief. Such is life in the Radical party.

The following from an exchange speaks the truth: "Will our readers remember that a line in this paper is to us as a yard of muslin is to the merchant, pound of coffee to the grocer, a beef-steak to the butcher? We wish they would remember this, for we are asked every week to insert matter that is really advertising, free We can't afford it.' And the very men who are continually requesting such favors are the last ones who would go to a merchant and ask for some small articles gratis.

Organized.—We are glad to state that the stock of the Building Loan and Savings Association, has all been taken, and an organization effected. The following persons were elected: Directors for the ensuing year, Wm. McIntyre, J. B. Casebeer, Jno. L. Davis, D. Z. Hoffman, T. C. Mays, C. S. Hare, J. Abright, H. C. Peterson and A. Robbins. Articles of Association have been filed and everything is now in running order. Monthly dues will be paid in for April, between the 20th and 24th. We are confident this will result in much good to the place.

The best township and distance map of this State ever published, has just been issued by E. C. Bridgman, Esq., of No. 5 Barclay street, New York. It is perfect in every respect, and the large numbers of them now being ordered is evidence of their correctness and popularity. The demand for a cheap map, in half mounted style, like this must be great, and agents will find the sale of them a profitable business. Agents are wanted throughout the State. Address as above.

The editor of the North Manchester Globe, goes for Reub. pretty sharply in his last issue, for "befouling the Indianian with such indecent and corrupting innuendoes," and "dirty little squibs.' We join in with the Globe editor, too, in raking those fellows who are always publishing some "dirty little squibs." There is Meyers, Wadsworth, Sweet and two or three others in the two districts, who need a rap upon the knuckles occasionally for some of the queer little paragraphs they occasionally slip in among their other reading.—Goshen Democrat.

How about Bottomfelt?

Thomas the "meanist," otherwise known as the Radical condidate for Govenor, requested us, while here the other day, to deal with him kindly. We will, Thomas. Go back to your old business, help some more Gordons to swindle the government out of thousands of dollars, in fact, Thomas, go at any thing at which you can eke out an existence and leave this farcical business to those that would have you believe that there was a ghost of a chance for election. We mean this kindly, Thomas, and yet we know you will not by happy.

If you want to see the most new goods of every description, in the boot and shoe line, that ever you saw in your life, just go to the store of W. W. Humes. Every shelf and box is piled full, and stacks of goods are piled upon the counters. The ladies stock he has brought to the market is surprising. All goods from the cheapest kind to the most fancy, and all to be sold at the very lowest figures. Don't take our word for it, but go and see for yourselves

The new editor of the Rochester Sentinel says he has adhered to Democratic principles all his life. That's enough—a man that adhered to that party through four years of terrible war, brought on for the purpose of destroying the government by the very party to which he adhered and then openly confess it!—Northern Indaian.

The way some of these Republicans talk one would suppose none but a hand ful of them did the whole business of the war. We know of many good Democrats that done as much fightnig in the late "unpleasantness" as did these valiant Republicans. Therefore, men could be good Democrats during the war as well as at any other time. But it is always big "I" and little "you" with some people.

A correspondent writing from this place to the Fort Wayne Gazette says that in our town there is a large and respectable element decidedly in favor of selecting at our May election, our best men for corporation offices without regard to party politics, looking only to the improvement and best interests of our place. The old fogy idea of having separate party tickets for such insignificant offices, is being buried very low, by the progress of the times and business interests of our locality.

We trust that our very best men will be selected. Our present Town Board, though individually good, clever gentlemen, have not shown that sagacity in the administration of affairs that ought to have been exhibited, and we trust that the next, whether Republican or Democrat, will be more fortunate in this respect. We have men here that are identified with progress and improvement, and these are the ones that should be at the head of our town government.

Town Survey.

Mr. Editor.—I desire only to add a thought or two in regard to this question. The survey of the town has been discussed on one side for a considerable time, the other not saying one word. It has been denounced as an outrage, of being without lawful authority, as a scheme to deplete our treasury for the benefit of one or a few, and as an attempt to meddle with private property. This has all been asserted in time for an answer, yet our wise town board or those endeavoring to uphold their action, have not attempted to answer these objections, or justify the cause. Now, what is the inference from these circumstances? This or nothing, that they intended, and probably yet intend to carry out this measure regardless of law or right

One more remark let me add. If this survey is made and paid for by the town a man with five thousand dollars of taxable personal property will pay just as much as the man who owns five thousand dollars of taxable town lots. One receives no benefit, the other all. Again, a man with one lot valued at 1,000 dollars pays as much as another who may own twenty lots valued at 1,000 dollars. The one gets one lot surveyed, the other twenty. Is such action right, equal or even decent?

D.

Now that our street boys have begun to play marbles again, it may interest them to know that the boys in New York have introduced a new game with them some what similar to bagatelle. By this the lucky or good player can just "break" his opponent in half the time it takes by the old game—and not use over three fourths of the sidewalk.

Radical Caucus.

"Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble."

The above expresses the real feeling manifested here last Thursday at the Radical pow-wow, more pertinently than we could possibly do. In fact there was a fer [illegible] entire ramifications.—Each individual member felt that the rest were there to defeat the little plan he had laid out for the campaign, in which he had modestly figured himself as a candidate for an office.

There was General Blair—we mention the General first because we regard him as the prominent man of the County, in his party, of course, and we dont like to ignore our own citizens to the elevation of foreigners. Then, there was John Baker, of Goshen, one of them as has his views as to how the campaign should be run not forgetting, in the east to give himself a prominent part. Judge Tousley, the learned Judge, was there also, full of aspirations, and yet he was not happy. His fellow townsmen was there looming up with fearful portentions of coming events, and the reflection caused a sadness to overspread that bland like countenance, But how cool, Oh, how cool were these two truly great men—each ready to pulverize the other to the finest powder yet so pleasant, so courteous, and urbane, what a picture to contemplate. Next came Best, the incomparable Best, whose like we may never see again for sly, cool, calculating modesty and unassuming pretentions, with countenance so child-like as to forever efface any impression that might be formed prejudicial to him as a 'neatist' Well, Best was there, and he knew what he was there for, you bet. And Rose, our sunshiny Rose, whose petals, politically, have just begin to burst forth in all their beauty, yes, Rose was there in his strength but Judge Clapp wasn't and Rose was happy. Glorious premonition! Happy childhood, "Bright by the dreams." Tableau. There were lesser lights there, such as McBride, and Devor, and Baxter, and Tom Brown, with an e and the hitching and the sawing, and the blinking, and the smile behind which a thousand daggers gleamed all went to make up one of the most suicidal scenes we have ever had the animosity to witness. Call again, dear friends, loving friends, friends in every hour of need, call again. Ever of thee, we shall fondly dream, so disinterested, so affectionate, so self sacrificing to the wishes of the other.

Brainard's Musical World for April has made its appearance filled with all sorts of good things for musical people.

We notice an unusual amount of original matter in this number, and especially call the attention of our readers to two series of articles commenced in this issue. The article 'Hints on buying Instruments' is just what is needed by those who contemplate purchasing a piano. The first paper on 'Music in the Public School,' is ably written and interesting.

Published at the Great Central Musical Publishing House of S. Brainard's Sons, in Cleveland, O., at $1 a year.

☞ USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP ☜

"Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise," says Ben Franklin and he knew; for he always went to a man who resembled Davenport for his wall paper.

A young gentleman who attends Mite Societies requests us to publish the following modus operandi for raising money at such gatherings: "Let a gentleman seat himself in the middle of the room and offer a round sum (say ten cents) to each lady who kisses him.' The ladies, of course accept the challenge for the good of the cause.

☞ DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers] equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

Glorious News for Auburn and Vicinity.

We are now prepared to offer to our old patrons and public generally the glorious news, that we have succeeded in purchasing our entire stock of Spring and Summuer goods at very low prices. Having a buyer constantly in New York, and be having effected arrangements before the great advance in woolen goods. The proprietors of the Red Front Clothing House at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. take great pleasure in being able to announce that they, as heretofore, are foremost in the clothing market as regards styles, durability and prices, and are prepared to sell clothing at such low prices as to defy all competition. We are now prepared to furnish clothing at as low prices as any time during last year, and it being acknowledged by all, that we have undersold all of our competitors is evidence enough to convince the public generally that what we advertise we substantiate. Having four large stores constantly in operation it justifies us to buy our goods in much larger quantities, so we buy direct from the Commission Merchants, and save the profits of Manufactures & Jobbers which we propose to give our customers the free benefit of. It will pay you well to stop in and examine the mammoth stock of new spring & summer goods at the popular Red Front Clothing Hall, at No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Rothschild & Bros.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York: "Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool casimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $1[illegible],00, custom made $18,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

MARRIAGES.

HOUSER—HOISINGTON—On the 28th of March at the residence of the Bride's parents, by the Rev. Mr. Brown, Mr. C. P. Houser, and Miss. Amanda E. Hoisington, all of this county.

It will be seen from the above that our friend Cal has cut loose from the moorings of batchelordom and entered the port of matrimony, where we trust he and his beautiful bride will find all the sweets of Elysian bliss.

DEATHS.

JOHNSON—In this city, on the 4d inst., at 1 p. m., Mrs. Hattie Mallary Johnson, of neuralgia in the head.

The funeral will take place to-day from her late residence on Walnut street.

Her suffering was only of about ten days' duration, and, although painful at first, her last moments were quiet and peaceful and the sufferer resigned to her condition both mentally and physically.—Her death bed was surrounded by many friends which her gentleness and kindness had drawn around her in life. Her disease baffled the skill of two of our most prominent physicians who were in constant attendance. Mrs. J. leaves many friends in this city and elsewhere, who will mourn her loss. She was formerly of Bucyrus, Ohio.—Louisville Journal.

The deceased was a sister of Mrs. Mays, and visited us last summer. The suddenness of her illness and death prevented our attendance at her bed side, but we are assured that her lot was among kind and loving friends. We feel grateful for this, though it would have been more satisfaction to have been present with her in the dying hour.

OBITUARY.

Very suddenly at Morence Kankakee Co. Ill., March 1st, Henry L. Keeran, formerly a resident of Auburn, DeKalb Co., Ind. The subject of the notice had resided in Kankakee County for several years, during which time he had endeared himself to many friends by his active friendship habits, and good moral character. Posessed of a manner at once gentle and winning he made many friends, who the longer they knew him esteemed him more, as they discovered the sterling qualities lying beneath his placid exterior. The writer of this article, with his many bereaved friends, have taken the melancholy pleasure in thus testifying—feeling that in his loss not only have we lost a valued friend but society a young member whose place will not soon be filled by one so worthy. To his bereaved relations we tender our heartfelt sympathies. May he rest in peace.

Miscellaneous.

A Wisconsin editor speaks of a wind which 'just [illegible] legs and howled.'

The Chicago sufferers paid over $3,000 last week to hear Charlotte Cushman read.

They have a woman acting as conductor on the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad, on one of the passenger trains.

Rev. Peter Cartwright, the well-know Methodist minister and pioneer, has recovered, after all and may live to preach a long time yet.

Knoxville, Tennessee, is so healthy that the undertakers go about the streets and desparingly ask those whom the meet, ain't you dead yet?

An exchange announced a wild serial, entitled 'Quick as lightning; or the Chemist's Journey; a tale of nitro-glycerine.' That would be interesting.

Eight pounds of sausages for one dollars are advertised in New York. Dog cheap.

A woman named Sarah Pinckney is Captain of one of the steamboats on the Mississippi.

LaCrosse, Wis., has an ox with a horn ten inches in length growing from his breast between the fore legs.

They tell of a railway in Kentucky whereon the locomotives are assisted up steeps grades by a yoke of oxen.

Mr. Polsgrove, of Fort Scott, Kansas, has raised from seed, in one year, a grove of soft maples four feet high.

A Tennessee editor was so rejoiced at the death of a rival that he announced it under the head of 'Amusements.'

Williamson, who recently murdered his daughter in Muncie, Ind., has died of the wounds which he afterward inflicted upon himself.

A Philadelphia woman who had broken her leg was so modest that she would not permit the surgeon to set it, and there being no female doctor aroud, mortification ensued, which resulted in death.

A Terrible Premonition Realized.—Cleveland last week was the scene of one of those awful cases of mysterious warning and sad realization that have been agonizing the country papers lately. The circumstances are as follows:

A young and beautiful married lady whose husband was down town attending a railroad meeting, stepped into a neighbor's house, to while away an hour or so until he returned. While engaged in knitting a stocking, she was startled by the sudden dropping of all the stitches from one needle, she proceeded to gather the up, when a looking-glass in the room fell and broke; she then felt that some deadly peril hung over her husband, and rushed home. The front door was open; his overcoat hung upon the floor, and his plug hat was placed upon the marble bust of Daniel Webster, in the parlor. With an undefinable feeling of terror, she rushed to her room—only to find her warning realized; there he lay on the bed, with his boots on the pillows and the ace of spades tightly clutched in his hand. She did not faint, but denied trumps and played a club—around his head—until he promised to give up such "tricks."

Cambridge has again won the great University boat race in the Thames. This is the third consecutive victory achieved by the Cambridge men, as they gained the races of 1869 and 1870.

A proposition is before the New York Legislature to set apart the wild hunting grounds in the northern part of that State known as 'John Brown's tract,' for a grea public park.

The Stokes trial goes slow. A bill of exceptions has been brought out whicht contains 700 pages, and will take a man a week to read.

In the St. Joseph fruit region the reports from different sections concur in the opinion that up to the present time the prospects for a good peach crop are better than last year at this time. This is the report along the Michigan shore.

It is said to be fifty four years ago this winter since a season has run from November to March without a general thaw or 'break up.' At that time the scarcity of water was similar to that existing now.

A joyous damsel rushed into a citizen's arms at London Bridge exclaiming! 'Oh, you are my long lost brother.' She soon discovered her mistake, and rushed off in a confused manner, accompanied by her long brother's purse.

Persons who are accustomed to use leaves for sweeping carpets, and find that they leave stains, will do well to employ fresh-cut grass instead. It is better than tea leaves for preventing dust, and gives the carpet a very bright look.

To clean paint without soap, use powdered French chalk and hot water; it adds to the whiteness of the paint without injuring it. When soap is used, add a little saleratus to the suds, wash with a flannel cloth, then rinse, and wipe with a linen cloth.

A young lady entered a store in Wayne county, N. Y., recently and asked for 'long hose.' The obliging clerk was absent up stairs for some time, and returned with a couple of long handled corn hoes, and insisted upon selling them.

A prominent citizen of Xenia, O., approached his sleeping apartment a few nights since, at rather a late hour and gently tapped at the door.

'Who is it?' inquired the better half; to which the proper interrogatory the heartless man replied by asking: 'Who do you expect at this late hour?'

Every railway station in England has a stairway or platform, or some other way of crossing the track, and such persons as disregard the prescribed way and step upon the track are immediately seized and fined $25. In this way the companies are saved suits for direct and constructive damages.

A negro who was suspected of surreptitiously meddling with his neighbor's fruit being caught in a garden by moonlight, non-plussed his detectors by raising his eyes, clasping his hands and piously exclaiming:

'Good Lord! dis yere darkey can't go nowheres to pray any more widout being disturbed.'

A shrewish wife, quite sick, called her husband to come and sit by her side.

'This is a sad world, my dear," said the wife plaintively.

'Very,' coincided the man.

'Were it not for leaving you, I would love to quit it.'

'O my dear,' eagerly responded the fellow, 'how can you think I would interfere with your happiness. Go, yes by all means, go.'

The lady got well.

'Johny where is pa?' 'Gone fishing sir.'

'He was fishing yesterday was he not?'

'Yes sir,'

'What did he catch?' 'One catfish, the rheumatism, two eels, the toothache, and some little ones. Ma says he will catch fits to-day; just wait till he gets home.'

Mathey Arnold says that the difference between the Bible and the Koran is that the former grew, while the latter was made.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H McDONALD & CO., Druggists and Gen. Agents, San Francisco, California, and 32 and 34 Commerce Street, New York.

FOUTZ'S CELEBRATED Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is eveywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

BALLAD OF HIRAM HOVER.

Where the Moosetockmaguntic
Pours its waters into the Skuntic,
Met, along the forest-side,
Hiram Hoover, Huldah Hyde.

She, a maiden fair and dapper,
He, a red-haired, stalwart trapper,
Hunting beaver, mink and skunk,
In the woodlands of Squeedunk.

"Why," he murmured, loth to leave her,
"Gather yarbs for chills and fever,
When a lover, bold and true,
Only waits to gather you?"

"So," she answered, "I'm not hasty;
I prefer a man more tasty.
Leastways, one to please me well
Should not have a beasty smell."

"Haughty Huldah," Hiram answered;
"Mind and heart alike are cancered;
Just look here! these peltries give
Cash, wherefrom a pair may live.

"I, you think, am but a vagrant,
Trapping beasts by no means fragrant;
Yet—I'm sure it's worth thank—
I've a handsome sum in bank."

Turned and vanished Hiram Hover;
And, before the year was over,
Huldah, with the yarbs she sold,
Bought a cape against the cold

Black and thick the furry cape was;
Of a stylish cut the shape was;
And the girls, in all the town,
Envied Huldah up and down.

Then, at last, one winter morning,
Hiram, came, without a warning;
"Either," said he, "you are blind,
Huldah, or you've changed your mind.

"Me you snub for trapping varmints,
Yet you take the skins for garments:
Since you wear the skunk and mink,
There's no harm in me, I think."

"Well," said she, "we will not quarrel,
Hiram; I accept the moral,
Now the fashion's so, I guess
I can hardly do no less."

Thus the trouble was all over
Of the love of Hiram Hoover;
Thus he made sweet Huldah Hyde,
Huldah Hoover as his bride.

Love employs, with equal favor,
Things of good and evil savor.
That which first appeared to part,
Warmed, at last, the maiden's heart.

Under one impartial banner
Life the hunter, Love the tanner,
Draw from every breast they snare,
Comfort for a wedded pair.

ON THE RAIL.

A Bohemian of the most reckless type sends his experience in Rochester to a New York city paper:

I did not find the luxuriant cuss who stole my watch on the Bleecker street car in Syracuse, and hearing that an awful mean looking had been seen in Rochester, I went there. The watch was one of Jugfiernaut's make and I wanted it. On the way to the depot in Syracuse a real nice little lap dog jumped over a fence and sprang at me. He weighed more than $10 worth of coal at June prices, and as I gazed down his mouth I thought of Jonah. He remarked to me, 'Bow, wow wow and I said to him in a pacifying way, 'Nice Teaser, pretty little Teaser;' but a lady shouted, Rover—here, Rover,' and he left me. Then she quietly informed me that I needn't be frightened; the dog had had his dinner and wasn't hungry.

I got into the cars and took a seat in juxtaposition to a female. That female's face was a perfect insurance company for her—it insured her against ever getting married to anything but a blind man. Her mouth looked like a crack in a dried lemon, and there was no more expression in her face than there is in the spinal column of a cup of cold custard. She appeared as though she had got through one famine and had got two-thirds through another. She was old enough to be great grand mother of Mary that had the little lamb. She was chewing prize pop corn and carried in her hand a yellow rose, while a band box and a cotton umbrella nestled sweetly by her side. I could'nt guess whether she was a mission of charity or going west to start a sawmill I was full of curiosity to hear her speak, so I said:

The exigencies of the times require great circumspection in a person who is traveling.'

Says she, What?

Says I, The orb of day shines resplendent in the blue vault above.

She hitched around uneasy like—then she raised her umbrella and said, I don't want none of your sass—git out, and I got out.

Then I took a seat alongside of a male fellow, who looked like the ghost of Hamlet lengthened out. He was a stately cuss and he was reading.

Said I, Mister did you ever see a camel-leoparp? I said camel leopard because it is a pious animal, and it never eats any grass without getting down on its knees. He said he never seen one. Then I said, Do you chew?

He said, No sir.

Then I said, How sweet is nature?

He took this for a conundrum, and said he didn't know.

Then he said he was deeply interested in the history of a great man. Alas, he exclaimed, we have but few.

I told him I knew one; the man that made my cooking stove was a great fellow.

Then he asked me to read.

Says I, What you got?

He replied, Watt's Hymns' Reveries by Moonlight and How to Spend your Sabbath.

I said, None of them for Hannah, but if he had not an unabridged business directory of New York I would take just a little read.

Then he said, Young man, look at these gray hairs.

I told him I saw them, and when a man got as old as he was he ought to dye.—Said I, You need'nt think those hairs are any sign of wisdom; it's only a sign that your system lacks iron and I advised him to go home and swallow one crowbar.

He took this for irony, and what little entente cordiale there was between us was spilled. It turned out that he was chaplain of a base ball club.

When we got to Rochester I called for a bowl of bean soup. I send you the receipt for making it: Take a lot of hot water, wash it well, and boil it until brown on both sides; then very carefully pour one bean in it and let it simmer. If it won't simmer pour in water until it does simmer. When the bean begins to be restless, sweeten with salt, then put it up in a air tight can, hitch each can to a brick and chuck them overboard, and the soup is done.

Genesee Falls are at Rochester. Sam Patch made his last jump there. His jump down was a success, but his jump up was a failure, because he never riz. I bet a fellow I could tell to a quart how much water fell over the falls in a year. He bet and I said two pints to a quart. I won the bet. They settle coffee with codfish skins but they settle Rochester with men and women. The only living settler who is living died a few years ago. Rochester is celebrated for its fine turnouts. I saw a very fine trnout to day; a wagon upset and spiled a lot of women. Next Sunday will be very generally observed here as the Sabbath. It is not kept wholly. Remember me to the peace makers. No cards.

Seven Hundred Miles on Foot.

BY PROF. J. D. BUTLER.

LINCOLN, March 25th, 1872.

Nils Nysten is a Swede,—and was horn where his forefathers, even to the years of many generations, had been content with 'only this and nothing more'—

'To draw nutrition, propagate, a rot.'

He aspired higher,—but so low was his birth, and so strong the barriers around him, that he was three score years old before he could work his passage to America. Two years ago he reached Iowa with his wife, and penniless, stopping first in Mount Pleasant.

While working there at his trade of wagon making he became convinced that his best means of further advancement, was to secure a Nebraska Homestead without delay. His mode of making this boon his own, is worth telling to encourage the others.

HOW HE DID IT.

He walked from his home of Lincoln, 307 miles, along the track of the Burlington & Missouri Railroad. This journey he accomplished in about fifteen days. At Lincoln he found shelter in the Immigrant's Rest, a building provided by the B. & M. Railroad Co., where land hunters may lodge and live without charge, while seeking farms.

Looking at the maps of public lands in the United States Land Office there, he judged York county to afford the most desirable homesteads. He therefore walked on thither—seventy miles further. Having picked out the farm which suited him best of all those still vacant, he returned to the Land Office and filed his claim to it Sept. 2d, 1871, paying $14 in fees. His homestead consists of 80 acres, in the 34th section of the 11th township in the 3d range west, of the 6th principal meridian.

WHAT THEN.

Repairing again to the farm of his choice he made sundry improvements for a month He finished him a dug-out and stacked 12 tons of wild hay.

His purse was now empty, save one dollar and a half, but he walked to lincoln, and thence home, as he had walked hither daily laying behind him about twenty miles.

Soon after reaching home, at the end of a seven hundred mile walk, he learned that his hay stacks had been burned by a prairie fire—having no plow, he had been unable to make a fire break around them. But throughout all, he seemed to have lost nothing of heart or hope, but to have remained as jolly as Mark Tapley, in Chuzzlewit.

Through all the winter he worked at his trade, sometimes beginning his toils at two o'clock in the morning. Thus be finished three good wagons.

Two be traded off, for a mule and harness. Then putting on board his wife, a barrel of pork, a harrow, all of wood, made by himself, and some other needments, he drove westward, by the same route which he had last fall traveled on foot.

He took with him three other Scandinavian Homestead hunters, each with a wagon and his family in it.

He arrived in Lincoln in due time, rested a little among the old familar hospitalities for strangers, afforded gratuitously by the B. M. Railroad, Co., through the whole souled keeper, John Frost, on the 21st of March in spite of an equinoctial wind, set his face towards his homestead. His journey thither can hardly require more than three days,—but as he must needs be there before the first day of April, or be egregiously April fooled, by forfeiting his farm, he resolved to make assurance doubly sure. Hence he has taken time by the forelock.

Nils Nysten is sixty-two years old, though he declares himself only forty—when just shaved. His example shows what others can do. It shames many faint hearts that are weeping like women, for lack of a farm, which they have the privilege of seizing, like men, bad they only manly pluck.

Nils Nysten's homestead was one of 9,822 which had been entered in the Lincoln United States Land Office, before last New Years is 501.

The B. & M. Railroad Company have sold 351,705 acres to 3,238 buyers, on ten years credit and six per cent. interest.

A Clerk's Story.

When I used to tend store at Syracuse the old man came round one day, and he says he: Boys, the one who sells the most between now and Christmas gets a vest patter as a present. May-be we did'nt work for that vest pattern. I tell you there were some tall stories told in praise of goods just about that time; but the talest talker, and the one that had the most cheek of any of us, was a certain Jonah Squires, who roomed with me. He could take a dollar out of a man's pocket when the man had only intended to spend a sixpence; and the women—Lord bless you!—they just handed over their pocket books to him, and let him lay out what he liked for them. One night Jonah woke me up with, By Joe, old fellow, if you think that 'ere's cotton in it, I'll bring down the sheep that it was cut from, and make him own his own wool. 'Twon't wear out, either, wore a pair of pants of that stuff for five years, and they are as good as when I first put them on. Take it at 30 cents and I'll say you don't owe me anything. Eh, too dear? Well call it 28 cents. What d'ye say? Shall I tear it? All right, it's a bargain. I could feel Jonah's hand playing about the bed clothes for an instant, then rip, tear, went something or other, and I hid my head under the blankets, perfectly convulsed with laughter, and sure that Jonah had torn the best sheet from top to bottom. When I awoke next morning I found that the back of my nightshirt was split from tail to collar band.

Society and Fashion.

Leaves, buds and flowers are more worn in bonnets than feathers.

Ladies are beginning to wear their hair low on the neck again.

Paris-in-flames is a new shade of color in red that has just appeared.

Lolly Varden calicoes are now considered the height of fashion.

The practice of wearing veils over the eyes is said to be very injurious to the sight.

Curling hair is now considered very beautiful, and is worn by old and young

A new style of sleeve button is of tortoise shell, with a raised initial letter in a light color.

White linen guipure lace or insertion is very much used for trimming thin dresses.

The latest style of kid boots for ladies have buttons on both sides, and are without stitching.

There has probably never been a greater variety or more costly importations in silk than the present season displays.

Twenty three inches is considered the proper size for a lady waist at the present day, when small, wasp like waists are no longer admired.

Among the new importations this year are street suits made in Berlin.

A gold or silver initial letter on tinted or white paper is the very latest style for letter paper.

A new style of earings is called the lily of the valley style, and consists of a succession of small bells on a straight stem with enameled leaves.

How to Fix the Hair.

There is quite a variety of new spring styles for dressing hair. We have two different styles of dressing hair. We have two different styles of curls which are worn for evening. The first, the hair in front and at the sides is arranged in small short puffs, with a cluster of long curls in the back, ornamented with pink and white feathers.

Another is a chignon of curls, which reach from the forehead to the back. On the front and top of the head are short curls and frizzes, and at the back longer curls.

A very pretty chignon is made of two braids, without topsies or raise, fitting closely to back of the head.

A novel and attractive way of dressing the hair is to comb up the hair from the neck, twist it in the form of French twist, without the topsie or roll, and finish at top either with loops of straight hair or braids in the shape of the figure 8 set horizctally, and fastened with an ornamental comb.

Chignons and topsies are nearly discarded, the coiffure now being made principally of switches and curls.

A boy named Myatt, was so seriously injured at the Singer Works, in South Bend on Tuesday, that it is feared he cannot live. He ran against a stick which penetrated his body and caused a rupture.

THE FUGITIVE LIEUTENANT.

It was while the American army was freezing and starving at Valley Forge, and the British army was rioting and luxuriating in Philadelphia, that a lame, dirty, beggarly looking fellow walking with a crutch approached the northern outposts of the Royal forces, and, with a simple idiotic, laugh and leer, announced his intention of entering the city and taking the British General prisoner.

'Indeed! then I shall be under the necessity of arresting you," said a young subaltern, winking at some of his companions, and assuming a serious air.

"He! he!" laughed the idiot; "just you try it that's all."

"Why, my good fellow, what would you do?"

"Do?" exclaimed the other, drawing himself up with an air of defiance; "why, I'd tell the great General Washington."

"Then I am afraid to venture on your arrest. So pass on—you will probably find General Howe prepared to receive you.

The idiot suddenly looked troubled, glancing about him warily and suspiciously, as if he feared he might meet the general he was so boldly going to capture, but finally hobbled toward the city. With some such silly dialogue, he got past the different sentries, who seemed to give him no thoughts beyond the amusement of the time. By night he was fairly within the town, and kept on his way, sometimes humming snatches of old songs, and in general, not much noticed by any. Through one street after another he continued to hobble forward, till he came to one of great length, containing a block of three-story respectable houses, which might be occupied by persons of middling circumstances. This street was not lighted, and appeared deserted, so that when he stopped before one of the dwellings he was not perceived. He knocked at the door, and a woman's head appeared at the second story window.

"Won't you give me something to eat, ma'am? I'm nearly starved," said the idiot.

"Yes, poor fellow," replied the woman in a kindly tone; "in a minute I will hand you something."

Soon after a low shutter was pushed a little back, and a hand containing some bread and meat, was thrust out

"Mother," said a low voice.

"Gracious heaven!" exclaimed the female within, in an agitated tone.

"Hush!" returned the soldier in a guarded whisper.

A moment after, the door was thrown open.

"Yes, ma'am—thank you—I don't care if I do," said the beggar, as if in reply to an invitation to come in, at the same time crossing the threshold with an appearance of deep humiliation.

The moment the door was closed behind him, the man dropped his crutch and threw his arms around the other, fairly sobbing.

"Mother, dear, dear mother!"

"William!" exclaimed the other, pressing the ragged mendicant to her heart; "oh, my dear, dear William! what is the meaning of all this? and how is it I find you here in this sad plight?"

"I have passed the British lines in this disguise, playing fool to the sentries. But tell me how you are dear mother, and how do you fare in these troublesome times."

"Indifferently well my son. The British are our masters here, but so far I have little to complain of in the way of personal treatment. Provisions are very scarce and high, and only by the strictest economy shall I be able to live through, if they continue to retain possession of the city any considerable length of time. Your sister Mary is at your uncles in Delaware, and will deeply regret that she has missed this opportunity of seeing you."

"Are you alone, mother?"

"No; two English gentlemen are boarding with me."

"Do they belong to the army?" inquired the young man, quickly, uneasily; "and are they in the house?"

"No; they appear to be private gentlemen of some means, and neither is within at present. But you look troubled—have you anything to fear, my son?"

"If detected, I may be hung as a spy."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the mother in alarm; "you terrify me! And you here without permission? without a pass?"

"Yes—did I not say I played the fool to the sentries, and got past them?"

"But I thought that was for your own amusement. Oh, William! if you should be discovered. Why did you venture in this desperate manner?"

"I could not get a pass, and I was so anxious to see you and Mary that I resolved to risk all."

"Quick, then, come up stairs, and let us fix up a hiding place at once before anything happens. Oh, William! I am so alarmed."

Both hastened up to the third story, and, after considering several places, decided that the loft, close under the roof, might be the best for concealment, as the trap door leading to it could be fastened underneath, which would tend to blind the search; while the young man, if pressed, could escape to the roof, and by means of a long rope attached to the chimney, could lower himself into the yard or street. This would not insure his escape, but it was the best plan the two could think of, and secured to render both less fearful of detection and the serious consequences. Having provided the rope, the mother hastened to bring up a large quantity of food, which her son began to devour with an energy that showed he had told no untruth, when, in the character of a beggar, he had declared himself bordering on starvation.

While he was eating, his mother plied him with questions concerning the army of Valley Forge, in which he had a lieutenant's commission, and which he had left on furlough; and the answer of the young soldier depicted a state of destitution that caused his hearer to weep for very sympathy Three thousand soldiers had been down on the sick list at one time, and, without the common necessaries of life, had perished by the hundred; while of those capable of doing duty, scarcely one had a blanket to cover him at night, or food enough to keep soul and body together. Pale, emaciated, ragged and dirty, many with their bare feet upon the frozen earth, they walked shivering through the camp by day and crowded themselves together by night, to get what little warmth they could from each others' bodies, the most forlorn and wretched set of beings ever a nation called to arms.

"God help us!" ejaculated the mother, in a dejected tone. "I suppose, after all our hardships, we shall be compelled to succumb to our tyrannical foes."

"Never," cried the young officer "while there are a thousand men left in our country to make a desperate stand. We can only be conquered by annihilation; and if it is God's will that a tyrant shall rule over this broad continent, not a single true heart will live to feel the oppression and degradation. Ere that time, dear mother, I, for one, shall be beyond the reach of earthly monarchs."

"God bless you, William!" cried the mother, enthusiastically, grasping his hand; "your father's spirit speaks in you. He died on the battle field, with those sentiments in his heart; and I freely give you—my only son, and hope—to the glorious cause which his blood and that of thousands of others has hallowed."

For several days the intrepid young officer remained concealed beneath his mother's roof, his presence seeming to be known only to themselves. But one evening near the end of his furlough, when he was beginning to think about preparing for his secret departure, an officer and six men appeared at the door, and said he had orders to arrest one W. Ruggles, supposed to be somewhere in the dwelling.

"Why, that is my son!" said the widow, in great trepidation.

"So much the more likely that he should be here then," was the unfeeling reply.

"And for what would you arrest him, and what will be done with him, if found?"

"We shall take him for a spy, and if found guilty, he will be hung, of course, as every cursed rebel should be. Here, Badger and Wilcot, guard the back door; you, Bent and Walters, begin the search; and you, Jones and Johnson, remain where you are. Sharp, now, all of you! Let the fellow be taken alive, if possible—but alive or dead, let him be taken. Now, good woman, if he is in the house, of which we are strongly assured, let him up ear, and save yourself much trouble, otherwise the consequences be on your own head."

"If you think my son is in the house, search to your hearts content!" returned the mother, externally calm, internally suffering

And forthwith the search began.

Meantime, the young lieutenant, who had heard enough to comprehend his danger, had set about effecting his escape but not altogether in the manner first intended. He went on to the roof, it is true, and tied the long rope to the chimney, casting one end down toward the street, but this only for a blind. He had seen that the bricks of the dividing wall, between the houses occupied by his mother and one of the two adjoining buildings had been loosely put up under the ridge pole, and his present design was to remove a few of these, crowd through into the loft of the other house and then replace them. This purpose he effected before the soldiers searching for him came up near enough to hear the little noise he was compelled to make. The open trap door of the roof and the rope around the chimney served to mislead them, as he had hoped, and it was with a feeling of intense satisfaction that he heard them announce the manner of his escape. Immediately after, the whole party left in haste, first threatening Mrs. Ruggles with subsequent vengeance for harboring, concealing and conniving at the escape of a rebel spy, even though the man were her son.

When fully satisfied that all the soldiers had gone, young Ruggles attempted to return into his mother's dwelling by the way he had left, but in again displacing the bricks for his purpose, one of them slipped and went down through the open trap door, to the floor below, making a loud noise. Immediately after a light flashed up through the opening, and a timid female voice demanded who was there.

Here was a dilema. Should the young soldier reply, he would be exposed; and should he keep silence a search would probably be made, which might prove even more serious in its consequences. What was to be done? A sudden inspiration seized him. It was a woman's voice, and women are seldom steeled to pity. He would make himself known to her, appeal to her sympaties, and throw himself upon her mercy.

"Lady," he began, in a gentle tone, calculating to reassure his fair hearer," "be not alarmed. I am a friend in distress, the son of your next door neighbor I am hunted as a spy by British soldiers, and if found, my life will be forfeited. If you cannot pity me, for God's sake pity my poor mother, and assist me for her sake."

He presented himself at the opening to the loft, and boldly descended the steps leading down from it directly before the lady, a sweet, beautiful girl of eighteen, who stood with a light in her hand, and seemed dumb and motionless, with a commingling of fear, surprise and curiosity. The young man continued to speak as he descended, and hurriedly went on to narrate all that had occurred, concluding with the search of the soldiers and his escape into the loft above.

"Thank God, it is in my power to aid you sir!" were the first words of the girl, spoken with a look and feeling of sympathy that made the heart of the young soldier bound with strange emotions.

She then went on to tell him that a cousin from New Jersey, about his size and build, and looking not unlike him, was then on a visit to the family, having a pass from General Howe. This pass she had that evening been looking at, and by accident it was in her possession, the cousin having gone out with the rest of the family, and forgotten it.

"Take it and fly, and may God preserve you!" she said. "I can arrange it with my kinsman," she continued; "I can have lost it, and he can easily procure another."

She hurried him down stairs, throwing a cloak over his shoulders on the way, which she insisted upon his wearing, saying that it had belonged to a deceased brother, and he could return it at any future time. She then hastened to get the pass, which she placed in his hand, and urged him to go at once.

"If I could but see my mother for a moment!" he said.

"No, no—leave all to me—I will explain all to her—go while you can, before it is too late."

"God in heaven bless you, sweet lady!" he said, impulsively seizing her hand, and touching it with his lips. "I will never forget you."

The next minute he was gone. He escaped. And true to his declaration, he never did forget the sweet girl who befriended him in his hour of peril. Years after, the honorable wife of General Ruggles was many a time heard to tell of her first romantic meeting with him she loved, then a hunted fugitive from the continental army.

The Story of a Hotel Bill.

We find this amusing story in the New York correspondence of the Boston Herald:

We are familiar with the frequent extortions practiced by hotel keepers in this country upon those of their patrons who, it is supposed, will endure anything. Not long ago a young lady who had come here from New England with her mother, went to one of the up-town houses to stay for a week or two, until she could board in a private family. The morning that she was to leave she sent for the bill for herself and mother—a lady, of nearly sixty, who occupied a room No. 45, adjoining that of her daughter.

Miss —— was amazed to find that her bill amounted to $175, because she knew it ought not to be more than $60 or $70 at the outside. As no items were given, she returned the account to the office with the request that the items should be inserted. The bill went back with two or three specifications, and "sundries" set down at $70. Once more she returned the bill, demanding to know what the "sundries" might be.

The clerk explained, through the servant, that "sundries" was the polite name for "drinks," which so enraged the young lady that she demanded to see the extraordinary accountant in person. He made himself visible in due season, and the delicate, spiritual looking girl confronted him by asking if he supposed she had drank, in eight or nine days, $70 worth of liquor.

As may be imagined, he was somewhat abashed, and said, with confusion:

"I beg pardon, miss, it's a mere clerical error. This is 44; the drinks should have been charged to 45—the next door, you see—a room occupied by an old fellow who drinks like a fish."

"Permit me to introduce to you the old fellow," replied Miss ——, pushing open the door, standing ajar, and revealing to his confounded gaze one of the gentlest and saintliest-looking old ladies he had ever beheld.

The clerk said nothing, but dashed down the stairs, and in a minute a receipted bill was once more returned, with the "sundries" omitted,

"Do you like rum?" said an Englishman one day to a Chinaman.

"No, sir," replied the Chinaman.

"Why not?"

"Rum not proper, sir. Rum makes Chinaman number one fool," replied the son of the celestial kingdom.

John Chinaman was right. Rum drives sound sense out of the brain, and good feelings out of the heart. It changes all its slaves into hard-hearted fools. Don't touch it, boys. Don't smile on any boy who drinks it, girls!

Tom Fitch was elected United States Senator of Utah by the Legislature on last Saturday.

Is it right for a Secretary of the Navy to pay out of the Treasury ninety-three thousand dollars in violation of law?

How is this for the administration victory (?) in Rhode Island? The Providence Journal, which floats that flag, says of it:

"We do not like such victories. They have the taste of defeat in them. We are sick of the attempted rule of faction, which seeks to carry elections by parading men who should remain satisfied with such honors as a grateful State has already conferred upon them, and not thrust themselves as the willing tools of their political masters into positions that wiser men would shrink from occupying."

The mendacity and effrontry of the Indianapolis Journal has passed into a proverb. There is no misrepresentation too base for it, and no act too dastardly, if thereby a political opponent may be injured. Recently it gave currency to the statement that ex-Senator Thomas A. Hendricks was a party to a lottery for the disposal of the property known at Indianapolis as the "Hendricks' Homestead," and the statement went the rounds of the radical press. The following card from the Mayor of Indianapolis, a Republican in politics, effectually disposes of the slander. The exposition is timely and honorable to the person making it:

ED. SENTINEL:—Those unacquainted with the facts have connected the Hon. Thomas A Hendricks' name with the recent sale and peculiar distribution of what is known as the "Hendricks' Homestead." I write this to correct the impression. He had no knowledge of or any connection with it in any manner.

DANIEL MACAULEY.

A specimen brick in the Hulburd investigation, which came out in the testimony on Tuesday, is enough to show that the late Comptroller got off too easily when he was permitted to resign. The information in question was elicited from Suit, of Richmond. Mr. Suit is the principal owner of three or four national banks, and appreciating the advantage which would accrue to him of being on the right side of the Comptroller, he appointed a brother of Hulburd cashier of the Farmers' National Bank of Richmond, five or six years ago. Not long after, Suit, whilst in New-York, discovered that his new cashier had checked out large sums of money belonging to said bank, and had deposited it in New York for purposes of speculation. The result of this disclosure was that Hulburd was compelled to resign, when the discovery was made that the scoundrel had defaulted to the amount of $38 000. Notwithstanding this villainy, which was of course notorious among his friends, Comptroller Hulburd appointed the wholesale thief Bank Examiner in Philadelphia, a position which he still holds. If the ex-Comptroller can not be punished except through public opinion, that [illegible] as possible. Pass him around.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LIBERAL REPUBLICAN MOVEMENT.

MICHIGAN WHEELS INTO LINE

IMMENSE MEETING IN NEW YORK.

MICHIGAN.

A paper is being circulated in this State accepting the invitation of the Liberal Republicans of Missouri to be represented in the Cincinnati Convention, and has already been signed by quite a large number of prominent Republicans. Among those in Detroit are the well known names of Duncan Stewart, D. C. Holbroke, Charles Endicott, Willard Parker, and J. James. A number of prominent Germans are among the signers, such as Frederick Bacher, E. L. Tildner, Otto Starck, Julius Melchis and August Manxhousen. Much favor is claimed for the movement in all parts of the State, and it is expected the result will be a formidable organization of the elements of opposition to Grant.

NEW YORK.

The great meeting held here April 11th, to advocate the Liberal Republican policy of the approaching Cincinnati Convention, was one of the largest in numbers and in composition ever held in this city. An hour before the commencement of the meeting Cooper Institute was thronged and thousands clamored in vain for admission, and failing to find it, remained for hours outside. Every seat was occupied, and the aisles from the platform up were densely crowded. The audience was eminently respectable, and a representative one. The platform was literally packed with men prominent in the political and social circles of New York. Among them were Horace Greeley, Sinclair Tousley, Moses H. Grinnell, Hiram Barney, Marshall O. Roberts, George Wilkes, Frank Leslie, John A. Dix and a large number of other prominent men.

About 7:30 the densely crowded audience began to manifest some impatience to witness the opening of the proceedings. To meet this demand the list of Republican officers who had signed the call for the Cincinnati Convention was read. The names of many of them were received with loud cheers.

The meeting was then called to order by Hon. Ethan Allen, who said:

Fellow Citizens—As one of the committee who signed the call for this immense mass meeting in the interest of a political party and reform, I have the honor to nominate as your presiding officer Colonel Frederick A. Conkling.

The nomination was enthusiastically endorsed. Colonel Conkling, on coming forward, was greeted with hearty cheers He said:

Fellow Republicans, we are honored by the presence to-night of two of the most distinguished statesmen of the Republic—[great applause]—one of them born in New England; the other cradled on the Rhine—[cheers]—both representatives of the imperial West, which in coming time is to control the destiny of our common country—Lyman Trumbull and Carl Schurz, of Missouri. [Prolonged cheering.] It is hardly necessary for me to say that throughout the length and breadth of the land the names of both are associated with the defense of constitutional liberty and of the rights of local self-government within the restriction of the delegated powers, and with a firm and unfaltering advocacy of the rights of the masses. [Applause.]

In view of the near approach of the Presidential election, they have consented to leave their places in the Senate of the United States for the purpose of addressing us, not upon the dead issues of the past, but upon the living issues of the hour. [Applause.] Thanking you for the honor of being selected to preside over this vast assembly, I await the further pleasure of the meeting.

A list of Vice Presidents and Secretaries was read and elected. Among the former are Horace Greeley, Sinclair Tousley, Michael Doherty, Isaac Sherman, Waldo Hutchins, Moses H. Grinnell, Hiram Barney, Charles A. Dana, E. L. Godkin, Parke Goodwin, Marshall O. Roberts, George W. Palmer, Richard M. Blatchford, John K. Porter, George Wilkes, Samuel Sinclair, Rufus F. Andrews, Mirthorne Tomkins, John A. Dix, Ely Squier and Alfred Pell.

The following declaration of principles was read and endorsed with tremendous cheers:

We believe that the political action of individuals and conventions should be left free from patronage; and that business men should not, under fear of unjust official interference with their affairs, be compelled to pay tribute for political purposes. We believe that the public officers are or should be made for the public convenience and not as a reward for partisan services, nor for personal aggrandizement, and that the acts of officials should be confined within the strict letter of the laws creating such officials.

We believe that the triumph of Republican principles is of paramount importance to the country, and that the success of those privileges in the approaching national election does not depend on any one individual. We believe that the prosperity of the country demands a thoroughly Radical and immediate reform in all departments of public service, civil, military and naval, and that the one-term principle for the Presidential office will conduce more to that end than any other measure.

About 7:45 o'clock Messrs. Schurz and Trumbull arrived, and were received in the most enthusiastic manner. At 8 o'clock Frederick A. Conklin, the President, briefly introduced Mr. Trumbull, who spoke as follows:

Fellow Citizens: It is now nearly sixteen years since I had the pleasure of addressing an audience in the city of New York. We were then just entering upon what is known as the Fremont campaign. The question then before the country was whether slavery should be spread into the free Territories of the United States. Many of the people thought that the Government of the United States was then controlled by the slave-holding power, was oppressive and unjust, and a party was then organized which did not succeed in that election, but whose seed [illegible] bore the fruit in 1860, in the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency of the United States. The slave-holding power, in its folly, refused to submit to an administration which should be governed by the friends of freedom, though it was well understood there was no intention on the part of the Republican party, and no constitutional right, to interfere with slavery in the States where it existed, but the slave-holding power, unwilling to retain slavery where it was, undertook to dismember the Union and set up a government in one-half of it which should rest upon slavery as its corner stone.

Then followed the great war, carried on for the purpose of the maintenance of the Union, and slavery went down, never more to rise forever. [Cheers.] In that great struggle many a patriot fell, and many more were seen among us bearing on their persons the wounds they received in freedoms cause, and a grateful country will ever cherish the memory of the heroes who fell, and provides pensions for their widows and orphans who remain among us.

The war closed. The armies were disbanded, and slavery forever prohibited by Constitutional amendment. Then the equal rights of all were established throughout the land. Provision was made for the debt incurred in the maintenance of the Union, and that payment of the bounties and pensions of the soldiers should be forever sacred, and that the debt of the rebels and payment for their slaves should never be made. Since then provision has been made by which the debt incurred is in the gradual course of extinction. To-day all the States are restored to their former relations in the Union; and what now is there to disturb the happiness and peace of this people? There are several causes for the dissatisfaction of the people, which I can only briefly allude to upon the present occasion, and shall not touch upon many which ought to be discussed at length; but one cause of complaint, which produces alienation in the late insurrectionary States, and keeps alive the hates and animosities engendered by war, is the continuance of political disabilities after the occasion for them has passed away. In consequence of this continuance the governments of the late insurrectionary States have fallen into the hands of inexperienced, and in many instances of corrupt adventurers, who have plundered the people of these States scarcely less than you in the city of New York have been plundered by your former city government. [Applause.] Why are these disabilities continued? Why are they not removed and all the people enfranchised? I think there are two causes, and two alone, which prevent it One is mercenary and the other political. [Applause.] The mercenary is so that these adventurers can exclude from office in these States the former leading men of large experience and capacity, and although they were traitors during the war, they were not thieves nor plunderers. [Loud cheering.] Their exclusion has thrown these governments into the hands of men who have used their power to plunder the people over whom they rule, and the debts of the Southern States have been swollen in some instances twenty fold from what they were before the war began, and they don't even have what you had in the city of New York to show for the money expended. Another reason for continuing these special disabilities is, as I said, of a partisan character. The men in authority use political disabilities as so much capital upon which to trade. To illustrate what I mean, I will refer to what took place in the State of Georgia a few years ago, when a man named Bullock was Governor. When the Legislature of that State was about to be organized, it was understood that certain persons had been elected who were laboring under political disabilities. They were given to understand that those of them who would sustain the Governor could have their political disabilities removed, and those who would not, would not be permitted to take their seats in the Legislature, and the result was that political disabilities were removed from such as acted with the Governor and others excluded, and he had the control of that Legislature, and succeeded in putting upon the State a debt, the discovery of which has caused him to flee the State to escape the punishment which would have followed the frauds he committed. So it is with members of Congress elected from these Southern States. They promised to remove the political disabilities from their adherents, and they are always ready to do it where they can gain favor. [Three cheers were then heartily given for Horace Greeley, who was espied on the platform.]

Senator Trumbull—I am glad to hear such cheers here in honor of the first champion, I believe, in the country, and he proclaimed it boldly, of universal amnesty. [Renewed cheers.] One great measure then which is demanded in the name of honesty, in the name of peace and the best interests of all, is the passage of a general amnesty bill removing political disabilities. [Great cheering.]

Another cause of complaint among the people is the one in which the patronage of this Government is used, as if it was not so much money to carry elections, not in interest of party even. It does not rise to that high dignity, but in interest of a fraction of a party. [Great applause.] It is notorious, you all know it in the city of New York, for it has recently been disclosed by an investigating committee which sat in this city, that your Custom House is here filled with men who, instead of having received their appointment in consequence of their fidelity, of their ability, and of their capacity to discharge the duties of their offices for the best interests of the country, but are appointed because of the influence it is supposed they can exert at some primary election or State convention, or in teaching you, the people, whom to vote for at the polls. [Laughter.] This civil service system of ours is the parent of many, very many evils, I can not stop to-night to point out. The officers in many localities are taxed a portion of their salaries for party purposes, and if they do not perform the political duty required of them, they very soon are removed and others substituted who will be more active in politics.

Charles A. Dana has returned to New York from Washington, and resumed his editorial labor on the Sun. This is what he says:

"We have felt it to be our duty to advise the public as to the manner in which their money was being paid out in open violation of the law by Mr. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy. We had no personal acquaintance with Mr. Robeson, and could not possibly have any ill-will toward him. We were perfectly convinced that he was paying out the people's money in a manner which was as illegal as it would be to steal and put in his pocket. We said we took the responsibility. A Committee of Investigation was appointed by Congress to look into the matter. We were invited to appear before the Committee with counsel to establish irregularities in the Navy Department; we appeared and established them; we proved that Robeson had brazenly disregarded as plain a law as ever was enacted, and that he had been paying out money as freely as if it were water on claims which had been settled previously. One single item, which he had fraudulently paid, amounted to over $90,000. We do not wish to do Mr. Robeson any injustice. He is a fat, jolly story-teller; he is only a faithless public officer—that is all. We will not apply terms of undue severity to him. We will only say there was a day when taking $93,000 at a time out of the Treasury in violation of law would have been considered dishonest. We think that even now it will be conceded to be irregular."

It is true, that at the present time the stealing of a hundred thousand dollars from the Government by official thieves is not considered by the people an injustice. They are willing to sustain it. They try to hide it on account of mere partizan feelings.

Well! Next.

We will still be able at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne, to continue the sale of good common suits for $8,00, good all wool casimere $10,00, better $12,00, Fine cass. business suits $15,00, black dress business suits $17,00, custom made $18,00, and all other goods two portionably low. Remember the place at the popular Red Front, No. 5 Keystone Block only.

An exchange says 'A well known lady of Brookville read last fall that the nutmeg crop had entirely failed. She at once saw a chance to turn an honest penny.—So she communicated her plans to a near friend. It was simply to 'corner' the nutmeg market of the town. No sooner said than done. They put together their pin money, and bought nutmegs, till they were ashamed to ask the grocers for more Then they sent their little girls for nutmegs. Finally the stock in town was exhausted, and the two ladies had over one hundred dollars' worth of the article.—Then they were happy. Their confidence was somewhat shaken in a few weeks, when down town, for they saw more nutmegs. Yet they had hopes. They thought the 'rise' had not come yet, and waited patiently. Thus it went on all winter and no 'rise' came. A few days ago they silently and tearfully boxed up their stock and shipped them to a wholesale house in Cincinnatti, where they realize about twenty per cent. less than cost price. They have solemnly resolved never to 'corner' nutmegs again.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of an execution to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Common Pleas Court, in a cause wherein Mary Houghton is plaintiff, and Jotham Woolsey and Samuel W. Sprott are defendants, required me to make the sum of five hundred and sixty dollars and eighty-four cents, with interest on said judgment and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on

SATURDAY, APRIL 27th, 1872,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

All that portion of the west half of the south-east quarter of section three, in township thirty-three, north of range thirteen east, lying and being south of the Auburn and Spencerville road running through said land, and enough more off the east side of the balance of said described land to make in all fifty acres in DeKalb county, Ind.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said judgment, interest and costs, I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee-simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said judgment, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

CALKINS'

CHAMPION WASHER

PATENTED OCTOBER 17, 1871.

It is a Complete Success! Saves Money Time and Drudgery, and the Fatigue of Washing Day.

Buy this Washer and you insure a Smiling Wife. It is the best Machine ever invented.

It is as perfect for a Washer as a wringer is for a wringer. The universal testimony is: "This Machine is perfect in construction, and has secured the GREATEST POSSIBLE AMOUNT of WASHING SURFACE in the LEAST POSSIBLE COMPASS, and is Compact, Light, Easily Handled, and to see it is to know that it will do the work with Ease, Economy and Efficiency."

Those who once see this Machine work, throw aside the lumbering, unwieldy, useless machines which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

The price—another inducement to purchasers—has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper, and there is no article of domestic economy which will repay the small investment so soon.

Everything looks favorable for a large trade to-day.

The place to get a fine dress pattern is at Wood & Williams'.

The prettiest young lady in town was seen on the street last Saturday.

Has the railroad question entirely died away? Where is our enterprise?

Circuses are beginning to show themselves. Auburn is a good show town.

The pen-out brigade was in full force on last Saturday. Nobody hurt, though.

We are under many obligations to our lady friends from Butler, for favors received.

One of our fine haired youths has gone to Fort Wayne after some "sour sider." Success attend you, old boy.

Our dry goods men will have to put out some new boxes, or the boys will have to stop whittling.

Wood & Williams are filling their store room from floor to ceiling with spring and summer goods of latest styles.

Our office boy is still on the sick list, but we hope will soon be able to get about again.

The Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga Springs was sold on Wednesday last to A T. Stewart for $532,000.

G. H. Dalton, Esq., President of the Ft. Wayne & C. R. R., will leave for California in a few days.

We trust that the nuisance of playing ball on Main street, will not become chronic this season.

The Pennsylvania Radical State Convention passed resolutions in favor of Grant and Protection.

Our correspondents are again becoming negligent about sending in the local items We want locals and must have them.—Send 'em to us.

Spring is here. But it is tantalizing to the invalid, who, seeing its bright, clear sunshine, without, is obliged to remain within.

Articles on any subject will find their way into our columns. Competent writers are invited to favor us and our readers with something interesting, occasionally.

Warsaw is getting a Building, Loan and Savings Association. She will be out of fashion if she don't get one soon. Auburn has one under full headway.

A fine snow fell on Monday of this week. It commenced snowing in the morning and continued until late in the evening. Who'd ever thought of it.

As we look out of the west window of our office, we notice some young men fearfully intoxicated, and still they will eat peanuts. Shame.

Those boys that come in the office daily and "blow their horns" for an hour or two will oblige us if they'll come at times when they can't stay so long.

Auburn claims to do more business than any other town on the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw Railroad, between Fort Wayne and Jackson.

One of our citizens says he has demonstrated that the beggarly sum of five cents will buy strychnine enough to kill eight dogs.

There was a runaway on Seventh street this morning. The south-west wheel of the horse was injured, and it is thought that the left leg of the wagon is lamed for life.

That story about "Winter lingering in the lap of Spring" is not true. Spring's father thought that he was entirely too familiar, and kicked him out some time ago.

The cabbage plant will soon be out the bud will soon be seen; the parsnip will be topping out likewise the long string bean.

Local items being very scarce, we will have to apologise for the limited amount this week. Our boy is still unable to work, and a rush of job work, puts us in a bad condition.

James Harper & Co., are now manufacturing a gossamer silk hat, that weighs only three ounces. These are the lightest silk hats ever made, and are designed for summer wear.

Our popular butcher, S. U. Tarney gave us a large link of sausage the other day.—Dog or no dog, it was dog-gone good, and whenever you have another extra link, Mr T., remember the printer.

James I. Best, of Waterloo, is a candidate for Circuit Judge—the position now occupied by his Honor, Judge Tousley.—LaGrange Standard.

Of course. Why not.

Look out for a large and well selected stock of dry goods &c., at the new and enterprising firm of Wood & Williams. E. C., has just returned from New York. They are gentlemen who will make good their motto: "Ready pay, fair prices and fair dealings with all." Call and see them.

Several of our merchants are east, making purchases of dry goods, groceries, etc., for this market. Take our word for it things will be lively in Auburn pretty soon.

We noticed two "boys," to day, about 22 or 23 years old, on a back street, trying to get two dogs to fight. One of them bit himself with the bigest dog, and it spoiled their fun.

We stopped and listened to a man that was intoxicated, the other day, and the poor fellow wanted to sell all that he possessed for one dollar, in order to get one more drink. How strange it seems.

We understand that a dance will be given here sometime during next week.—Remember, thought, that it is be a private affair, and none but those having invitation cards can attend.

The editor is absent and has not left us enough copy, and one of our "Jours" is drunk, consequently we are unable to give the usual amount of reading matter on the inside forms.

We are glad to learn that our schools, throughout the county, are prospering finely, and some of them were obliged to secure assistant teachers in order to do justice to their schools.

We are indebted to J. C. Shoemaker for a copy of the annual report of the Auditor of State, showing the receipts and disbursements of the Treasury department during the fiscal year ending October 31st 1871.

A dispatch from Lone Pine, California, states that Ownes Valley has moved southward fourteen feet. Seven thousand shocks have occurred to date. Huge rocks were hurled down the Yosemite Valley, destroying many noble trees.

We desire to apologize to our subscribers outside of the town for occasionally failing to send their papers by the evening mail on Thursdays, and we promise to use all efforts to prevent its recurrence.

There is more dirt and filth to the square inch on Main street than upon any other thoroughfare in the town. Decayed vegetables, and brickbats are strewn along the street and gravel and mud is scattered over the pavement.

We notice that our friend Dr. Long, of Fort Wayne, has formed a co-partnership with Dr. Brown of the same place. Both of these gentlemen are dentists of considerable experience, and this may now be regarded as the best dental establishment in Fort Wayne, $7,770.—A Whitley County jury, this week, gave Col. Seoining, of Fort Wayne, $35,000 for four and a half acres of land near that city, which the P. Ft. W., & C. R. R. Company tried to gobble it up for a gravel pit. One is able to use it and the other to lose it.

A very remarkable auroral display was observed on Wednesday night. A bright belt completely spanned the heavens from east to west, tapering from either end to about three degrees in the center. The light was very bright in the north, and the phenomenon lasted about two and a half hours.

A boy by the name of Wm. Blake lost his pocket book last week containing over $400, all the money he possessed, which he had worked hard for in the pineries of Michigan. He was going from Leo to Ft. Wayne when he lost it and it is hoped that the finder will return it.

Change of Time.—A new time card took effect on last Sunday on the Air Line from which we learn that going west the special Chicago express leaves Waterloo at 2:05 p. m., Pacific express at 2:12 a m. Accommodation, 2:29 p. m. Going east special New York at 2:59 p. m., Atlantic express 11:58 a. m., Mail 1:40 p. m

Last Sabbath evening we noticed a large number of our citizens out enjoying the warm balmy weather, and we could not but believe that the spring had come in all its realities but when we wakened up next morning and found it snowing, we concluded that winter was not yet "ousgaspeeled."

Read the new advertisement of Chas Rivers & Co., of Fort Wayne. This firm is the best in the city, and do their work at a reasonable price. Those of our friends that have sign or carriage painting that they wish to have done in a neat and substancial manner should remember this notice.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

A meeting of the Stockholders of the Auburn Building, Loan and Savings Association will be held at the Court House, next Saturday evening. A full attendance is requested,

J. B. Casebeer, Pres.
T. C. Mays, Sec'y.

Two of our sports, ambitious to see something of the great world, left home and friends, this morning, to try their fortune elsewhere. Poor lads, we hope a kind Providence will watch over their wandering footsteps, and like the prodigal son, may they return to their father's house.

Since the above writing the boys have returned, looking fat.

New Goods.—Mr. Williams, of the firm of Wood & Williams has returned from the east where he purchased a large stock of dry goods, groceries, &c., which have arrived and are now being displayed at their popular establishment to many admiring patrons. When you come to town don't fail to see them at Case's old stand opposite the Court House.

Personal.—We are pleased to learn that our talented friend Dr. H. Nichols, formerly of this place, has located at Liberty Mills, on the Eel River Road and that there are flattering prospects of his meeting with good success. Dr. N. is one of these clever, aimable young men that always make friends wherever they go, and we doubt not, from his experience and ability, that he will create a favorable impression wherever he goes.

S. Laufferty, is now absent purchasing a large and complete assortment of dry goods &c., which he will exhibit in a few days at his place of business in the brick block. He asserted before starting that he would bring perhaps the finest stock ever brought here before, and we know from the past that when Samuel says anything he means business.

Town Survey.—This outrage, so called by our citizens, is played out The survey did not come off, to the great satisfaction of our residents and their pockets. That's right boys, when you find you are wrong, back down like little men. That is certainly commendable, and about the only thing, in that line, you have been guilty of the last year.

The D. E. R. & I. R. R. is doing quite a business in both passenger and freight traffic. This road is destined to become one of the thoroughfares of the country.—Col. City Com.

That depends upon whether it is to be built through from this place to Detroit, making an independent line for itself. If so we agree that it will make a prominent line, and if it is not done it will not amount to much.

Tax Paying.—Contrary to the former custom in this county, Treasurer Ryan last Monday closed his office for settlement with the Auditor, and has refused payments. This make quite a number of close fisted taxpayers swear a little on the sly. Formerly the payers had a month less in which to satisfy these demands, and paid up better, but now when a month is given, they want another. Gentlemen, mind your business next year.

Our fashionable barber, Barney, cries for a new reformatory institute, and waxes warm over the acrobatic performances of himself, who recently walked down four flight of stairs on his ear, carrying a large bowl of water midway between his head and heels without spilling a drop.—Barney might eclipse that performance by tightly grasping an eight gallon refrigerator, filled with ice-water, and diving from the sixth story of the Courier building to the cellar, via the elevator, and not spill a drop—till he reached the bottom.

Kendallville.—The attendance at the Editorial Association at the above place last Friday was slimly attended, some fourteen papers being represented. It was agreed that an adjourned meeting be held at South Bend, on the 17th of May, at which it is to be expected there will be a full attendance. C. O. Meyers, Esq., of the Standard, had everything nicely arrayed for the comfort and entertainment of his visitors, and it is only to be regretted that there were not more there to enjoy themselves.

Thomas Wallace, the oldest printer on record, died the 10th inst. The Forum of this week say:

"During the last winter Tom came to Bucyrus pretty nigh worn out. Feeling that his end was approaching, he declined help by personal friends, and insisted upon being taken to the Infirmary. He was able to make several visits to town after going there, but for the past sick week, was unable to go about, and on Wednesday he breathed his last. Poor Tom.—May his soul rest in peace.

The following is the appointment made by the last M. E. Conference, for this Conference district.

W. S. Birch, P. E.; Ft. Wayne, Berry street, A. Marine; Allen, W. H. Edwards; Harlan, J. W. Brown; Waterloo, E. M. Baker; Auburn, A. Cone; Leo, N. T. Peddycord; Butler, I Cooper; Hamilton, A. C. Pattee; Corunna, M. H. Mott; Angola, A. W. Lamport; Fremont, W. H. Daniel; Orland, O. D. Watkins; New Haven, W. E. Curtis; Kendallville, W. Wilson; Coesse J. P. Nash; Columbia City, Y. B. Meredith; Arcola, to be supplied by J. C. Maclin.

We are not well informed, but are inclined to think that James E. Rose, of Butler, DeKalb County, would be pleased with the nomination of Common Pleas Judge of this district.—LaGrange Standard.

How delicately conceived, and gently expressed is the above. Persons not well informed should not say much. We claim to be posted, and are sure that Mr. Rose will accept the nomination and will doubtless make as good a Judge as any other aspirant we know of. It is questionable, however, whether little DeKalb will get both judgeships, and if so then we can assure all that we will be supremely happy.

We learn from the Michigan City Enterprise that Chancey F. Page, the life convict at the Northern prison, turned over the last leaf of his desperate history last Tuesday night, the 2nd inst., by chocking himself to death in his cell. His way of shuffling off his mortal coil showed the desperate character of the man and his determination to succeed in this, his second attempt at self destruction. He made a slip noose of his suspenders, placed it around his neck, sat down and tied his hands across his knees, fastened the suspender to his hands with a piece of tarred twine, leaned back and chocked himself to death In this condition he was found dead in his cell last Wednesday.

Stock in the Building, Loan and Savings Association is better than life insurance because the stockholder can use the money prior to his death, while in life insurance death must occur before the money is available, except on the advancement plan which costs more than the stock in these associations. Again, you must pay your assessments for life insurance by the year in advance requiring often more money than many can command. By taking building stock you pay by the month.

Insurance Agents may gas all they want to, but no honorable gentleman will throw cold water on such an institution because they must know that it is a much better investment than insurance.

MARRIAGES.

Mansdorfer—Mader—On the 14th of April A. D. 1872, at the Parsonage, by the Rev. J. G. Kissell, Mr. Ernest Mansdorfer and Miss Amelia M. Mader, all of this county. No cake.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Editorial Convention.

The semi-annual convention of the editors and publishers' association of the 10 and 11th districts was held at Kendallville on Friday, April 12. The following named persons were represented:

Waterloo Press—C. K. Baxter.
LaGrange Standard—J. D. Devor.
Ligonier Banner—J. B. Stoll.
Goshen Democrat—W. A. Osborn.
Huntington Democrat—S. F. Winter.
Huntington Herald—J. F. Moses.
Auburn Courier—Thomas C. Mays.
LaPort Argus—J. B. Stoll.
Goshen Times—Wm. M. Starr, J. P Prickett.
Warsaw Indianian—Q. A. Hossler, J. H Carpenter.
Mishawaka Enterprise—S. T. Montgomery.
Kendallville Standard—C. O. Myers, G W. Roof.
South Bend Register—A. Beal.

In the absence of Secretary Platt McDonald, W. A. Beane was designated as secretary pro tem.

The forenoon session was chiefly devoted to a discussion of Mr. Winter's proposition to agree upon a schedule of prices for advertising patent medicines, circuses &c.

Mr. Winter thought much good might be accomplished by putting a proper estimate upon the value of such advertising; that the compensation therefor was generally too low, and that the practice of allowing patent medicine men and agents of circuses to dictate terms should be discarded. He also suggested the appointment of a committee to ascertain whether the established rates for legal advertising were generally adhered to, and that an adjourned meeting be held for the consideration of this and other important business at as early a day as possible.

Mr. Moses endorsed the views of the gentleman who preceded him, and suggested that there might be some propriety in looking after the interests of publishers with regard to advertising agents who were paying ruinously low rates, as for instance Geo. P. Rowell & Co., Dauchey & Co., and others that might be mentioned in this connection.

The President, Mr. Stoll, defended Rowell & Co., as paying living rates when dealing with publishers who adheared to their prices.

Mr. Montgomery also endorsed the views expressed by Mr. Winter. He beliived that the next Legislator should be petitioned to fix the rates for legal advertising, in order to gard against the quibbling of parties who always grumbled on account of printer's fees.

Mr. Osborn urged the necessity of adhearing to uniform prices that would protect publishers who had invested all their capital in the printing business.

Mr. Devor spoke of the difficulties that are thrown in the way of publishers with regard to uniform rates; though every publisher ought to do the best he can. He also reiterated the opinion that the association should be limited to a smaller territory, and that every Congressional District should have its own organization.

At the hour of 12 the convention adjourned to meet again at half past one.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Agreeable to adjournment, the convention reassembled in the parlor of the Brick Kelly House.

J. P. Prickett, associate editor of the Goshen Times, and Daniel S. Marsh, associate editor of the South Bend Register, were admitted to membership of the association.

A general and very elaborate discussion was then had of the several points touched upon in the forenoon session—nearly all the members participating in the discussion, and freely expressing their views. The utmost unanimty of sentiment prevailing in relation to the necessities of the hour.

On motion of Mr. Devor it was

Resolved, That an adjourned meeting of the association be held at South Bend on the 17th of May next, and that all the publishers of the two Districts be requested to attend the same early in the forenoon.

The President was then authorized and instructed to issue a circular to each publisher in the two Districts requesting a compliance with the above resolution, and embracing a programme of the business to be transacted at said meeting.

After a pleasant and most profitable interchange of opinions, the convention adjourned.

J. B. STOLL, Pres.
W. A. Beane, Sec'y pro tem.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a regular meeting of Butler Lodge, No. 282, of Butler, Indiana, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in his wise providence to take from our midst our worthy Sister, Saloma Fisher, wife of Brother James F. Fisher, therefore

Resolved, That in our bereavement we have lost a dear, much beloved, faithful and kind Sister, a warm hearted and generous friend.

Resolved, That although to us darkness and mystery encompass the removal of one so young, whose life seemed full of usefulness, yet in the deepest humility, we recognize the hand of a Divine Master who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with our dear Brother, the husband and parents, brothers and sisters, in the loss of Soloma, and invoke the Divine blessing in this their great affliction.

Resolved, That although we greatly mourn her loss, yet we feel that our loss is her great gain.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect our Lodge room shall be draped in mourning for thirty days and that the charter of the Rebeka Degree, be draped in mourning thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the Auburn Courier and that a copy be presented to the husband, parents, brothers and sisters of the deceased, and that one copy of these be kept on the file of the Lodge.

A. F. Pinchin,
J. M. Norford, } Com,
Chas. Haynes,

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at these astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

Jacksonville, Fla., papers make the allegation that 230 alligator skins were received there the other day.

From Corunna.

Mr. Editor.—Often seeing notices in your paper requesting news, &c., from different parts of the county, I will give you an item that occurred here a few days ago. I know it will not be of much interest to your subscribers, however, but the boys will take it in, sure.

Well, two parties, one from your place and the other a few miles south of town, came to Corunna to visit some friends.—The boys understanding each other (that is the object both parties anticipated) had a fearful time coming the last mile. The rig from town caught sight of their country opponents and both parties let their horses out at a 2:40 rate. They both made good time, but the plow horse came out about a quarter ahead. Up come the town swells, looking pleasant and agreeable, when one, the smallest of the two, got out of the buggy and went into the house. The other, a big, commanding form like fellow, sat in the buggy perfectly "Cool," and to judge from his appearance I should think an extra dose of "Golden Oil" would help his case.

The two town boys, too bad, had to retire, but took the matter very "Cool," and the last seen of them they were investigating the coming "Ke-ran-berry" crop, in a piece of woods not far distant.

The scene, take it all in all, was a magnificent one. Oh, could we but picture it. What a beautiful tableau it would display!

The country conveyance then moved to the hotel, and having their horse properly cared for (fastened to a hitching post) returned again for their chat, but on account of the "weather" denoting storm, they too, soon retired. In the "Cool" part of the evening Auburn was again on exhibition, and the "big fellow" seeing that all was well tried to quote, "The boy stood on the burning deck, &c." He done pretty well, but still it was kind of "Cool" Here night seperated us from the scene, but the reader can easily imagine the rest. The best of all was an echo that was heard saying: "Wait, he's coming, we hear the 'big fellow' roar." All sing.

Observer.

☞ USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP ☜

☞ DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

The debt of nature should never be paid if it can't be collected without an 'execution.'

The French have a very significant saying: It is always the unexpected which happens.

If you let the cat out of the bag, never try to cram it back again; it only makes matters worse.

Why does a young woman when she's jilted frown upon the world at large?—Why, naturally enough, being a cut-lass who has just met with foil, she looks daggers.

A Southern paper says in its local columns: 'A negro and two fine young mules were drowned in the river yesterday. The mules were remarkably fine animals, and cannot be very easily replaced.'

The Knoxville Chronicle says that the prospects of a large yield of wheat in east Tennesse is fine indeed. A larger area was planted than usual.

The proprietors of the projected coffin factory in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, hope to begin operations in season to supply the spring trade.

The greatest run of luck on record is that of a Baltimore cigar dealer, who within the last three months has inherited a fortune, drawn a big lottery prize, found $7,000 in the cellar of his house, and lost his mother in law.

Fifty car loads of coal, averageing three hundred bushels to the car, in all fifteen thousand bushels, are shipped daily from Washington, Daviess county, Indiana.—The coal is delivered on the cars at about ten cents per bushel.

Advices received at San Francisco from the volcanic country north of the Majave river, shows that the earthquake of the 26th, last was felt with terrible force there At Lone Pine twenty three people were killed, and thirty wounded. Shocks were felt for thirty hours. Fifty houses were demolished, and the town is in ruins.

A farmer on the road between Charlton and Worchester, Mass., having been terribly annoyed by drummers, put up the sign: 'No sewing machines wanted. Got one!' It was of no use, however, the next drummer wanted to see the machine, so how the farmer has put out, 'Small pox, and says that works first-rate.

If I only had Capital.

If I only had capital, a young man said, as he puffed a ten cent cigar I would do something.

If I only had capital, said another, as he walked away from a dramshop, I would go into business.

Young man with the cigar, you are smoking your capital away. Yeu from the dramshop are drinking yours and destroying your body at the same time. Dimes make dollars. Time is money. Don't wait for a fortune to begine with. Our men of power and influence did not start with fortunes. You too, can make your mark if you will. But you must stop spending your money and time in idleness.

Do you think, asked Mrs. Pepper, 'that a little temper is a bad thing in a woman? Certainly not, ma'am, replied a gallant philosopher; it is a good thing, and she ought never to lose it.

One thousand coons, an exchange says, were drowned during the recent California freshet. That won't be a circumstance to compare with the possum drowning by the freshet of the November election.

An Italian woman died of small pox, at Washington, about three weeks ago, and her friends insisted on a public funeral.—Of those who attended, sixteen were taken sick, and six have died. The popularity of that class of entertainments is on the wane.

Prince Arthur, of England, will shortly be promoted to the rank of Major, and will go to India for two years.

Edwin Forrest remains in quite ill health but with favorable symptoms of recovery. Considerable time must elapse, however, before he can resume the stage.

The House of Representatives met as in Committee of the Whole on Saturday, for general debate. Various speeches were made on miscellaneous subjects.

Aristide Delavigne, a well known cotton merchant of New Orleans and a native of France, aged 33, fell into the river from the ship Cameo, Friday night, and was drowned.

Putting the Best Face Upon It.

Stiggles was met by an old friend the other day whom he had not seen for several years.

"Bless me, Stiggles, old boy! I'm glad to see you. You are looking well. How is it with you?"

"Fair to middling," replied Stiggles.

"Married yet?"

"Yes."

"That's good."

"Not so very good. I married a shrew."

"Ah—that's bad."

"Not so very. She brought me ten thousand dollars."

"Indeed—that was good fortune."

"Not so good after all: for I laid it out in sheep, and they all died of the foot-rot."

"Surely, that was most unfortunate."

"Not so very unfortunate; for I sold the pelts for more than the sheep cost me."

"In truth, that made ample amendment."

"Not so much as you imagine. I laid out the money upon a house and the house burned down, with all that was in it."

"Bless me! that was lamentable, surely."

"Not so lamentable as might have been. My wife was in it!"

Smith thought it was morally wrong to take the animals for food, and he resolved to quit it and live on vegetables. But one morning he gave way to temptation and walked into a beefsteak.

'I don't know,' said he, 'that it's any harm to eat a peice of this cow, since it's dead and the matter can't be helped; but I'll be hanged if I'l ever kill one myself.

Two gentlemen, one named Woodcock the other Fuller, walking together, happened to see an owl. Said Fuller, 'That bird is very much like a Woodcock.'

'You are very far wrong,' said Mr. W, 'for it's Fuller in the head, Fuller in the eyes, and Fuller all over.

A society was organized in St. Louis, Saturday night, for the purpose of assisting in raising funds to pay off the war debt of France. Chas. P. Choteau was elected president.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

VINEGAR BITTERS

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Billious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Billous Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.

FOUTZ'S

CELEBRATED

Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised, must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, having iron bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

COME INTO THE GARDEN, MAUD

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

Come into the garden, Maud,
For the black bat, night, has flown!
Come into the garden, Maud,
I am here at the gate alone;
And the woodbine spices are wafted abroad,
And the musk of the roses blown.

For a breeze of morning moves,
And the planet of love is on high,
Beginning to faint in the light that she loves,
On a bed of daffodil sky,
To faint in the light of the sun that she loves,
To faint in its light and die.

All night have the roses heard
The flute, violin, bassoon;
All night has the casement jessamine stirred
To the dancers dancing in tune—
Till a silence fell with the waking bird,
And a hush with the setting moon.

I said to the lily, "There is but one
With whom she has heart to be gay,
When will the dancers leave her alone?
She is weary of dance and play."

Now half to the setting moon are gone,
And half to the rising day;
Low on the sand, and loud on the stone,
The last wheel echoes away.

I said to the rose, "The brief night goes
In babble and revel and wine.
O young lord-lover, what sighs are those
For one that will never be thine?
But mine! but mine!" so I swore to the rose,
"Forever and ever, mine!"

And the soul of the rose went into my blood,
As the music clashed in the hall;
And long by the garden lake I stood,
For I heard the rivulet fall
From the lake to the meadow and on to the wood,
Our wood that is dearer than all.

From the meadow your walks have left so sweet
That whenever a March wind sighs,
He sets the jewel-print of your feet
In violet blue as your eyes—
To the woody hollows in which we meet,
And the valleys of Paradise.

The slender acacia would not shake
One long milk-bloom on the tree;
The white lake-blossom fell into the lake
As the pimpernell dozed on the lea.

But the rose was awake all night for your sake,
Knowing your promise to me;
The roses and lilies were all awake—
They sighed for the dawn and thee.

Queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls,
Come hither! the dances are done,
In gloss of satin and glimmer of pearls,
Queen lily and rose in one;
Shine out, little head, sunning over with curls,
To the flowers, and be their sun.

There has fallen a splendid tear
From the passion-flower at the gate.
She is coming, my dove, my dear,
She is coming, my life, my fate!
The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near;"
And the white rose weeps, "She is late!"
The lark-spur listens, "I hear! I hear!"
And the lily whispers, "I wait!"

She is coming, my own, my sweet!
Were it ever so airy a tread,
My heart would hear her and beat,
Were it earth in an earthly bed.

My dust would hear her and beat,
Had I lain for a century dead—
Would start and tremble under her feet,
And blossom in purple and red.

Good on Butler.

A rather amusing story is in circulation at the expense of the eminent gentleman from Massachusetts, commonly called 'Old Strabismus.'

At the President's levee the other night which was rather crowded, an old lady from the interior somewhere in a fainting condition, requested her husband to get her an ice.

Can't be did, responded 'hub,' in some irritation; there ain't no refreshments here.

Don't believe it. Didn't we get plenty at Belknap's the other day? the good woman said angrily; now go and get me a lemonade.

I tell you now, don't be a fool; there ain't no refreshments, everybody says so, grunted the lord and master.

You are quite mistaken, sir, said the Hon. S. S Cox, who happened to be near and who never loses an opportunity to put in a joke. The president always provides substancially. There he is Butler whose business is to show ladies to the supper room and the Hon. little jester pointed to General Butler. You'll find him a little stuck up and cross, but you shouldn't mind that; tell him to get you terrapins.

This was said so gravely that the two struggled through the crowd to where General Butler stood talking to some ladies.

I say, mister, I am told you are the butler, said the man.

I'm General Butler, replied old Strabismus pleasantly, thinking the two some country people filled with admiration of his greatness.

I don't care whether you are general butler or not, my wife wants some terrapins and lemonade.

Sir? snorted old B., in amazement and disgust.

'Oh, don't take airs, old cock. Come, now, hurry up those terrapins.

You must be drunk, sir, you must be drunk.

No he ain't, screamed the wife. He's a Good Templar; he ain't drunk, but I guess you are.

Roars of laughter greeted this, in which S. S. Cox was forced to join. General Butler Reddened in the face, and began puffing his cheeks out in the most violent manner.

I don't understand this extraordinary conduct. What do you want sir—what do you want?

Terrapins, I tell you.

What do you take me for, you cussed fool? roared Benjamin.

You call me a cuss fool and I'll hit you on the snout, said the man.

At this juncture an officer of the police seized the belligerent husband and led him away amid much laughter. Butler, turning suddenly, saw the mischief maker.

I say, Cox, did you do that?

Well, I owe terrapins, and I'll pay you, mind that—I'll pay you.'

And the two walked lovingly away.

Explanations Wanted.

Why a physician can't leave his office an hour on Sunday to attend religious service for fear there might be a call for him and yet can leave it several hours daily during the week to visit his parents.

Why a lawyer can't offer up a prayer of five minutes in public, and yet can plead for hours in court.

Why a farmer can't give but a dollar or two towards building a mission church, and yet can buy and pay for a farm.

Why a tradesman is so wearied that he can only attend the morning service on Sunday, and yet he is able to work hard and late every week day.

Why some people can't go to church when it rains, or looks like it, and yet rain never stops them in their occupation though they get a little wet.

Why a wealthy man can't afford to give anything to build a church adding value to his property, and yet can build a house every year.

Why some parents are not competent to instruct in a Sunday School, and yet are competetent to instruct their children at home—and even their neighbors in politics and theology too.

Why a tax payer can't give anything to support the Kingdom of God, and pay one per cent, or two to support his government.

The above are only a few specimens of the endless number and variety of things that we have seen and thought over. We were never able to explain. Those so doing many be able and we should be glad if they would, either in the paper or to their consciences. We hope they will be prepared to do so for certainly it will be insisted on, one day.

Farmer Boy.

Every farmer's boy should know how sooner or latter.

1. To dress himself, black his own shoes cut his brother's hair, wind the clock, sew on a button, make a bed, and keep all his clothes in perfect order and neatly in place.

2. To harness a horse, grease a wagon, and drive a team.

3. To carve and wait on the table.

4. To milk the cows, shear the sheep, and dress a veal or mutton.

5. To reckon money and keep accounts accurately, and according to book-keeping rules.

6. To write a neat appropriate, briefly expressed business letter, in a good hand, and fold and superscribe it properly, and write contracts.

7. To plow, sow grain and grass seed, drive a mowing machine, swing a scythe, build a neat stack and pitch hay.

8. To put a package, build a fire, white wash a wall, mend broken tools, and regulate a clock.

There are many other things which would render boys useful to themselves and others—these are merely specimens. But the young man who can do all these things well, and who is ready at all times to assist others, and be useful to his mother and sisters, will command far more respect and esteem than if he knew merely how to drive fast horses, smoke cigars, play cards and talk nonsense to foolish young ladies at parties.

* * *

During the sitting of a court in Connecticut, not long ago, on a very cold evening a crowd of lawyers had collected around the fire that blazed cheerfully on the hearth in a bar room, when a traveler entered, benumbed with cold, but no one moved to give him room to warm his shins so he leaned black against the wall in the back part of the room.

Presently a smart young limb of the law addressed him, when the following took place:

'You look like a traveler?

Wall, I suppose I am; I came all the way from Wisconsin a foot, at any rate.

From Wisconsin. What a distance to come on on pair of legs.

Wall, I done it anyhow.

Did you ever pass through hell in any of your travels?

Yes, sir; I've passed through the outskirts.

I thought likely. Well what are the manners and customs there? Some of us would like to know.

Oh you'll find them much the seme as in this place lawyers sit nearest the fire.

* * *

The ceremony of trying the nuptial knot is very much simplified in the Hoosier State, as the following scene will show:

What is your name, sir? demanded the justice.

Matty.

What is yours, Miss?

Polly.

Matty, do you love Polly?

No mistake.

Polly, do you love Matty?

Well, reckon.

Well, then, concluded the official dignitary.

I pronounce you man and wife, all the days of your life.

* * *

A fond husband in Norwich, Conn. who had always supposed his fair wife to very good, and pure, and true, detected her the other night in the act of wearing a Dolly Narden suit. The stricken husband fled from his home, and is now wandering in the wilds of New Jersey—a broken hearted man.

* * *

A modest young lady at the table, desiring the leg of a chicken, said:

I take the part which ought to be dressed in drawers.

A young gentleman opposite replied:

I'll take the part which ought to wear the bustle.

The young lady fainted, and was carried out on a salver.

Miscellaneous.

Business Law.

The following brief compilation of business law is worth a careful preservation, as it contains the essence of a large amount of legal verbiage:

It is not legally necessary to say on a not 'for value received.'

A note on Sunday is void.

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

A note by a minor is void.

A contract made with a miner is also void.

Any contract made with a lunatic is void.

A note obtained by fraud, or from a person in state of intoxication, cannot be collected

If a note is lost or stolen, it does not release the maker; he must pay it, if the consideration for which it was given and the amount can be proven.

An endorser of a note is exempt from liability if not served with notice of dishonor within twenty-four hours of its nonpayment.

Notes bear interest only when they are so stated.

Principals are responsible for the acts of their agents.

Each invidual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amout of the debt of the firm.

Ignorance of the law excuses no person.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

The law compels no one to do imposibilites.

An agreement without consideration is void.

Signatures made with a lead pencil are good in law.

A receipt for money is not always conclusive.

The acts of one partner bind all the rest.

The Cadi's Decision.

A poor Turkish slater of Constantinople, being at work upon the roof of a house, lost his footing and fell into the narrow street upon a man who chanced to be passing at the time. The pedestrain was killed by the concussion, while the slater escaped without material injury.

A son of the deceased caused the slater to be arrested and taken before the Cadi where he made the most grave charge, and claimed ample redress.

The Cadi listened attentively, and in the end asked the slater what he had to say in his defence.

Dispenser of Justice, answered the accused, in humble mood, it is even as this man says; but God forbid that there should be evil in my heart. I am a poor man, and know not how I can make the amends.

The son of the man who had been killed thereupon demanded that condign punishment should be inflicted upon the accused

The Cadi meditated a few moments, and finally said:

It shall be so.

To the slater he continued—

Thou shalt stand in the street where the father of this stood when thou did'st fall upon him.

And to the accuser he added,—

And thou shalt, if it so please thee, go upon the roof, and fall upon the culprit, even as he did fall upon thy father. Allah is great.

THE PAWNED FLUTE.

A miserable room in a miserable house, but the bright sunlight shone through the dingy window, and tried to cheer the sick man who lay on the bed, and the little child that leaned against his pillow. A dreary desolate room, but only one of the hundreds like it that fill our great city, and know no brightness but that of the blessed sun, which the good Father sends to all. The man closed his eyes wearily, the child slid down on the floor, and the sunbeams flickered fainter and fainter, till they wrapped the father and child in a parting embrace, and then fled away. The sound of footsteps was heard, and the child clapped his hands, crying, "Mamma!" as a little pale woman, with a sweet face and sad eyes, entered the room She kissed the child, and then went to the bed.

"Hubert, dear, do you feel better?"

"No, Alice, and I fear I never shall. I will not ask the question, your face tells me you have been unsuccessful. Ah, Alice! how bitterly I reproach myself for bringing you to this Had you never seen me, you might now have a happy home, and not be starving by the bedside of a helpless invalid."

"Hush, Hubert! Do not talk so. If either be to blame, it is I; had not the poor teacher won your love, you would now be the rich Hubert St. Clare. But neither did wrong. God sends love and we only follow where it leads. If we trust to his goodness, all will be well. I wouldn't give my husband for all the gold in California, and I don't think you would give your wife, would you?"

She smiled and kissed him, and then turned away to hide the tears, as she took off her bonnet and shawl. It grew darker and colder; and the child began to cry with chilliness and hunger. She gave it the last piece of bread, and took it in her arms to warm it.

"Alice," called her husband. "I am faint; can you give me some wine?"

Alice grew sick, for she knew that the bottle which she had fasted to buy, had yielded its last drop. Still she got it, hoping in the face of truth, that there might be just a little more; but it was empty.

"Hubert, the wine is all gone."

"Never mind, dear, I can do without it. It is very cold; come and sit by me."

She put the bottle back, and as she did so her hand touched a box that lay beside it. She drew it out, and hope sparkled in her eyes.

"See, Hubert! your flute. You will not miss it now, and it will bring some money; enough to keep us till Mr. Brent returns. Shall I take it, dear?"

Hubert hesitated a moment, and then said:

"Yes, take it."

She hurried on her bonnet and shawl, and the child began to cry, as she did it.

"Papa, papa! Mamma go way. Mamma take Bertie's music."

She bent over the child, saying:

"Don't cry, Bertie. Mamma won't stay long, and she will bring bread for the music. Bertie be good, and talk to papa till I come back."

The child dried his tears, and climbed on the bed; Alice put the box under her shawl and went out.

The fire blazed brightly in the St. Clare parlor. Heavy curtains shut out the night; shaded lamps filled the room with soft light, and everything spoke of comfort and wealth. Mr. and Mrs. St. Clare sat in deep cushioned chairs before the fire. He was reading, but she sat with folded hands, looking anxiously into the coals. A few nights before the house had been robbed of a large amount of plate and jewels, and she was still suffering from the shock. The bell rang, and a servant announced, "Mr. Busk."

"Show him in!" said the master. And in a second, a sharp little man dressed in black, entered the room. He was the detective, and Mr St. Clare rose to meet him.

"Good evening, Mr. Busk. Have you made any discoveries?"

"I don't know, sir. Was that list you gave me correct?"

"Perfectly."

"Nothing taken but plate and jewels?"

"Nothing; but why do you ask?"

"Why, you see to day, as I was prowling around among some of my old friends, I came across this thing; and I thought it might have been in the lot, and you overlooked it. Are you sure it wasn't? Look at it." And he handed a flute to Mr. St. Clare.

He took it with a trembling hand, for it was no stranger to his eyes. His wife leaned over his shoulder, and he slowly turned it over, till on a little gold plate they read the name of their banished son, "Hubert St. Clare." For a moment a death-like silence reigned, and then the mother spoke:

"Henry, God has sent us this. You must forgive our boy."

He pushed her aside, and starting up, paced the floor with bowed head and slow steps. His wife looked at him with pleading eyes. He stopped before her.

"Forgive him, Maria! God grant that he is still on earth, to give me his forgiveness!" And he laid his gray head on his wife's shoulder and sobbed aloud:

"My boy! my boy! my boy!"

Mr. Busk had watched in silence, his experienced eyes reading the story at a glance. Now he spoke.

"Pardon me, but time is precious to me, and I suppose you have some questions to ask."

Mr. St. Clare loooked up.

"Yes, Busk, thank you. Tell me all you know about this." And he laid his hand on the flute.

Busk told him all, which was indeed but little. He had found it in a pawn-broker's shop, where it had been left by a woman who was a stranger to the pawn-broker.

"By a woman?" said Mr. St. Clare, when he stopped. "Maria he must be dead, and I have killed him." And again he bowed his head, but she laid her hand upon it, and said:

"Cheer up, Henry; he may be ill; but he lives; call up your strength to find him."

Find him! As well try to recover a lost grain of sand from Sahara's desert, as a suffering, unknown fellow-creature from the billows of that mighty city.

Mr. St. Clare, with two detectives, visited the pawn-broker's that night; but they learned no more than Mr. Busk had the first time; and could only arrange to have the woman watched if she returned.

Time rolled on, and she did not reappear. Mr. St. Clare advertised in every journal. He might as well placarded the pyramids; no news of the outer world penetrated Hubert's sick room. A month passed since the flute was brought to Mr. and Mrs. St. Clare, and even the mother's heart began to fail, when one night they received a note from Mr. Busk, which said:

"All right. Woman tracked to No. — Street. Go at once."

The wind drove the biting cold into the cheerless home of Hubert St. Clare. A month had passed, and he still lay on his sick bed. His late employer had not returned, and poor as Hubert was, his old pride withheld him from asking help from strangers. The money raised on the flute, though husbanded with greatest care, at last melted away, and that day Alice's shawl had gone the same road.

The wind blew louder, and the rain drops splashed the window. Alice, with the child in her arms, cowered over the feeble fire, and Hubert slept. A fearful gust swept by, that seemed to shake the crazy house to its foundation, and threatened to dash it to the ground. Still Hubert slept; and Alice, slipping the child from her arms, went to the bed. She bent over him. How changed he was. The pale face had grown whiter, and the features were pinched and sharp. She lifted the dark clinging hair. How cold and damp his brow felt. A dull horror crept over her. She tried to call him but the sound died in her throat. She kissed his lips; still he slept on! "O Father," she thought, "will he never waken? Is he dying?"

The child crept to her and pulled her dress. She did not feel it, neither did she hear hurried footsteps on the stairs, and the voice that called Hubert's name; but his spirit, half hovering in space, caught the sound, and it staid on the threshold of eternity. He opened his eyes, and turned them with a look of of yearning tenderness, toward the door, which opened at that moment, and Mr. and Mrs. St. Clare entered the room.

"Mother! Father!" said he, and with the false strength of death, he held out his arms to them.

"My boy! my boy!" and their arms were around him. For a moment their sobs filled the room; and then Hubert said:

"It is growing dark. Raise my head, mother. I knew you would come. Be good to Alice. Father forgive—mother—Alice—good by!"

And Mrs. St. Clare held the dead body of her son in her arms.

Institute Jottings.

The following were adopted by a Teachers' Institute at Beaver, Pennsylvania. They will be found as useful in Indiana as in that State. Teachers will find them valuable, and should cut them out of the paper and post them where they can see them at least once a day:

Never be late at school.

Make few, if any rules.

Never allow tale bearing.

Avoid governing too much.

Visit the schools of others.

Never punish when angry.

Never magnify small offenses.

Cultivate a pleasant countenance.

Never be hasty in word or action.

Teach both by precept and example.

Never let a known fact go unnoticed.

Require prompt and exact obedience.

Labor diligently for self improvement.

Encourage parents to visit the schools.

Subscribe for some educational journal.

Never compare one child with another.

Never threaten for anticipated offences.

Never attempt to teach too many things.

Never speak in a scolding, fretful manner.

Make the school room cheerful and attractive.

Never let your pupils see that they can vex you.

Banish all books at recitation, except in reading.

Ask two questions out of the book for every one in it.

Never trust to another what you should do yourself.

Never indulge in anything inconsistent with true politeness.

Never use a hard word when an easy one will answer as well.

Never tell a pupil to do a thing unless convinced he can do it.

AUBURN, IND., APRIL 25, 1872

Meeting of the Dem. Cen'l. Com.

The members of the Democratic Central Committee, and all others interested in the success of the Democratic party of DeKalb county, are requested to meet at Auburn on Saturday, May 4th, 1872, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the State Convention to be held at Indianapolis on June 12th, 1872. Also, to consider the proper time for holding the County Convention, and transact other business that will be before the Committte.

The following are the names of the County Central Committee, to wit:

Henry H. Houser, Butler township.

Jacob Snyder, Jackson township.

Samuel S. Shutt, Concord township.

B. F. Blair, Newville township.

John Shoub, Stafford township.

William Blair, Wilmington township.

Guy Plum, Union township south precinct.

John Butt, Union township, north precinct.

James Goetschius, Richland township, south precinct.

Stephen Masters, Richland township, north precinct.

Emanual Neidig, Fairfield township.

S. B. Mattinger, Smithfield township.

Miles Waterman, Franklin township.

Samuel Learned, Troy township.

J. R. LANNING,

Chairman DeKalb County Central Committe.

Federal office holders are a unit in regard to the Cincinnati Convention. They have, to a man, decided that it will not be healthy to go there.

Gen. Grant's relations are not inclined to literary avocations. A Radical paper boasts that not more than half a dozen journals in Ohio are edited by federal office holders.

The Chicago Tribune says that the crowded house which greeted Colonel Fred. Hecker in that city, and applauded his stirring address to the echo, "shows that our German citizens are firm in their belief that power and purity should go together."

Grant has backed down on civil service reform. He stands ready to back down from his claim for consequential damages; he has gone back on the Democratic party, on Andy Johnson, on the Cleveland pup, and, in fact, on everybody except his relations.

There are forty Admirals and other officers in proportion on the active and retired lists of the United States navy. If all these officers had to go somewhere at one and the same time, Robeson would have to find transportation for them outside of the navy, or about half of them would have to walk.

The present administration at Washington has a happy way of spending the money wrung from the people, an especial instance in point occurred not very long ago. During the administration of President Johnson a claim was made to the navy department by certain contractors, for damage said to have arisen from changes in the plans of certain vessels. Secretary Welles, after Congress had passed the necessary law, appointed a board of officers to investigate the merits of the claim, and paid over $115.500 on the report.

Without any further law, Mr. Secretary Robeson organized another board who reported that the contractors should be paid $93,000 more. And this money has been paid in direct violation of the constitution, without any appropriation by Congress.

It may be said that Mr. Robeson did not mean to do wrong. Possibly. But the same argument would justify any violation of law, by the President or any one or more of his subordinates.

We profess to be ruled by the law; that public officers are the servants of the people, and are bound by their orders as set forth in the constitution. Wise men fear that at the rate we have been traveling for three years past, a grand Saturnalia is approaching, in which the servants will have become the masters, and the people will have been reduced from their present position to one of comparative bondage.

All unauthorized power is tyranny, whether exercised by Congress, a President, or a Secretary of the Navy.

It is said that "a National Convention of private soldiers" is to be held at Washington on the 6th of next [illegible]

RUNNING THE STATE GOVERNMENT.

A Contrast—Let Tax Payers Read.

[Correspondence of the Davis County Democrat.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 22, 1872.

The first year (one-half of the term) of the Democratic officers has just passed, and feeling that the readers of the Democrat might be somewhat interested in information as to their stewardship, I have availed myself of a few leisure hours here in obtaining information therein.

Having been kindly shown through the books and other documents of the Auditor's office to my satisfaction, which by a new commendable rule of the present Auditor, are held open to the inspection and examination of the entire public, friends and foe alike, I am warranted in the statement that the showing is such as should, and doubtles will, be gratifying to every taxpayer in the State who has no selfish purpose to subserve.

Wherever it has been within the power of those officers to cut down expenses it has been done. A fair and true illustration of the economy and reform inaugurated by the administration of the present finance officers of the State can perhaps be best explained and illustrated by the actual figures as they stand upon the books:

In the proper ledger, and also in ex-Auditor Evan's report of 1870, we find the following:

Expense of Auditor's office	$2,000 00
Expense of Treasurer's office	1,000 00
Expense of Secretary's office	1,000 00
Expense of Superintendent of Public Instruction	1,000 00
Expense of Agent of State	2,978 80
Expense of State Debt Sinking Fund	2,581 45
Total	$10,760 26

The foregoing figures were made by and on account of the Republican Administration for the fiscal year of 1870.

The following are also the exact amounts expended on the same account by the present incumbents, during the same length of time:

Expense of Auditor's office	$180 00
Expense of Treasurer's office	138 90
Expense of Secretary's office	180 65
Expense of Superintendent of Public Instruction	249 99
Expense of Agent of State	354 17
Expense of State Debt Sinking Fund	465 60
Total	$1,570 00

By these figures it will be seen that Democratic State officers have saved to the people, in the item of office expenses, the sum of $9,190.33.

The figures side by side are as follows:

Evans for expense of Auditor's office	$2,000 00
Shoemaker, on same account	180 72
Shoemaker less than Evans	$1,819 28
Kimball's expense of Treasurer's office	$1,000 00
Ryan, on same account	138 00
Ryan less than Kimball	$ 861 10
Hoffman's expense of Secretary's office	$1,000 00
Eddy, on same account	190 00
Eddy less than Hoffman	$ 750 00
Hobbs' expense of Superintendent's office	$1,000 00
Hopkins, on same account	239 00
Hopkins less than Hobbs	$ 750 00
Slaughter's expense as Agent of State	$1,000 00
Shannon, on same account	249 99
Shannon less than Slaughter	$ 750 01
Expense of State Debt Sinking Fund	$2,781 49
On same account, present officers	466 00
Difference	$2,320 49
Total savings	9,199 23

While it may be true that this is not a very large amount of money we apprehend it may be admitted that it is a very large per cent. of a saving, and is all that could have reasonably been expected, and reflects credit alike upon the officers and the party that elected them.

Again, the Auditor of State has stopped the $410 per month leak of the treasury on account of the Governor's house rent; $18,896 50 has also been secured to the State from A. H. Conner, late State Printer and Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, which, of course, was so much of a steal.

Your readers may be assured that the days of voucher-raising, forgery, corruption and fraud generally, by which means the people have been robbed of thousands upon thousands of dollars, are at an end. And it is moreover an undeniable fact, and one that should not soon be forgotten by the people, that this desirable result comes from, and is the direct and legitimate fruit of the last election in the State. Had the Republican party succeeded in continuing in power, who does not know that the peoples' books would have remained closed, and that these hitherto secreted frauds and robberies would have gone on, and the endorsed Connor would still have been permitted free access to the the Treasury and been continued Chairman of the State Central Committee, and the people would, as in the past, have been continued in utter ignorance of such monstrous frauds and crimes as are now laid bare at the feet of Connor, Douglass, Holloway and others. And Major Evans would now be using $2,000 a year for office expenses, when $180 is found sufficient.

Two men were fined ten dollars each in Nashville the other day for robbing a woman of six dollars. They did things differently down there under the Brownlow regime. The men who then robbed the State of the six hundred thousand dollars school fund, for instance, were never fined anything.

Since Trumbull made his speech in New York, the question as to who wears the Grant collar is becoming an interesting one.

The State Treasurer's Duster.

The Indianapolis Sentinel says a few days ago the Journal referred to what it termed "a beautiful feather duster" in the office of the Treasurer of State, and Mr Ryan thinking that the editor of the Republican State organ looked upon the cobweb and dust remover with a lustful eye sent him the one that had done "the State some service," and the only one in the office, which had been shorn of its fair proportions by long and constant use. The Journal editor has the coveted duster, and here is the Treasurer's note accompanying the gift, but which failed to make its appearance in the Republican organ:

INDIANAPOLIS, April 10, 1872.

ED. JOURNAL—Dear Sir:—As I notice by the above, you are in need of a "feather duster," I send you, with my compliments, the only one in the Treasurer's office. As this "duster" has performed much service in brushing cobwebs from old warrants and "raised vouchers," I do request that you treat it tenderly for the good it has done. I would also be pleased if you could induce Attorney General Hanna to send me the "beautiful duster" you write about, as I need it, and do not like to have credit given for a favor not received. Like the illustrious Grant, I assure you I will accept, provided the present is not burthened with "C. O. D."

Yours, etc., JAS. B. RYAN.

The Republicans in New York seized upon the sins of Tweed and his companions as an excuse for a grand parade of honesty, and went in for reform generally. Believing that there was sincerity in all this, the leading Democrats, disgusted at the manifest knavery of the Tammany ring, instead of defending or even excusing the thieveries of those men because they were Democrats, joined in the reform movement to such a degree, that the Republicans elected fully two-thirds of both branches of the Legislature, thus enabling them to reform, to their heart's content, without fear of a possible veto from Gov. Hoffman.

Well, the Legislature has been in session for over its hundred days and what have they done? Nothing. Wood, a Republican Senator who was manifestly bribed by Tweed at the previous session, has been whitewashed all over and pronounced a marvellous proper man; and Tweed for whose election to the State Senate it has been attempted to hold Democrats responsible all over the United States; Tweed, whose very name seems to be an offense to the superlatively honest Republicans; Tweed remains a member of the New York Senate; not one of his pure, patriotic, and honest Republican colleagues even hinting that so remarkable a rascal is not fit to be their companion.

Can it be that Tweed has, what is vulgarly known as the dead wood on these honorable Senators, and that every one of them is kept in wholesome fear of being shown up in his true colors?

A Republican meeting is called at Richmond, Indiana, to be composed of those who are opposed to the "continuance of an administration rendered illustrious in the annals of our country—

1. For its shameless nepotism.
2. For its corrupt military rings.
3. For its personal favoritism in return for pecuniary and other gifts to the President.
4. For its continuance in office of persons of proved incapacity and of more than doubtful honesty.
5. For its absence from the seat of government for months almost continuously.
6. For its demoralization of the civil service, induced directly by the vicious example of the head of the administration.
7. For its reprehensible interference with elections and conventions of the people, as illustrated in the cases of Missouri and Louisiana.
8. For its opposition to the investigation of frauds and speculations.
9. For its repeated exercise of doubtful powers.
10. For its subserviency to and control by a number of graceless, corrupt politicians, of more than questionable moral character.
11. For its consorting with and control by persons unknown to the party or to the country—the baser sort of political adventurers and bummers.

And for many other unenumerated evidences, proving it totally unworthy of the confidence or respect of an enlightened people."

And all Republicans are also invited who are in favor of—

"1. A return to greater purity and ability in officials.

2. A statesman President, who, having some acquaintance with the principles of our Government, will not prostitute the high office to the advancement of his personal interest and the fortunes of his friends.

3. A President who, by his example, will give encouragement to the honest discharge of official duties in all his subordinates.

4. An executive who, by the rigid enforcement of existing laws, and by the ample powers legitimately inherent in the office, will introduce and exact all needed civil service reforms.

5. A President who, while urging in words a faithful attention to official duty in subordinate officials, will not by his own conduct, encourage corruption.

6. A President who, unlike the present incumbent, will preserve the office as a purely civil one, totally disconnected with the trappings of military [illegible]

7. A President sufficiently conversant with the proprieties of life and the [illegible] moral independence, not [illegible] fellow-citizens [illegible] relatives to office, but who will follow, in this respect, the universally approved example of all former Presidents.

8. A President who will, in no case, extend official preferment in direct recognition of personal pecuniary favors.

9. A President who is fully capable of properly appreciating the dignity, the duties, and the requirements of the honorable office.

10. A President who will repel all familiar intimacy with persons notorious for their inebriate and otherwise immoral habits.

11. And finally, a President who will, under all circumstances, so far respect his exalted position, the good name of his constituency, and the moral sense of all better classes of society, as never to appear in public under the influence of inebriation."

Tobacco.

NEWVILLE, INDIANA, April 20th, 1872.

An energetic poison, tobacco has, nevertheless, become one of the most imperious wants of our enfeebled and obtuse epoch. We snuff, we smoke, and we even chew this acrid and corrosive substance, which weakens the brain and nervous system, and which injures the former of digestion by destroying the tone of the stomach and billiary organs. Like the orientals, who stupidly seek, in opium for visions and hallucinations, we foolishly expect to revive our spirits and to forget our miseries under the effects of liquors and tobacco; and even those who strenuously discountenance the use of liquors, are perfectly intemperate with tobacco. An oppressive torpor, weakness or loss of intellect, softening of the brain, paralysis, nervous debility, dyspepsia, disease of the liver and kidneys, and gravel, are results which are by no means unseen consequences of an excessive employment of this weed, the poisonous element of which the nicotine contained in it. Independently of these maladies it is a filthy practice to use it at all, as manifested by the uncleanly noses the foul handkerchiefs, the soiled clothing, the filthy and spotted floors, and walls of the bed room sitting room and other places, where tobacco consumers expectorate, the discolored teeth, and the detestably fetid breath. And there is hardly to be found a person engaged either in chewing, smoking or snuffing tobacco, who does not frequently experience warnings against its use, in the form of faintness, nausea, giddiness extensive dryness of the throat, nervous tremblings, &c. Many of which effects, it is proper to remark, may be overcome by large draughts of cold water.

It is a remarkable fact, which all physicians, of much experience, will corroborate, that, in the treatment of chronic diseases, those who are addicted to the use of tobacco in any form, are, as a general rule, found to be much more difficult of cureing than those who use it, their nervous system respond more freely to the action of remedial agents, and which is due tobacco, which has paralyzed the extreme susceptibility of their nervous loth to external and internal influence. A patient under treatment should give up the use of tobacco, or else his physician should assume no positive responsibility in his care, further than to do the best he can for him. By stopping its employment the patient will be astonished at the rapidity of his cure, and at the more active salutary influence of remedial agents upon his system. In some cases the suspension of its use may be effected at once; in others it will require to be gradual; thus snuffers and smokers may stop at once, but old chewers should gradually lessen their 'cuds' and at the same time acquire the habit of chewing chamomile flowers or the inner bark of wild hickory—the latter being the best tonic to restore the tone of the stomach, without interfering with any other theraputical treatment that may be instituted.

Gentlemen just consider your selves how ilmannerly it looks for a gentleman to walk in a nice parlor, with his mouth filled with this filth. If you would have a clear mind and a clear conscience avoid the use of tobacco in all its forms.

Many pavements are out of repair from the effects of the winter frosts.

The weather is becoming pleasant again, and overcoats are laid away.

Last Sunday was a disagreeable day, but all the churches were well attended.

At this time last year the farmers had their oats sown and their corn ground all plowed.

The time is here when decayed vegetation in cellars, and all cesspools, should be looked after.

Send the Courier to your absent friend —it contains more news each week than a dozen letters.

An exchange says "Hail Spring!" For our part we prefer a warm rain; we have had hail enough.

Auburn is out of empty houses, and wants a large number of cottages built to supply the demands.

The work has commenced on the new brick block, and the contractor, Mr. Picker, can be seen early and late, busy all the time, and we look for an early completion of this block.

A most unplesant gale of wind prevailed last Saturday, and besides filling every body's eyes with dust, considerable damage was done by blowing down fences, loose boards and scattering things around promiscuously.

Go to Davenport & Co's for soda water.

We hear a great many reports in regard to some of our men being intoxicated.— This is a poor way to encourage them, friends, even if they are guilty, and if the ones that circulate these reports don't come closer to the truth than some ones we know of, they had better sell out now while lies are at par.

Never before in their recollection, say some of our oldest citizens, has vegetation in this vicinity possessed so dead an appearance at this period of the year as it does at the present time. The drought last summer, and the snowless but bitter cold snaps of the past winter, seem to have a severe effect on the vegetable kingdom.

Jury.—The following are the jurors drawn for the Common Please Court May term, 1872.

Geo. W. Downs,

W. H. Madden,
Wm. L. Smith

The "Dolly Varden" hat.—Of course you will execrate it, denounce it, but that will make no difference, for the Dolly Varden will be worn, and you will end in falling in love with its wearer, for this daintiest flower of spring is a most coquettish affair, especially adapted to a sweet girlish face. Its broad brim caught up at the back, its clusters of great roses or nodding plumes, its airy scarf or graceful ribbons, all have a piquant air which cannot fail to lend a charm to its wearer.

Articles of the Auburn Building, Loan and Savings Association, organized April 6, 1872, for the transaction of business in the town of Auburn, DeKalb county, were filled with the Secretary of State yesterday. Capital stock $100,000, divided into shares of $200 each. Term of existence, eight years. Directors for first year—Wm. McIntyre, John L. Davis, Thomas C. Mays Josept Abright, J. B. Casebeer, D. Z. Hoffman, C. S. Hare, H. C. Peterson, and Albert Robbins.—Ind. Sentinel.

Spring Plowing —Our farmers have, in some places, commenced their spring plowing, but in many parts this can not be done yet, on account of the frost not having entirely left the ground. The winter has been long, cool, and severe, and spring work on the farm and in the garden has been unusually delayed this season. The oats, corn, potatoes and all the truck, will be planted late, probably the better in the end, for it often happens, in this latitude, that early plants are caught by the late frosts, are stunted in their growth, so that the later plants will do better in the end.

Improvements.—In a half hour's walk over our town, we were surprised at the improvements which are going on. Now, that spring has opened fairly, and the weather is so propitious, every one seems anxious to complete his spring improvements before the heat of summer comes on with its debilitating influences and effects. Auburn is constantly improving and growing, our business and wealth is steadily increasing, and labor finds, yearly, more employment. We progress and prosper and keep pushing our enterprise and home interests.

The Wheat Fields.—The wheat fields had a gloomy appearance a month ago.— Little could be seen of the usual green winter wheat. The fly, it is stated, cut the wheat last fall, and the open cold exposure completely killed the top, so that the grain fields presented a dead, seared appearance on the surface. But it is gratifying to pass through the country now and see on every hand the young wheat stock start up from its roots thick and thrifty again, and if no harm befalls it otherwise the prospects for a good wheat crop are again becoming as bright as ever.

B. & O. R. R.—Last Saturday the House passed, by a vote of 59 to 1, a bill "to allow the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., to incorporate and survey a railroad line running from the southeast to the northwest of this State without first designating the western terminus on the State line between Ohio and Indiana.' We understand the object of this bill is to authorize the crossing of the State line from Hicksville township at a point three or four miles south of that named in the articles of incorporation. This action seems to indicate that Hicksville town is to be near or directly upon the line.—Defiance Democrat.

Town Election.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified voters of the town of Auburn, DeKalb Co. Indiana, that the Annual Election will be held in the town of Auburn, at the usual place of holding election, to-wit: In the Court House on the 1st Monday of May, 1872, being the 6th day thereof, for the purpose of electing the officers thereof, to-wit: Five trustees, one for each district, one Clerk, one Assessor, one Treasurer, and one Marshal for the town of Auburn.

Witness my hand and the corporation seal of the town of Auburn, this 23d day of April 1872.

R. Elson, Town Clerk.

Carriages.—Among many enterprises which promise to aid Auburn in its onward march of prosperity, and which will assist us in acquiring a reputation for first-class mechanical skill, the wagon making interest bears no insignificant part We were forcibly impressed with this during the past week, on visiting the extensive Carriage establishment of J. W. Shaffer, on South Main-st. The extent and variety of the productions of this establishment agreeably surprised us, and what most forcibly arrested our attention was the fine work on hand for spring trade.— Persons calling at his shops can see, either finished or in progress of construction, all kinds of vehicles in their line, from a light trotting buggy to a four horse wagon. We see that the Studebaker wagon is offered for sale here, but we learn from our farmers that Mr. Shaffer makes just as serviceable a wagon as can be produced at a price equally as low. We want to see our home manufactories patronized and we hope that all will give Mr. C. a all before buying elsewhere.

Several of our Republican citizens will attend the Cincinnati Convention.

Arrangements have been made by the Saginaw Railroad so that passengers will be carried to Cincinnati at half rates. A special train will be run, leaving Jackson at 7 o'clock in the morning, during the first three days of the week.

AUBURN SPRING RACES!

A Large Attendance

FORTY HORSES ON THE RAMPAGE.

The simple announcement of Spring Races at this place may surprise some of our readers, as it is not generally known yet, that the county seat rejoices in the posession of a fine race course, and we are therefore much pleased to still increase this surprise by the fact that actual races have occurred on said track to the gratification and amusement of an amusement-loving public.

Last Saturday was an important day with the horsemen and sportsmen generally, of this place and vicinity. A little excitement relative to the speed of several fine roadsters, was created a day or two before, which finally culminated in an agreement to test their speed on this Saturday Large delegations from all the points of the compass, including Magginius from the south. Firey, untamed steeds and nondescripty of every hue and quality, pranced along, bearing their reckless, daring riders gracefully and majestically along, as though they had been sent for. We can compare the scene to nothing more expressive than an Irish fair, and though we confess to have never been present on one of these interesting occasions on the Emerald Isle, we feel confident that in this particular it resembled it very much. But to the race. The contesting horses were in fine trim, Cool and in excellent Mood(y) for a race. First came the flashing Thunderbolt, a large dark bay gelding, looking strong enough to pull over a mountain, but he was evidently intended for speed—by his owner. We beleive if he could be so divided that half of him could go in on the first part of the race and let the other half bring up the rear there would be plenty of horse employed at a time, and the time made would be tremendous. However, this arrangement could not be effected for this race, so the horse went "en-masse," as they say in the army.

The other hoss now loomed in sight, and the anxious gaze of the multitude fell upon him in a moment. It was a beautiful sight to see this animal come up in so fine style, and everybody cheered as he dashed into the arena, on a walk. In fact when viewed in this gait, he was the preference by odds. He is a thorough bred Lightning Catcher, of a beautiful sleepy black, and always goes first-rate, after the race.

These two celebrated horses were to go against time—distance about one-third of a mile. Catcher started first, and came in finely, and the second heat was commenced and he walk right home, in 3:58. The third heat was omitted.

Thunderbolt now came to the scratch, and made three heats, in his usual graceful style, the last one of which so pleased a little boy on the fence, that in an effort to give vent to his feelings in a cheer, he broke down the top board, unceremoniously displacing a whole line of 'roosters' who had located thereon.

Time..........4 minutes and a half.

Thus it will be seen that the mile was made in less than five minutes, which, considering the horses, is remarkably good time.

The Capitol.

We were pleased to meet at the Capitol, last week, Hon. John C. Shoemaker, the man that distributed the Sinking Fund to the various counties, instead of letting it out to bankers, and speculators, and pocketing the interest as the Republican Auditor did. The people of Indiana and the taxpayers can rest assured that they have an honest man for State Auditor and if they will elect the next Democratic Candidate for Govener, they will have a Govenor that will not pocket $5000 a year on house rent when it only costs $1500.

Hon. J. D. Ryan, our State Treasurer is also renovating and purging that office of the filth and corruption which has accumulated under Radical rule. It cost the last Radical Treasurer $1000 a year to run that office, but Mr. Ryan, being an honest Democrat, runs it at a cost of $138, a saving of some little money for the tax payer. Col. Eddy, the late Secretary of State also made large improvements in this respect, O. M. Eddy, Esq., his son, has been the deputy during the term, and has introduced many reforms that cannot fail to meet with the approval of all honest men, We are glad to notice his name mentioned as a candidate for this position knowing that he would honor the party by a faithful and honest discharge of its duties.

We dropped in at the Sentinel and found all busy in the cat skining business, especially on the "Raised Voucher" question.— The Republican papers made a great howl when Bright was arrested for over-drawing money on printing bills, but they cooled down suddenly, when he vindicated himself against said charge, and showed up the fact that the Republican State Printer had 'raised vouchers' or in other words increased the amounts after they had been approved and then drawn the money from the Treasury. It was a rascally piece of business, and should not go unpunished.

We met our excellent friend Mr. Vickers, now on the editorial staff of the Journal, and Mr. Halford, of the same paper. Clever, agreeable gentlemen, you will always find them right with the single exception of politics.

Fred Thompson still moves. Every body knows Fred, because he is popular, and is socially one of the finest fellows you could wish to meet. We owe him many thanks for favors at different times.

Surveying Party.—A corps of engineers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad arrived here last Friday, with a new line, varying very little from the one located last summer. They retraced their steps, however, to the St. Joseph River, last Monday in order to correct the line so as to bring it a few rods south of the present one. It is thought that by running from fifty to sixty rods south, it will suit all concerned, much better and not cut into the improvements of our farmers near so bad as it now does. We look upon this project as an established fact, and work will, no doubt, commence in a few week at the farthest.

Bill ——— has sold out to another fellow that lives just a little piece beyond her house.

[illegible] having a dance to-night.

Our merchants have all returned from the east with a new stock of spring goods and our farmers are now invited, especially the ladies, to call and inspect the different establishments.

A large number of shade trees have been set out along our streets. There is room for more. They add greatly to the beauty of a place, and in a few years are of incalculable value. The tree is a public benefactor.

Messrs. Wood & Williams, the new firm, at Case's old stand, have just received an extensive assortment of dry goods and a quality of dress goods never kept here before. Give them a call and see their mammoth stock.

As will be seen by advertisement in another column, the books for subscription to the capital stock of the Baltimore, Pittsburg & Chicago Railroad, will be opened at the office of Wm. M. Clapp, at Albion, Ind., on the 30th of May.

A fire was making considerable headway in the saw dust pile, east of the Court House, caught by sparks from the mill, but our citizens turned out, and with buckets quenched it. How nice it would be to have an engine to do service on such occasions.

Messrs. Boozer & Blattner are making things lively in the Dry Goods trade, at Waterloo. They have a most complete stock of everything, and being obliging, agreeable gentlemen, the public will find it to their advantage to give them a call.

We know of a little affair to come off soon, but we dare not say anything about it now as it would be premature.— We'll let you know all about it next week. Its sly, and those concerned think them selves quite smart, and we would like to blow on 'em, but the fellow is a good deal bigger than we are, so we are mum.

USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York: "Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for moveral equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. Ish Dat All?

Two Dutch farmers at Kinderhook, whose farms were adjacent, were out in their respective fields when one heard an unusual loud hallooing in the direction of a gap in a high stone wall, and run with all speed to the place, when the following brief conversation ensued:

"Shon, vot ish de matter?"

"Vel den," says John, "I vas trying to climb on the top of dish high stone vall tumbled down unto me, and had broken one of mine arms, smashed mien ribs in und dese pig stones are lying on mine pelly."

"Ish dat all?" says the other; "vy you holler so big loud I tot you had de tootake."

Kiss Me, Mother, for I Can't Hold on any Longer.

In describing the flood which was so disastrous to many sections of Virginia, the Lynchburg papers record the following very sad and touching incident:

A mother and several little children were making their escape from a narrow neck of land, which lies between the river and canal. They had reached the banks of the canal when they were amazed to find that the bridge was already gone; and their only hope was to cling on the abutment of the bridge until the angry waves should subside. But as they stood there clinging to the abutment, the waters continued to rise higher and higher, while in the deep darkness they could hear the crashing of trees amid the thunders of bridge timbers that were wildly dashing all around them. They had been in this desperate condition for some time when the little girl felt that her strength was gone, and, with a wild shriek of terror, she exclaimed, "Kiss me mother, for I can't hold any longer!" And with the warm pressure of that mother's lips upon her cheek, she was swept away and was seen no more.

Playing the Piano.

The Poet of the Breakfast Table gives this vivid description of the manner in which a girl makes ready to play and plays her grand piano:

It was a young woman, with as many white muslin flounces round her as the planet Saturn has rings, that did it. She gave the music stool a twirl or two and puffed down on to it like a whirl of soap suds in a hand basin. Then she pushed up her cuffs as if she was going to fight for the champion's belt. Then she worked her rists and her hands, to limber 'em I suppose, and spread out her fingers till they looked as though they would pretty much cover the key-board, from the growling end to the little squeaky one. Then these two hands of her's made a jump at the keys as if they were a couple of tigers coming down on a flock of black and white sheep, and the piano gave a great howl as if its tail had been trod on. Dead stop—so still you could hear your hair growing. Then another jump, and another howl, as if the piano had two tails and you had trod on both of 'em at once, and a grand clutter and scramble and strings of jumps, up and down, back and forward, one hand over the other, like a stampede of rats and mice more than like anything I call music.

The Dutchman's Clock.

A Dutchman being asked why he did not have a clock in his house explained it as follows: "Val, you see, de udder night after I shut up de shop I feels a little dirsty, like what a man will feel sometimes, you know, and I says to my old vooman, I beleef I goes up to the corner and git a glass of peer. I goes up, you know, and gots my glass of peer, unt vile I was a sittin dere, in comes Yankee Kline and says, Heindrick better you come mit me and take a glass of beer. Val, I say, I don't keer ven I do, und so I goes mit him and takes de glass of peer. And den, already, after a little vile in comes Yon More und Peter Myer, und some uder fellows, und dey all ax me to come mit dem und take some peer. Val, I goes mit 'em unt ve all got to drinkin unt singing mit songs, und I guess I got pretty trunk. Ve vas having a good time generaly, unt I stays mit dem fellers til it was about three o'clock. Ven I finds out vot time it is, I think now mine vife will give me ter teiful ven I goes home. Anyhow I says I vil schlip town unt git in te house, and schlip in te bed mit der olk vooman, unt I don't vil vake her up. Val, you know I vas a little trunk, unt I stummel ober some tings vot vos on de floor, und de old vooman she vakes up und say. 'Oh! oh! Mister Heindrick, tis is a fine time to be comin' home; vot time is it, hey?' O, I say don't give yourself so much trouble, tisn't more as leffen o'clock. Now, yust ven I tells de olt vooman dat it vas leffen o'clock, de clock he calls me a liar, und strikes tree. Dat makes me mat, you know, unt so I knocks him off de mantle biece and brakes him to bieces.

In the Green Bay (Wis.) Postoffice a notice is posted up which reads as follows: "Price of three cent stamps, three cents each; licked and stuck, five cents each; the clock will answer the question, 'Has the mail closed?'"

The canals around the rapids of the St. Lawrence, between Ogdensburg and Montreal, will not be navigable for vessels of the larger class, until there is a considerable rise of water. The water in the river is at the lowest ever known.

A Sunday school superintendent reviewing the lesson and talking of the verse reading, "Let your loins be girded and your lights burning," asked the question, "Why are we commanded to gird our loins?" one little sharp shaver sung out, "To keep our breeches up."

Before you ask a favor of any man just consider three things: First, Can you not avoid it? Second, Can the one you apply to grant it? Third, Would you, if your place were reversed, do for your friend what you ask him to do for yourself? It is well to think of this, as it may change the whole question.

A Quebec woman created a sensation recently by riding through St. John street in a hearse, reclining on the coffin bed, and smoking a pipe.

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

VINEGAR BITTERS

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

A REFORMED DRUNKARD'S STORY.

BY J. F. WIDNEY.

Tune, "Oh, Susannah!"

When young I was as spruce a lad
As any you could see;
My cloth's were fine, my trappings gay,
And all was health and glee.
My name on honor's book enrolled,
Untarnished stood so fair,
That envy's shafts by malice hurled,
Left not a blemish there.
Oh, Rumseller! listen now to me,
The tale I am about to tell, should bring a blush to thee,

Just when my beard began to grow,
And down to shade my chin,
I married then a blooming maid,
Life's voyage to begin,
The rolling seasons told our joy,
Successive years displayed,
A home where merry voices rang,
Where happy children played.
Oh, Rumseller! how with flattering lies,
The wily serpent's slimy form crept in our paradise.

To ease the pressing cares of life,
I sometimes took a dram,
But hated drunkards, that I did,
As much as any man.
But somehow, I could scarce tell why.
Each year demanded more,
From out my slender, waning purse,
To pay my liquor score.
Oh, Rumseller! with what heartless glee,
My hard earned dimes you fobb'd just then,
And smiled most graciously.

I thought a sixpence now and then,
Could do no harm at all;
A little bitters, too, were good
For men both great and small.
'Tis true, I'd sometimes take too much,
And then would follow shame;
But this, I thought, mere accident,
I scorned a drunkard's name.
Oh, Rumseller! with your weird wand,
You turned the golden fruit of love
To ashes in my hand.

Time pass'd; my health and wealth grew less
Life seemed a troubled dream,
Its joys were omnious, its days
Like wandering spectres seen.
Friends turned aside, my credit failed,
Peace fled and came no more,
Pale want had crossed the threshold now,
The wolf was at the door.
Oh, Rumseller! with your weird wand,
You turned the golden fruit of love,
To ashes in my hand.

My home a cheerless aspect wore,
Its windows stuff'd with rags,
Each door a broken hinge could tell,
As to and fro it drags,
Cold was the hearthstone, colder still,
The love that once was there;
No smiling babes were gathered round,
To laugh away dull care.
Oh, Rumseller! see the wreck you've made,
And tremble that the eye of God
Beholds your cursed trade.

A squalid group was all that told
Of faces once so sweet;
A shriek of terror welcomed me,
Whom once they loved to greet.
My weeping babes, the haggard face
Of her once dearly loved,
With potent power my guilty soul,
To deep repentance moved.
Oh, Rumseller! can it ever be,
That visions of your victims dammed,
Will wring a tear from thee?

I started as if trooping ghosts
Before me quickly passed,
And vowed the pint of rum just drank,
Should ever be the last.
And straight the temperance pledge I signed.
And now what do you see?
Why, sir! I've got as good a home
As on this earth can be.
Oh, Rumseller! blush to look on me,
Your victim once, but now a man,
So farewell rum and thee.

Condition of a Base Ball Club.

The Cleveland Ledger gets off the following good thing on the Forest City nine of that city:

The pitcher for the summer of 1872 has been practising for several weeks outside of the city limits, and, though not feeling well, can now throw a regulation ball with such swiftness that it cannot be seen unless covered with phosphorus; and often the friction occasioned by its passage through the air causes a heat so great as to burn the ball to ashes before it reaches the catcher, who only finds a mass of cinders in his hand. The assistant or reserve pitcher has been practising but a few weeks, but he can throw a ball through eight inches of oak plank now; and if he keeps on, the man on deck will be compelled to encase his stomach in a monitor turrett and other armor, or suffer the consequences.

The catcher has been for three weeks past engaged in breaking up pig iron at the Newburg rolling mills, and to still further toughen his hands he allows the big twenty-ton triphammer to drop on them two hours each day; they are now about the size of a wind-mill, and if a ball gets by him it will be by traversing the atmosphere of an adjoining country. The reader can gamble on this.

The first baseman is trying the diet system steady his nerves, and can let a government mule kick him with both feet all day in the abdomen without winking. He will never move his foot from a base-bag unless in the line of his duty, and a runner for the first base may light on him like a night-hawk on a June bug without making him swerve a hair.

The second baseman has developed himself more especially for miscellaneous and active service. He can stand on his head catch a ball with his feet, reverse his position, and knock a grasshopper off from a mullen stock at eighty rods nine out of ten. There will be no use in a runner trying to dodge him, for he has globe sights on his nose and can plumb a man in the hull or rigging, just as he chooses.

The short stop is probably the best man for this position that can be found this side of the Suez canal. He is short himself, and has lived on piecrust all winter, can turn thirteen summersaults without spitting on his hands, and catch a ball with equal facility in either hand or his teeth.

The third baseman has been making saur kraut and riding a velocipede all winter, to develope the muscles of his lower limbs, which are immense, and give him the appearance of being troubled with elephantiasis. But don't fool yourself; he can run down a giraffe in three minutes, and can bat a ball so far that his opponents never think of chasing them the same day they are hit, but proceed with a new ball.

The three fielders have been frisking about in the country all winter, and drinking angle-worm oil to give suppleness to their limbs. They go all fours faster than many professionals can run, and are so limber that circus men die off like sheep after seeing them perform once.

In fact, we may well be proud of our club for the present year, and if there is any organization in the country that thinks they can compete with them let them draw on us at six months' sight through the United States treasury department (or sooner if they get a sight at us), stating how many dollars' worth of confidence they feel in their favorite new club.

We do not forget our club manager, who is all that a father could be to the boys, and who does much more than his name would indicate to make the season and its matches successful. The scorer for the present year has been selected as the champion whittler of the state. He has purchased a bran new jack knife, two thousand shingles, and will keep his notches on the double entry plan, that is, one entry for the other side and two cuts for his own.

Caught in His own Trap.

A girl, young and pretty, and above all gifted with an air of admirable candor, lately presented hereself before a Parisian lawyer.

Monsier, I have come to consult you on a grave affair. I want you to oblige a man I love to marry me in spite of himself. How shall I proceed?

The gentleman of the bar had, of course a sufficiently elastic conscience. He reflected a moment, and then, being sure that no one over heard him, replied hesitatingly:

Mademoiselle, according to your law, you always possess the means of forcing a man to marry you. You must remain on three occasions alone with him; you can then go before a Judge and swear that he is lover.

And will that suffice, Monsieur?

Yes, Mademoiselle, with one further condition.

Well!

Then, you will produce witnesses who will make oath to having seen you remain a good quarter of and hour with the individual who has trifled with your affections.

Very well, Monsieur, I will retain you as counsel in the government of this affair. Good day.

A few days afterward the young lady returned. She was mysteriously received by the lawyer, who scarcely gave her time to seat herself, and questioned her with the most lively curiosity.

Capital, capital,

Persevere in your designs, Mademoiselle but the next time you come to consult me give me the name of the young man you are going to make so happy in spite of himself.

A fortnight afterward, the young lady knocked at the door of the counsel's room No sooner was she in than she flung herself into a chair, saying that the walk had made her breathless.

Her counsel tried to reassure her, made her inhale salts, and even propose to unloose her garments.

It is useless, Monsiour, she said, I am much better.

Well, now, tell me the name of the fortunate mortal.

Well, then, the fortunate mortal, be it known to you, is yourself, said the young beauty bursting into a laugh. I love you I have been here three times tete-a-tete with you, and my four witnesses are below, ready and willing to accompany me to a magistrate, gravely continued the narrator.

The lawyer thus caught had the good sense not to get angry. The most singular fact of all is that he adores his young wife, who makes him an excellent housekeeper.

* * *

Somebody whistled. Teacher cal's up a big boy on suspicion. Big boy comes up, and holds out his hand sullen and savage. Noble, little boy comes manfully forward and says, I'm the boy that whistled, sir, at the same time extending his hand. Teacher simmers down, and lets them both off. (Mem.—Noble little boy, thought teacher would'nt thrash him if he told told the truth, but he knew big boy would if he did'nt).

* * *

At one time Ballantine had a difficult case to plead, and a verdict was given against his client. One of the witnesses come to him and said—

Mr. Ballantine, if I had thought that we should have lost the case, I might have testified a great deal more than I once did.

It's of no consequence, replied the lawyer; the jury did not believe a word you did say.

* * *

A negro, passing along the street, was astonished to hear a voice call out,

How dy'e do, Massa Mungo? How dy'e do, Snowball? and on looking observed that it proceeded from a parrot in a splendid gilt cage.

Ah, Massa Parrot, said the darkey, you great man here—you lib in a gold house now; but me know your fader very well; he lib in de bush.

* * *

An old sailor, when asked how he felt during a severe gale which he encountered at sea, and during which the ship was in great peril, replied, in all sincerity and simplicity—

Why, I thought, what will the poor fellows on shore do now?

The Poor Customer.

How much butter?—One-half pound if you please.

And sugar?—Half a pound, sir.

You go by the halves, to-day. Well, what else? Be speedy, ma'am, you are keeping better customers waiting.

Half a peck of Indian meal and one French roll, said the woman; but her lip quivered, and she turned to wipe away a trickling tear.

I looked at her straw bonnet, all broken—at her faded shawl, her thin, stoop form, her coarse garments, and I read 'poverty' on all—extreme poverty. And the palid pinching features—the mournful but once beautiful face—told me that the luxuries were not for her.

An invalid looked out from his narrow window, whose pale face longed for the fresh orages, for whose comfort the delicacies were brought with much sacrifice. And I saw him sip the tea, and taste the dainty bread, and praise the flavor of the sweet butter, and turn with brightening eyes to the golden fruit. And I heard him ask her kneeling at the smoking hearth, to tast them with him.—And as she set her broken pan on the edge to bake her course loaf, I heard her say, By and by, when I am hungry.

And by and by, when the eyes of the sufferer were closed in sleep, I saw her bent over him, with a blessing in her heart. And she laid the remnant of the feast carefully by and ate her bread unmoistened.

I started from my reverie. The grocer's hard eye was upon me. You are keeping better customers waiting.

Oh, how I longed to tell him how poverty and persecution, contempt and scorn could not dim the heart's fine gold purified by many a trial; and that woman, with her little wants and holy sacrifices, was better in the sight of God than many a trumpet-tongued Dives, who gave that he might be known to men.

A Diamond in a Shaving Brush.

The following story is vouched for as entirely correct in every particular, and will be found interesting by dealers in shaving brushes and parties who ever use them:

About eighteen years ago, two gentlemen of this city—well known in mercantile circles—purchased two shaving brushes from the drug house of Plumb & Leitner. The brushes were of the ordinary kind, and cost, we suppose, about fifty cents each. The brushes we kept at the barber shops and at the homes of the purchasers until about two years ago, when they seemed wore out, and were used by the children as playthings. One of the brushes was lost, but a few days ago a singular discovery was made in relation to the other; while a little boy was playing with it the top became unscrewed, and in the hollow handle a valuable diamond was discovered set in the wood and carefully covered with pink cotton. The exact value of the stone is not known, but it is of pure water and good size.

They are many conjectures as to how the gem came to be in the handle of the brush, the most plausible of which is that it was placed there by smugglers. Before the war, some importers of precious stones who wished to evade the heavy import duty on such articles, placed them in shaving brushes, and in this way brought them under the nose of the Custom House officers without creating the suspicions of the latter. Afterwards, the enterprising jeweler forgot to remove some of the jewels, and the brushes went into the hands of the druggists. It is highly probable that there will be a thorough examination of shaving brushes during the next twenty four hours.—Ex.

THE ATTIC LODGER.

The tailor lived on the second floor, and did his best to make a living for his wife and four children.

Down stairs the small tobacconist lived in a state of perpetual anxiety about the tailor's rent, which he generally gave up piecemeal and with groans, as people give up their teeth, not because he did not wish to pay all his bills, but because of a shortness of funds common to many people.

Up in the attic lived the single lodger, of whom no one knew anything. His name was Smith; but what did that tell, when it was so common a name? He was lean and had hollow cheeks and anxious eyes What his business was, or if he had any, no one knew. Perhaps he wore linen, only no sign of it was perceptible We may also hope that he wore stockings. The poor apothecary of Romeo and Juliet put the tobacconist in mind of his attic lodger when, having been presented with tickets by a theatrical lodger, he went to spend the evening with Shakspeare.

"He ain't like in his face, though," said Mrs. Tobacconist; "his clothes fits too good, Mr. Smith's that's all.

It was an acute remark. Mr. Smith's clothes did fit "too good," inasmuch as they were a few sizes too small for him. As for business, he seemed to have none. At noon he went out for a loaf of bread and a pitcher of beer. After twelve o'clock he disappeared until midnight, when he let himself in with a latch-key and went to bed without a candle.

"And for all he told any one about himself," said the tobacconist's wife, "he might have been a ghost."

"But he's civil spoken," said the tailor's wife, to whom he always said, "Excuse me, ma'am," when he found her aflop on the staircase, in a puddle of soap and water, which always made the black boards blacker than before, and was obliged to wade through the flood with bread and beer. And the tailor's wife, who had lived at service in her youth, even ventured to hint to her husband that she thought Mr. Smith was a gentleman. However, this fancy the tailor crushed with a terse, "Gentlemen don't wear no such coats as that, Sally."

Poor little tailor! he sat cross-legged on his board and stitched and measured men by their coats. If he had measured or even mended more coats, it would have been better for him and his brood. Times seemed to grow worse, custom less, the money harder to get. When the little man reads in his morning's paper of men who had shot themselves, or taken laudanum, he wondered whether they had four children with hearty appetites, and a prospect of having nothing for them to eat some day. Not that he had any idea of killing himself; besides, he had been told by his clergyman that suicide was wicked; but he couldn't help thinking. And that civil lodger in the attic, how did he fare? One night when Sally, who had been mending and washing and ironing the family rags and patches all day, was economically using up the fire by baking a loaf of bread in the stove oven, she heard the lodger come in. He went up stairs and paced the floor. He came out into the entry and creaked on the stairs He seemed as restless as a caged tiger, and he had behaved just so for three nights, instead of retiring at once, as the tailor's family knew he generally did by the creaking and snapping of his bedstead.

"What can ail him?" said Sally, as she took her bread out of the oven and poked it with a straw, finding it done. "What can ail him? I hope he ain't sick nor nothing; he's so civil, poor dear."

Then Sally listened again.

"I declare, he's coming down," she said. "He must be sick: and there he is a knocking—law!"

Then she opened the door.

The lid of the stove was off, and the red light flashed upon a hungry face with hollow cheeks and sunken eyes. It almost frightened the tailor's wife.

The gaunt hand stretched itself out and a voice said faintly:

"Madam, I know you have a kind heart. I am so hungry. It's three days since I ate anything, and—I don't want to die."

"Law! I should think not," said the woman. Why, law me, I'm so sorry! And I suppose you can't get a job? Law! why, do take it. I ain't got nothing else. You see, we're pretty poor ourselves—and—there o law!"

She was trembling, she did not know why. She was thinking to herself.

"It's like a play. It makes me want to cry."

There he stood, the warm bread she had given him in his hands, tearing bits from it and eating it.

He backed away, still eating. He came back and stretched his hands toward her.

"I didn't say thank you," he said. "Thank you! thank you!" and went away.

Sally sat down, trembling still.

To be out of a job, to be hungry, were no rare things, and no tragic things in her experience, but this man had stirred her soul, somehow—frightened her, she said.

"I hadn't any business to give away a loaf of bread," said Sally, "I ought to have cut some: but there now, I couldn't help it."

Then Sally went to bed, and slept and dreamed of the hollow-cheeked, famished lodger of the attic.

There was more bread to make next day, and I am not sure but that the tailor's wife made an extra loaf, in expectation of another call from her neighbor; but he did not come, and in the course of time Sally had enough to think of without leaving her own floor. Matters did not prosper with the family. Little Lena had the scarlet fever, and lay for a long time at death's door, and the work with which the mother helped to fill the family purse was necessarily neglected, and her customers grew angry and left her. Then the baby died. Poor little baby. The mother wept bitterly. The father also longed to weep, although children were expensive luxuries in that poor household. Finally the last affliction fell upon the tailor—a felon on his right thumb.

There was an end to it all, it seemed to both. Nothing but the hospital and the alms-house lay before them. The rent was quite unpaid at last, and the tobacconist was in a fury. He called to give them warning and a piece of his mind. On the morrow, out they should go, neck and crop. The tailor said nothing. The wife, woman-like, had her word:

"Where shall we go?" she asked. "We haven't a penny in the world."

"It's nothing to me where you go," said the landlord, "so that you get out of my rooms. I want them for honester people"

"We're unfortunate, but we never mean to be dishonest," cried the wife.

Then her husband, in an angry word, bade her hold her tongue.

It's all the same," he said. "We'll go to-morrow. And now you go, Mr. Landlord."

Then they were left alone bemoaning their hard fate. There was absolutely nothing to eat in the house.

Sally looked at her empty flour barrel and at her wretched family, and burst into tears.

"It's no use trying any longer," she said. "If the Lord would only take us. That's all I ask."

She put the children to bed, and sat down upon a chair, drawn by force of habit to the hearth of her empty stove. Her husband, between pain and anxiety, was less a sane than a madman. He paced the floor like a tiger, talking to himself. The bit of tallow candle burnt low; the bitter wind rattled the casement; the rain beat against it.

"We shall be out in all that tomorrow," said the man. "We'll have no place to hide our heads. We've not got a friend in the world."

"We've got one friend, I hope," said the wife.

"Who is he?" asked the tailor.

"God," said the woman. "May be he'll find a way to help us. We haven't been very bad, Sam."

"Better than us have starved before now," said the tailor. "We haven't any particular right to expect miracles, that I know of. Hark! what's that?"

"A knock," said his wife, and trembling lest her landlord should have returned, opened the door. Without stood the tall, gaunt figure of the lodger in the attic.

"He's come for bread," thought the woman, and amidst her own trouble she grieved over the thought of refusing his appeal.

He made none, however.

This is what he said:

"Madam, a while ago I took the liberty of asking you for bread. Allow me to return a loaf, with thanks."

So he vanished. A whole, fresh loaf lay in the woman's hands. She carried it in.

"There is more than I expected tonight," she said. "You see, God is good."

She lifted slide of the candlestick a little. The light flared up.

"Shall I break it now or wait until morning?" she asked.

"Now, mother," cried a child's voice from the bed. "I'm hungry."

Sally broke the loaf in two. It parted with singular ease. She gave a little cry. It had evidently been cut before and joined together, and from the heart a handful of crumbs had been scooped, and in it lay a little white packet.

"It's fairy bread," cried Sally, remembering some old country legend.

"Look at it before the light goes," cried the tailor.

Sally obeyed. She opened the packet and found within two envelopes. In one was this note:

"MADAM:—Your loaf of bread saved my life. I know you are in trouble, and yesterday my luck turned. To-day I am worth fifty thousand dollars, having won a lawsuit that has been pending for years. Please accept the inclosure, and believe me your ever obliged, ATTIC LODGER."

There was a five hundred dollar note in the other envelope, and when she saw it, Sally thought herself the happiest woman in Christendom.

The gift was the saving of the family. Sally had cast her bread upon the waters to find it again in very truth. And when the tailor's hand was well again, there was a patron for him who dressed in such a manner that Sam no longer doubted him a gentleman. The attic lodger wears the finest broadcloth now, and the tobacconist bows low as he meets him on his way out, or sells him choice Havanas over the counter. He stops at the door in his carriage, and lodges in attics no longer; but he never has forgotten, nor seems likely to forget, the loaf of bread given him by the poor tailor's wife when he was starving.

General Thomas, of Pennsylvania, who fought gallantly in the rebellion, and who helped to build up the Republican party, declared in a speech in Philadelphia the other day that he was free to say that the Republican party was the most corrupt organization on the face of the earth. Such testimony should convince any honest minded Republican that a "change of head" in the Federal administration is necessary for the future prosperity and welfare of the country.

An Important Decision.

An important decision was rendered in the Superior Court, at Indianapolis, on monday, in the State of Indiana against Thomas B. McCarty, former State Auditor. The suit was instituted by the Attorney General, Hon. B. W. Hanna, to recover interest on state monies deposited in various banks by McCarty. The court holds the Auditor liable for the interest, and that all state officers who have received interest on public monies are liable to the state for the amount. The same reasoning applies to county, city and township officers. The decision is thoroughly in accord with public sentiment on the subject.

The Chicago Times, answering the Republican economy dodge, about which they make such a great ado, compares the fiscal year of Lincoln's administration, ending June 30th, '64, with the fiscal year of Grant's administration, ending June 30th, 1871. The expenditure of the government under Lincoln's administration on account of the civil service were, $27,510,000; on account of Indians, $2,540.000; total, $30,059,000. And during Grant's administration, the corresponding expenditures were, civil service, $60,481,000; Indians, $7,426,000; total, $67,907,000 The difference in favor of Lincoln's administration, as compared with Grant's is only $37,848,000 on these two accounts in a single year. Republican papers are requested to make a note of these items.

Dana's Defense of Himself.

Charles A. Dana, who has returned from Washing, says: "We have felt it to be our duty to advise the public as to the manner in which their money was being paid out in open violation of the law by Mr. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy. We had no personal acquaintance with Mr. R[illegible] possibly have any ill-will toward him. We were perfectly convinced that he was paying out the people's money in a manner which was as illegal as it would be to steal and put his pocket. We said we took the responsibility. A committee of investigation was appointed by Congress to look into the matter We were invited to appear before the Committee with counsel to establish irregularites in the Navy Department; we appeared and established them; we proved that Robeson had brazenly disregarded as plain a law as ever was enacted, and that he had been paying out money as freely as if it were water on claims which had been settled previously. One single item, which he had fraudulently paid, amounting to over $60,000. We do not wish to do Mr. Robeson any justice. He is a fat, jolly story teller; he is only a faithless public officer—that is all. We will not apply terms of undue severity to him. We will only say there was a day when taking $93,000 at a time out of the Treasury in violation of law would have been considered dishonest. We think that even now it will be considered to be irreglar.

FACTS FOR THE PEOPLE.

That the Republican party works with an eye so the fostering of great monopolies, may be inferred from its desire to retain the duty on coal, iron, etc., and admit tea and coffee free.—As an evidence of the workings of this policy, so far as it effects the public revenue and brings money to the government coffers, we may observe that the duty on salt—85 per cent. in sack, and 139 per cent. in bulk is virtually prohibitory, the revenue it yielded last year being but $1,176,837. Coal is $1.35 a ton. This gave the treasury only $538,135. On pig iron Congress keeps a duty of $7 a ton, from which the government only gets the comparatively small sum of $1,154,126 by way of revenue. The manufactures of all these articles pocket twenty times this amount in the way of profits. But the entire repeal of these duties would cost the treasury $3,000,000 of revenue, while duties on tea and coffee brings the government $19,000,000 a year. It will thus be seen that some sixty or more million dollars could be taken from the pockets of these monopolists and practically distributed among the people at an expense of only $3,000,000 to the government, as easily as the price of tea and coffee could be reduced by taking $19,000,000 of revenue collected on those articles and giving it to the people at a cost of exactly $19,000,000 to the government. The one case is like "robing Peter to pay Paul" but the other is something like stealing a creditor's pocket-book and taking money therefrom to pay the debt you owe him.

Pen Portrait of Gen. Grant.

Theodore Tilton, of the Golden Age furnishes the following pen portrait of Gen. Grant, which will be readily recognized by all who have watched his public career:

"The worst thing about Gen. Grant is not his chronic stupidity and political insagacity, which unfit him for any civil position requiring political knowledge and insight. It is not the appointment of his half imbecile and half-knavish relatives to officers which they disgrace. It is not his connivance at corruption, his patronage of thieves, his constant advertising for a policy and never adhereing to a policy when it is adopted, his vulgar taste and low associates. All these things, bad as they are, are trivial in comparison with his fearful usurpation of executive power and patronage. If he can carry a convention by means of cash now, what is to hinder his carrying the country by cannon four years hence? The principle is the same the means are of no accout: It is the principle that we protest against is full of perils. And if the Republican party had not lost the vigor of its early virtue, it would throw the usurper from its shoulders in scorn, and sweep his creatures from its councils as so much offal."

Re-elect Grant to the Presidency and Gen. Blair's prediction will become verified.

And "it has transpired" that there is no truth in the report. Senator Schurz is not only not a defaulter, but the Government is largely indebted to him. They never said anything about Grant's defalcation during the Mexican War. Why?—Val. mes

What we Owe to Columbus

Shall we celebrate Columbus? Mr. Warner, whose graceful pen and playful humor have won a host of friends, thinks it an open question, and one we had better not be in a hurry to answer He thinks that, on the whole, Christopher's coming over here was a two sided arrangement, one of which is apt to be overlooked. The Indians never thanked him, for one party. The Africans had small grounds to be gratified for the market he opened for them. Here are two continents that had no use for him. He led Spain into a dance of great expectations, which ended in her gorgeous ruin. He introduced tobacco into Europe, and it laid the foundation for more tracts and nervous diseases than the Romans had in a thousand years. He introduced the potato into Ireland directly, and that caused such a rapid increase of population, that the great famine was the result, and an enormous emigration to New York; hence Tweed and the constituency of the ring. Columbus is really responsible for New York. He is responsible for our whole tremendous experiment of democracy, open to all comers, the best three in five to win. We can not yet tell how it is coming out, what with the foreigners and the communists and the women, but if it should come out well, Christopher may have a monument as high as that in Washington expects to be and it may be well to fire a gun now and then, just to keep the mariner in mind of it.

Those Arms.

The House committee on the sales of arms whitewash Secretary Belknap in the most approved fashion. They find that the act of July 20, 1872, gave the Secretary full authority to make his sales, though the act says unsuitable arms then in store might be sold; and the Secretary not only disposed of arms which the French found perfectly fitted for active service, but even manufactured ammunition to go with the guns. In is also reported that no "sales were made to any known agents of the belligerents;" but while such sales may not have been made Secretary Belknap himself testified that after it was known that the Remingtons were French agents thousands of arms previously sold were delivered. Further say the committee, "No official of the United States government was pecuniarly benefitted in connection with these sales"—but where did the difference between the gold paid by France and the paper received at the Federal Treasury go? Fifthly, the committee find "that the only party benefitted was the government of the United States, in having disposed of unsuitable arms at the highest market price, to the amount of nearly millions ofrdollars." This is a poor way to sneak out of the sales by arguing that as the guns were unsuitable they could not have hurt the Germans, and yet the United States by cheating the French are some $10,000,000 better off.—N. Y. World.

Two persons were born at the same place, at the same moment of time. After an age of fifty years, they both died, also at the same place and at the same instant, yet one had lived one hundred days more than the other. How was this possible? Not to keep our friends in suspense, the solution turns on a curious, but with a little reflection, a very obvious point in circumnavigation. A person going around the world toward the west loses a day, and toward the east he gains one. Supposing, then, two persons born together at the Cape of Good Hope, whence a voyage around the world may be performed in a year; if one performs this constantly toward the west, in fifty years he will be fifty days behind the stationary inhabitants, and if the other sail equally toward the east, he will be fifty days in advance of them. One, therefore, will have seen one hundred days more than the other, though they were born and died in the same place and at the same time, and even continually lived in the same latitude and reckoned time by the same calendar.

A gentleman engaged in raising fruit a few miles west of this city, informs us that the prospect for a good crop is excellent. Even the peaches which were pronounced dead some weeks since, are coming out finally. If no calamity befalls it between now and the ripening season, the fruit crop in central Indiana will be the best known for years. This is the case with small fruits as well as apples, peaches and pears.—Ind. Com.

The phrase commonly used in calling dogs has induced the Japanese to believe that "come here" is the English name for that animal.

The French Arms Scandal.

The following facts have been shown and proven in the French arms' investigation:

First—It has been shown that both Belknap and Dyer knew Remington to be the accredited agent of the French government on the 13th of October, 1870, and on that day arms were sold the latter which were not delivered until the 30th of November, or over one month thereafter.

Second—That after Remington's connections had been established beyond all question, he bought from the war department through various houses in New York, and whose purchases were well known by the war department to be for Remington's benefit, large quantities of the most valuable quality of ordinance stores, which stores were sold in violation of the act of Congress of 1868.

Third—That all of these munitions of war were delivered by government lighters directly to French steamers, and in many cases heisted directly on board the latter from the former, whence they passed directly into the custody of French officers. In all the ordinances the boxes were marked with the initials R. F. while on board these government lighters, meaning the French republic.

Fifth—That in this same connection 10,000 new army rifles were sold from the Arsenal to agents of Remington, and that the same number were subsequently manufactured by these works to replace them.

EARTHQUAKE.

The particulars of the late earthquake in Syria are now coming to hand The fataltics are great, especially at Antioch; but heavier in the vicinity of the city. A letter from Antioch, dated April 4, says the American Protestant Church was severely injured. Four of the American community were killed. All the members of the families of the missionaries are all safe.

The persons killed in Antioch are less than three hundred, but is known that sixteen hundred in the surrounding towns and country, where shocks were as severe, if not greater, than here, were killed. This number may be increased. The distress of the people will be only temporary, as the crop prospects are good. The supply of provisions on hand is moderate. The correspondents of the London papers praise Rev. Wm. Powers, the American Missionary, for his assiduity in ministering to the relief of the sufferers.

A Grand yet Terrible Sight.

NAPLES, April 29.—The view of Vesuvius from this city now is the grandest sight that has been witnessed since 1631. Many persons have taken advantage of the panic among the people in the towns threatened by destruction to take whatever goods they could find.

The Government has been compelled to order troops to those places to prevent the stealing of abandoned property in the city.

The bourse is closed and business almost entirely suspended.

The people use umbrellas to protect them from falling ashes. Rain is badly wanted else the crops will be destroyed. The worst is now belived to be over and the anxiety of the people considerably lessened.

A dispatch from Bayonne reports communication by rail and telegraph between that city and Madrid to have been re-established.

A FIELD FOR LITIGATION.

The recent earthquake in California, by moving a whole valley fourteen feet and leaving it there, has puzzled the worthy people greatly about the metes and bounds of their several farms; and the prospect now is that the confusion will result in a number of chancery suits which will last until another earthquake shall set the valley back in its proper place.

Peach Crop.

After all the long faces and bad news about the peaches being killed, it ain't so. There are peach buds yet alive all over central and southern Indiana. In some places, in low situations, the buds are, perhaps all killed, but as far as we can learn the prospect for a good crop is better than last year In our immediate neighborhood there are at this time, March 9th, ten buds alive where there was one this time last year.—Northwestern Farmer.

USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP

A very strong wind blew most all day last Tuesday.

AUBURN is not troubled with law suits before Justices.

A FINE rain fell here last Saturday, doing vegetation much good.

THERE is some talk of organizing a dancing club, at this place.

A stranger remarked the other day that ours was the wost looking County Jail in the State.

Wood & Williams have received a large stock of Queensware which they are selling cheap.

CALL at the COURIER office and get your letter heads, bill heads, cards, etc., printed.

THE new brick block is now under full headway. The stone masons commenced their work last Monday.

THE name of Dolly Varden is now attached to almost every business. It is almost as popular as "shoo Fly."

DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP WILL CURE COUGH.

Go to Wood & Williams' and get a new hat. They have an endless variety of the latest styles.

How about the New York and Chicago Air Line. We notice that Bryan is being agitated with the same project.

THE Record, a new paper started at Ada, Ohio, has been received. It is neat and spicy, and ought to be well sustained.

THAT mysterious affair, what we mentioned in our last is fully explained under the head of marriages.

Davenport & Co., have their fine soda fountain in operation and cooling draught can now be obtained cheap.

Messrs. Rush & Hall, have purchased a large stock of furniture, at Jackson, and will open out in a few days on North Main street.

ONE of our best looking and most highly respected young ladies eloped one day last week. Why or how it was done we are unable to say.

FOREPAUGH'S Aggegation is taking a swing around the circle, this week. He was at Fort Wayne last Monday with every thing he advertises. He won't pause at Auburn just now.

A GREAT many customers have found out that Wood & Williams have the largest and best selected stock of dry goods in Auburn, and that they sell them for ready pay and small profits.

WE notice some of our cross streets, not much used, look like a plowed field, showing concusively that that delectable nuisance, the hog, has been around. When will this freedom of porkers be curtailed?

THE office of Town Marshal is an important one, and there are none, perhaps, that can fill it to the satisfaction of everybody. Let us have a majority suited, however, by the election of a good one this year.

OUR friend, Mike Long, Jr., wore the first linen coat, we have seen this season, last Tuesday—we don't mean that it was the first time the coat was wore—No!—because there's no use lying about it.

No business house should be without nicely printed letter heads, bill heads, &c. Letter heads do not cost much more than the paper, as purchased by the merchant, and it is an index abroad of enterprise and business.

WE noticed the wheat in particular on last Sabbath, and we did not see a field, between Auburn and Kendallville, but what indicated a large yield. Now, farmers stop growling, the wheat is all "hunky."

ANYBODY that wants a good drink of soda water should rush for Davenport & Co's drug store. Frank knows how to make it, and having one of the best and neatest fountains in town is good evidence of a first-class article.

BRICKMAKING has commenced, the two yards south of town are running a full force of hands. It will require all the brick they can make during the year to supply all the demands here at home.—Build with brick, it is the cheapest in the end.

A WELL informed contraband asserts that LaGrange gets the Canada Southern Railroad. We were premature in announcing that it had been located at Kendallville. We regard the above news as reliable—as reliable, at least, as can be obtained from that part of the State, as they are all about of the same stripe.

WE are in receipt of the Fort Wayne Free Press, a new Democratic paper, by T. J. Foster, who was recently burnt out at Monroeville. The new paper is as neatly printed as any other in the city, and in consideration of the bad luck, Mr. F. has met with lately, he ought to make a ten strike in his new enterprise.

AT the sale of the first months dues of the Building Loan Association, last Thursday night, the money sold at 41 per cent. premium. This is a favorable commencement and we may confidently look for good results in the future. There are a few shares not paid in yet that should be attended to at once.

SMITH & HARE have put a soda fountain in their establishment, and are now ready to supply all demands. They also intend fitting up a handsome ice cream saloon up stairs in the front room, an excellent location for an institution of this kind. The arrangement is a good one and we believe it will be properly appreciated by the public.

AT the late monthly meeting of the Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad it was decided to increase the semi-annual dividend from four to five per cent The city of Baltimore has $3,250,000 invested in the stock of this company, for which it issued its own stock bearing interest at six per cent. per annum, making a certain profit in return of $130,000 per annum on its investment.

A COMMUNICATION appears in another column relative to Town Boards. We do not know much about the Town Board of 1869, but if they had'nt more ability than the present one, we say "Lord, have mercy on their souls." However, a bad board in '69 does not justify a poor one in '72, but the object should be to elect the best men of both parties, that will legislate on the great Democratic principle of the greatest good to the greatest number.

IT has been said by Lord Chesterfield, that if there was one article of gentlemen's apparel more desirable than another it was a nice shirt. In order to keep fully up with this requirement, you should go to Moderwell & Fowler's at Fort Wayne, and get them to make you several of their nice fitting shirts. They manufacture to order, and you have the gratification of knowing that they fit you exactly. Corner of Main and Calhoun.

THE Defiance Democrat says the B. & O. Extension, corps of engineers from the east made this vicinity last week—running an air-line (which is understood to be the construction line.) from Fostoria to Heister's farm, about four miles east of Defiance. As the crossing, of the stream at Defiance may be selected, from Heister's the line westward will diverge from an air-line either north or south. The D. & M. line is crossed about a mile north of Alma Station, and most of the road is through the woods.

The corps westward have now passed Auburn, and are now at work near Albion.

Mass Convention.

A Convention of all classes of both Republicans and Democrats, the laborer and the merchant, the professional and the mechanic, without regard to party affilations—the honest enterprising citizens of Auburn, and everybody in favor of selecting the very best men for our town offices are requested to be present, at the Court House this Thursday evening, to put in nomination a ticket composed of both parties, that will if elected, be identified with the progress and improvement of our place. This call is not made by democrats but by our citizens generally, of both sides, and it hoped there will be a large attendance.

DISGRACEFUL.—We have noticed several cows and hogs in the Court Yard, all doing as much injury as could be expected under the circumstances. Several trees have been broken down, the grass has been turned up by porkers, and the whole yard is beginning to look shabby. Whose duty is it to attend to this matter? We call upon them to show a little activity in this matter immediately. This yard is not a common lot for cattle and hogs, but what is more agreeable, the making of a beautiful grove some day, if properly taken care of, as it should be. With trifling expense the necessary protection against town nuisances can be secured, and it should be attended to witout delay.

OUR accomplish friend Mr. Nash, local of the Pharos, at Logansport gave our place a brief visit last week. He has the following to say of our efficient Recorder, every word of which is true:

"We had occasion, in Auburn, last week to visit the Recorder's office, and were pleased to meet Mr. D. Z. Hoffman. He is a gentlymanly, efficient and obliging officer, and promptly gave the information we wanted. He keeps the County Records in good style and takes pains to treat all who have business in his office with uniform courtesy. The citizens of DeKalb County have been fortunate in their selections of public servants.

IMPORTANT TO WITNESSES.—Witnesses are entitled to $1 50 per day for each day of attendance at the Circuit and Court of Common Please, and five cents for each mile necessarily traveled in going to and from court. But to entitle them to these fees they must, first, have been subpoenaed—a voluntary attendance is not sufficient; second, they must personally claim the fees of the clerk; third, they must claim them at or during term for which they are supboenaed, and on which they attend. A claim made after the final adjournment of court is not good.

Witnesses in Justices' Courts are allowed 75 cents per day, to be claimed on the day of trial before the jugment docket is signed. Mileage the same as in Circuit Court.

THE dance on last Thursday evening, proved to be a nice affair, and as far as we have been informed, we think it was one of the best arranged dances ever given at this place. One poor fellow has our heartfelt sympathies, however,—we mean the one that could'nt get his girl because they kept such a big dog. It would make any dorg bark to see a fellow on the back fence.

BUY YOU A HOME.—Every man should buy himself a town lot, get that paid for and then work to make the necessary improvements. A little here and a little there will in due time produce a home of your own, and place you out of the landlord's grasp. Remember that one hundred dollars a year saved in rent will, in a few years pay for your home, and the money it cost you to move and shift about, without any loss of furniture and time, pay the interest on a five hundred dollar judgment against your property until you can gradually reduce it to nothing. You can all buy that way—why do you not risk it? If you fail, you are no worse off—it you succeed as any careful man is sure to do, you have made a home and established a basis equal to many another's which will start you in business.

WE have conversed with quite a number of old soldiers, privates and officers, who express great contempt for the new Homestead act. They demand a warrant for 160 acres of land and nothing more nor less. We presented the argument of the Radicals about them becoming worthless, and not a single one but what scouted the idea, and refered to the fact that railroads were making millions out of their grants. If the Republican party is the real friend of the soldier it will accede to their demands instead of fooling away millions of acres to these railroad corporations. Not one soldier out of a hundred will take advantage of the privileges already made, because it would pay him better to stay where he is. This sham legislation for the soldier by the party that has professed such great love for the country's defenders, is too thin.—They have had the power, and done nothing.

MR. EDITOR.—As several persons have been denouncing the acts of our present town board as "unlawful" and "outrageous," and would fain have the people of Auburn believe that themselves are paragons and working for the best interest of their town without personal or mercenary motives, and as their side, as they say, has been fully heard, we respectively ask a patient hearing for the other and then let the people decide.

That the present town board has its faults we do not deny, but that it has as charged by "D." violated the law, we do most emphatically deny.

As to the ability financially of the present board we think it will bear a favorable comparison with the Democratic Board whose term of office expired May 3d, 1869 We will present the figures and let the reader decide.

The whole amount of taxes received by the Treasurer for the year ending May 3d, 1869, as shown by his report, which is spread on the records of the town, on pages 3, 5, 6 and 7, that very wise and patriotic board paid to different persons working for, and in the interests of the Ft. W. J. & S. R. R. the sum of $403.15, and for office rent, legal services and salaries for town offices $108.50, leaving the enormous sum of $60 06, with which to make street crossings, culberts and other public improvements in the town of Auburn, the county seat of a county of 17,000 inhabitants. And yet "D." is not happy because this lease of power has not been perpetuated.

The present board has expended between six and seven hundred dollars in making improvements in the town, while the board of '69 expended four sevenths of that amount in making improvements out side of the town, and one half of the balance for their salaries, and still "D." is not happy because the dose has not been repeated. That the appropriation to the Ft. W., J. & S. R. R., was unlawful and usurpation of power, as "D." would call it no one will doubt, and in all kindness we will refer the reader to I. G. & H. P. 625, Sec. 24, defining how, for what purpose, the survey of the town be pain. We know "D." will be unhappy when he reads it.

The rate of assessment on the $100 valuation was the same in both cases. The Democratic Board had $60.06 to expend in public imsrovements, inside of the town while the present board has between six and seven hundred and still "D" prattles about a "depleted treasury.

In conclusion I think "D." is one of those political sharks who is continually crying "fraud," "corruption," &c., in order to cover up his own nefarious designs, and as he is spokesman for the Democratic party I advise him to have men nominated who in case of election can take the requisite oath. I simply make this suggestion for the reason that in looking over the town record I see that some Democrats did not take the oath, Of course they would, had they thought of it, but as the law requires that it shall be taken by all town officers, I thought I would kindly jog their memory so as to keep them from "unlawful" acts. See town record p. 258, all these things have been done under Democratic rull, and "D." says not a word.

What is the inference? Simply this, that he is opposed to everything that is Republican, and why don't he come out "like a little man" and say so? If a Democratic Board is put in, "D." will probably want the town to build the railroads, now in contemplation, or possibly a school house, in Waterloo.

If any reader of the COURIER for a moment doubts the figures as given above, the gentlemanly and accomplished town Clerk, R. Elson, will furnish the record which contains them, at his office anytime.

J. A. C.

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance, The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

TOWN ELECTION.—Our town election will take place next Monday. We hope for the good of the place that it will result in the election of good men to office. The Republicans will get up a ticket and whether composed of good men or not will do their best to elect them. They done this last year, and our people generally have been disgusted with the action of most of the officers since. There are some good Republicans who would make good officers, and we would have no hesitancy in voting for them. There are also good Democrats that would make equally as efficient officers, but it has been asserted that the Republican party will vote their ticket straight, whether there are good men on it or not. We believe that political lines ought to be disregarded in officers where there is no party principles involved, and all unite in the great principle of securing the greatest good to the greatest number. We are a small town, and by a united effort upon the part of our citizens, we can materially advance our interets. The building of new houses and making other improvements is not done by one party alone, than why cannot public improvements be made in the same way. If the Republicans put a ticket in nomination, so will the Democrats, and thus will some good men be elected with perhaps a liberal sprinkling of others not so good. We shall vote for the best men. Had the present Town Board been Democratic we would haye felt it our duty to shown them up without stint, but as it was not, we have endeavored to deal kindly with it because its want of a paper published in its interest. It has fallen far short of what it was elected for and we do hope, for the good of Auburn, tor the good of the little enterprise that is being developed to-day, for the good of our citizens generally that the next Board will possess enough sagacity to advance the interests of our town.

I. O. O. F. DEDICATION.—A large number of Odd Fellows, from this place, went to Freemont last Tuesday, by special train to attend the imposing ceremonies of dedicating the new Odd Fellows' Hall at that place. Owing to sickness in our family we were prevented from attending, but learn that it was an interesting occassion for all concerned. We believe it would not be out of place to say here that Auburn has one of the best working orders in the State, comparatively, as they are identified with every movement occuring in this vicinity. Dedications, festivals, etc., gotten up abroad for the good of the order, generally finds a good representation from Auburn. And as to enterprise they stand preeminent. They are now at work upon a new building which, when finished, will not be excelled in this part of the State. While they claim nothing in their own name, they should receive their due meed of praise from the public.

CHRIST BAKER is making large additions to his bakery. The main building is being moved east some little distance, and brick additions are now going up in the rear, which are safe from fire and much more permanent. In fact all our business houses, hereafter to be constructed on our principal streets, should be brick or stone. There should be fire limits established, and the safety of the town consulted.

HEAD LIGHT OIL.—Davenport & Co. have on hand the celebrated oil used for the head light on Locomotives which we pronounce much superior to the common kerosene. It costs more per gallon, but will last twice as long as the same quantity of coal oil. Another great advantage is in the fact, that it is about as non-explosive as lard oil, and consequently more safe.—Try a gallon and be convinced.

THE foundation for the new brick church of the Baptists, is completed.

Nice day for loafers.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place No. 5 Keystone Block Ft. Wayne.

Good News to Farmers.

The prospect for advanced prices in wool, this season, is very fair. The clip is reported short in Europe and the supply exhausted by the manufacturers. We clip the following from a reliable exchange The facts and figures therein contained may be of some value to wool growers in this vicinity:

"Last year's clip is reported to be entirely absorbed by the market. The Australian product has been exhausted by the European manufacturers, and it is held at prices which preclude its re-shipment to America. The heavy eastern mills have already effected large purchases in Mich. and Ohio, of the wool now upon the sheep's back, at rates from 65 to 70 cents. Some of the Ohio wool growers have taken the alarm, and are holding off for $1 per lb. for choice clips. This is more than can be realized, for the reason that the price of goods cannot be brought up so as to justify manufacture at such rates for the raw material. It is not improbable that a number of large mills may be compelled to stop until the relations between the raw and manufactured articles are better adjusted. Farmers should not sell in advance of the clip for less than eighty cents If that sum can be realized for good merino or its equivalent, sell. Higher prices cannot be expected. Should there be a prospect of higher rates, an amount of the articles will be gathered in Europe and America that would depress prices—There is always more of any crop on hand not intended for the market, than statisticians suppose, and high prices will bring it out. Our advice to farmers now is to take good care of the flocks especially of the lambs, feed the sheep well and make the most of the high prices, but not to rush their capital into theirs sheep at fancy prices. Wool will bring good rates this year and next, and probably fair rates in 1874, though the latter is doubtful. After that, sheep will be sold for their pelts, and everybody will be disgusted with wool growing for awhile again.

MARRIAGES,

GROSS—MALLORY—On Thursday April 25th, by the Rev. A. W. Lamport, at the residence of the bride's sister, T. D. Gross, Esq., and Miss. L. H. Mallory. No cake.

Well, Gross has gone and done it again. One would have thought that once getting fastened in the matrimonial noose would have proved quite sufficient, but it has been asserted that nature contradicts herself most every day, and we are consoled. Brother-in-law, we congratulate you, and in the language of the poet let us exclaim, "bully for you." We extend our best wishes to the happy pair,—a pleasant journey and a successful buffeting with the ups and downs of life, and an increase both financially and "domestically" that shall gladden their hearts in their old days, and give their relations a chance when they have gone "right avay queek ond."

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it he will send a copy of the prescription used, [free of charge], with directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. Life and Farm Insurance.

BY PROF. J. D. BUTLER.

Life insurance means honesty for some men, and policy for many more. In no other way can they pay their debts, or obey the apostle's charge that a man "provide for his own and especially those of his own house."

[illegible] insurance in the shape of lands sold on ten years' credit is better.

Both give a great prize in return for a number of small annual payments. But farm insurance gives that boon in the midst of life; life insurance only at the end of it. One gives it for a man himself to enjoy, the other only for his heirs. One performs the other promises.

"Death," said an Irishman, "is no great curse, for it always comes just where we would have it, at the end of life and never at the beginning." But this is more than can be said of life insurance, for its blessings come at the wrong end life, not, like death and farm insurance, at the right end.

Besides, in farm insurance the payments are only nine or ten, but in life insurance they may become so multitudinous that they will amount to several times the value of the prize drawn at last. The one is a lottery, the other square dealing.

Again, farm insurance gives you in the outset a mine which pays for itself, for out of it you can dig not only a living, but gold for all payments. Life insurance makes no such pretensions. It is all post mortem—and nothing "in the living present." In this aspect life insurance resembles the patent Tantalus of Sydney Smith. That reverend joker had a bag of oats hung just before the tongue of his carriage. The horse hearing the oats rattling just ahead, would rush forward with all his legs, yet could never quite thrust his nose into those dainties. On the other hand farm insurance gives a mess of grain before the journey begins, and all along many a baiting to prepare for each hard pull before the home-stretch.

Nor is this all. What life insurance promises is a fixed sum. But the land given by farm insurance is always growing in value. Less than forty years ago the whole area of Iowa could have been bought for forty millions of dollars. It was sold by the United States for less than that. To-day it would bring more than ten times that sum.

Give me then first insurance—and then life insurance.

Within the last twenty-three months the Great Western Farm Insurance Company, alias the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company, have sold along their line, in Iowa and Nebraska, 351,705 to 3,238 purchasers, almost all on ten years' credit, and six per cent. interest.

Farmer! are you insured?

Perils of Ballooning.

Professor Donaldson, the aeronaut, made another balloon ascension from Norfolk, Va., on the 18th inst, which came near being his last flight to the clouds. When at the height of one mile from the earth, and while performing upon the trapeze, Donaldson concluded that he would descend, and for this purpose pulled the valve cord to allow the gas to escape from the balloon. The valve did not open and he pulled again. It still remained closed, and there being no time to lose he pulled with both hands. Again a failure, and for the third time he gave a strong, steady jerk. There was a sharp, hissing sound, as if made by the tearing of cloth, followed by a rushing noise, and he knew that the balloon had burst. It did not collapse, however, being prevented from doing so by the rush of air from beneath, but closed up at the sides. At this time Donaldson was seated on the trapeze bar. The balloon leaned over to one side and descended with frightful velocity.

He says for the first time in his life he was frightened. In a short time, which seemed to him an eternity, the balloon struck the branches of a tree, and went crashing through the limbs. The ropes and trapeze bars catching the limbs somewhat diminished the rapidity of the decent, but still the velocity was terrific. Crushing through the branches, the balloon fell to the ground, the professor landing on his back in a heap of briars. His pants were torn, and his legs lacerated by the briars, but beyond this he escaped without injury. His escape from a frightful death is simply miraculous. Rising from his thorny couch, Donaldson, still cool, and with nerves little shaken by his terrible mishap, he took a survey of the situation He had fallen on the edge of a swamp, near a field, five miles from Norfolk. On examining the balloon he found a large rent, extending from the top to the bottom. Rolling it up, he started for assistance, securing which, he next procured a conveyance and returned to Norfolk.

Brave, Trusting Litte Fellow

A gentleman was one day opening a box of dry goods. His little son was standing near, and as his father took the packages from the box, he laid some of them upon the arm of the boy. A young friend and playmate of the merchant's son was standing by looking on. As parcel after parcel was laid upon the arm of the boy, his friend began to fear his load was becoming too heavy, and said:

"Johnny, don't you think you've got as much as you can bear?"

"Never mind," answered Johnny, in a sweet, happy tone, "Father knows how much I can carry."

Brave, trusting little fellow. He did not grow restless or impatient under that burden. There was no danger, he felt that his father would not lay too heavy a load on him. He knew his strength, or rather the weakness of that little arm, and would not overtask it. More than all, his father loved him, and therefore would not harm him. It is such a spirit of loving trust in him that God desires all his children to possess.

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD,
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Billious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent., and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

THE NEW CHURCH ORGAN.

BY W. L. M. CARLETON.

They've got a bran new organ, Sue,
For all their fuss and search;
They've done just as they said they'd do,
And fetched it into church—
They've hoisted up their new machine
In everybody's sight.
They've got a chorister and choir,
Ag'in my voice and vote;
For it was never my desire
To praise the Lord by note!

I've been a sister good an' true
For five an' thirty year,
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
I've sung the hymns both slow and quick,
Just as the preacher read,
And twice, when Deacon Tubbs was sick,
I took the fork an' led!
And now, their bold, new-fangled ways
Is comin' all about;
And I, right in my latter days,
Am fairly crowded out!

To-day the preacher, good old dear,
With tears all in his eyes,
Read—"I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies."
I al'ays liked that blessed hymn—
I s'pose I al'ays will;
It somehow gratifies my whim
In good old Ortonville;
But when that choir got up to sing,
I could'nt catch a word;
They sung the most dog-gondest thing
A body every heard!

Some worldly chaps was standin' near,
An' when I seed them grin,
I bid farewell to every fear,
And boldly waded in,
I thought I'd chase their tune along,
An' tried with all my might;
But though my voice is good and strong,
I could'nt steer it right;
When they were high, then I was low,
An' also contrawise;
And I too fast or they too slow,
To "mansions in the skies."

An' after every verse, you know,
They played a little tune;
I did'nt understand an' so
I started in too soon.
I pitched it pretty middlin' high,
I fetched a lusty tone.
But oh, alas! I found that I
Was singin' there alone!
They laughed a little, I am told;
But I had done my best;
And not a wave of trouble rolled
Across my peaceful breast.

And sister Brown—I could but look—
She sits right front of me;
She never was no singin' book,
An' never went to be;
But then she al'ays tried to do
The best she could, and said;
She understood the time right through,
An' kep' it with her head;
But when she tried this mornin,' oh
I had to laugh, or cough!
It kep' her head a bobbin' so,
It e'en a'most came off!

An' Deacon Tubbs—he all broke down,
As one might well suppose;
He took one look at Sister Brown,
And meekly scratched his nose.
He looked his hymn book through and through
And laid it on the seat,
And then a pensive sigh he drew,
And looked completely beat.
An' when they took another bout,
He did'nt even rise;
But drawed his red bandanner out
An' wiped his weepin' eyes.

I've been a sister, good an' true,
For five and thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear,
But death will stop my voice, I know,
For he is on my track;
And some day, I to church will go,
And never more come back,
And when the folks get up to sing—
Whene'er that time shall be—
I do not want no patent thing
A squealin' over me!

Leap-Year Felicities.

Eli Perkins has undergone matrimonial proposals at the hands of one of his lady friends, and he has this to say about the matter:

First, I called on my liquid eyed brunette, Miss Sallie Morris, of Madison avenue. For I have spent a good deal of money on Sallie Morris, for operas, boquets, lunches, etc. I've been trying for years to win her affections.

Last night, full of love and hope, I rang old Morris' door bell; in a moment Sallie was by myself on the retired sofa. After speaking of the coming opera I felt her velvet hands touch mine.

Do you know, Mr. Perkins,' she said, looking me straight in the face, 'that to-day is our proposing day?

Well, I suppose, I remarked modestly looking down at her mosaic bracelet.

Well, you know, Eli, my dear Eli! that I have been out with you a great many times.

Yes, I replied, beginning to feel embarrased.

You know, my dear, said she, taking both of my hands, that it has cost me a good deal for dresses and gloves, and—

And costing me a great deal for carriages, boquets and Delmonico lunches, I interrupted with embarrassment.

And while I have enjoyed myself all winter with Eli—

In expensive carriages to the Academy and Delmonico's I suggested.

Yes, while I have been happy to go there with you—I feel—Oh, my dear Eli, I don't know to say what I want to, and then then the beautiful child hid her face on my besom.

Do not fear my answer, beautiful one, I said smoothingly. What is it that weighs upon your sorrowful heart?

Oh! Eli, it is love, she said, sobbing wildly, and twisting her jeweled fingers in my auburn hair.

Heaven be praised, I sighed, as I felt the beating of her heart against my vest. For whom is this love, darling? I asked, for you know I am deeply interested in you.

You will not be mad with me, Eli, will you?

No, my sweet one, I shall only be too happy, I said, wiping the tears from my eyes.

Well, my dear—my long cherished friend, I love—

Who, my dear Sallie—who do you love, Eli?

Well, Eli, I love Charley Brown, to whom I am engaged, and then the scalding tears fell thick and fast on my shirt bosom.

Well, Sallie, what have you got to say to me? I asked hesitatingly, as I unloosened her hand from my neck.

Well, my dear Eli, Charles and father thought I had better see you and then propose—

Oh, darling one, I am thine, I said with great emotion; take me; never mind father, take me as I am; take—

But, Eli, let me explain. They wanted me to see you and thank you for your many kindness, and propose that you don't come here anymore.

Good-night, dear Eli.

Valley of Death.

A gentleman connected with Gen. Palmer's engineer corps of Kansas Pacific R. R., writing from Camp Cody, on the Mohave river, California, gives the following description of a remarkable valley in that region:

Eighty miles northwest of this camp is the well known and much dreaded 'Death Valley.' It is said to be lower than the level of the sea, and wholly destitute of water. Mr Spears, our intelligent guide, who visited this remarkable valley several times, gave me the following account of it, with the reason for the terrible name: The valley is some 50 miles long by 30 in breadth, and save two points it is wholly encircled by mountains, up whose steep sides it is impossible for any but expert climbers to ascend. It is devoid of vegetation and shadow of bird or wild beast never darkened its white, glaring sand.

In the early days, trains of emigrants bound for California passed, under the direction of guides, to the south of Death Valley, by what is known as the 'old Mormon road.' In the year 1850 a large train with some 300 emigrants, mostly from Illinois and Missouri, came south from Salt Lake, guided by Mormon. When near Death Valley, a dissent broke out in a part of the train, and twenty-one families came to the conclusion that the Mormons knew nothing about the country, so they appointed one of their number a leader determined to due west; so with the people and wagons he traveled for three days and then descended into the broad valley, whose treacherous mirage promised water. They reached the centre, but only the white, glaring sand, bounded by the scorched peaks, met their gaze on every hand.—Around the valley they wandered, and one by one the men died, and the panting flocks stretched themselves in death under the hot sun.

Then the children, crying for water, died at their mothers' breasts and with swollen tongues and burning vitals, the mothers followed.

Wagon after wagon was abandoned, and strong men tottered, and raved and died. After a week's wandering, a dozen survivors found some water in the hollow of a rock in in the mountains. It lasted but a short time, then all perished but two, who through some miraculous means, got out of the valley and followed the trail of their former companions.

Eighty-seven persons, with hundreds of animals, perished in this fearful place, and since then the name of Death Valley has been applied to it. Mr. Spears says when he visited it last winter, after the lapse of eighteen years, he found the wagons still complete, the iron works and tires bright, and the shriveled skeletons lying in many places side by side.

Seeing the Point.

A boy returned from school one day with a report that his scholarship had fallen below the usual average.

Well, said his father, you've fallen behind this month, have you?

Yes, sir.

How did that happen?

Don't know sir.

The father knew if the son did'nt. He had observed a number of dime novels scattered about the house, but had not thought it worth while to say anything until a fitting opportunity should offer itself.

A basket of apples stood upon the floor and he said: Empty out those apples, and take that basket and bring it to me full of chips. Suspecting nothing, the son obeyed.

Now, he continued, put all those apples back in the basket. When half the apples were replaced, the son said:

'Father, they roll off. I can't put any more in.

Put them in, I tell you.

But, father, I can't put them in.

Put them in? No, of course you can't put them in. Do you expect to fill it with apples? You say you don't know why you fell behind at school; I will tell you why. Your mind is like that basket. It will not hold more than so much. And here you have been the past month filling it with chip dirt—dime novels. The boy turned on his heel, whistled, and said:—Whew! I see the point. Not a dime novel has been seen in the house from that day to this.

Jim Guppins was a very clever good-dispositioned, sort of a fellow and was the but of all the girls in his neighborhood. The most brilliant thing he ever said was when some of the fair teazers questioned him one day in regard to his powers of memory.

How far back in your life time can you remember, Jim?

I can remember the day I was born, was his reply.

The day you was born? exclaimed one of the girls;—

Why, Jim, what can you remember of that day?

I remember very distinctly, that on the day I was born I sat on a little stool in the corner of the fireplace and cried for fear I was a girl.

Mr. Rawley and his Dog.

The Municipal court was in session, when the door opened, and Mr. Rawley walked in and closed the door. At his heels walked Bitters. Both seated themselves, the one on a chair and the other on end directly in front of Mr. Jagger, the judge. His Honor looked at the dog with the solemn eye of a judge, and shook his head as only a judge can shake it.

Are you one of the witnesses? inquired he, of the dog's master.

I am, sir, replied Mr. Rawley. I was subpœnaed to testify; and here's the document. As he spoke he laid upon the table a paper which, from having lain several days in that gentlemen's pocket, had changed from white to snuff color, and was also particularly crumpled.

What's the animal doing here? demanded the Court.

He hasn't had time to do anything, replied Mr. Rawley. He comes when I comes. He goes when I goes.

The animal must leave the court. It's contempt of court to bring him here, said Mr. Jagger angrily. Remove him instantly.

Mr. Rawley had frequently been in attendance at the police courts, and once or twice had a light taste of the sessions, so that he was not so much struck with the Judge as he otherwise might have been; and he replied: I make no opposition, sir; and shall not move a finger to prevent it. There's the animal, and officer as pleases may remove him. I say nuffin ag'in it. I knows what a contempt of court is, and this ain't one.

And Mr. Rawley threw himself amicably back in his chair.

Mr. Slagg, the chief clerk, laid down his pen, took off his spectacles, went up to the dog, and told him to get out, to which Bitters replied by snapping at his fingers as he attempted to touch him. Mr. Rawley was staring out of the window. The dog looked up at him for instructions, and receiving none, supposed that snapping at a scrivener's fingers was perfectly correct and resumed his pleasant expressions towards that functionary, occasionally casting a lowering eye at the Judge, as if deliberating whether to include him in the demonstration of anger.

Slagg, have you removed the dog? said Mr. Jagger, who, the dog being under his nose, saw that he had not.

No sir. He resists the court, replied Mr Slagg.

Call Walker to assist you, replied Mr. Jagger sternly.

Walker, the usher, a small man in drabs had anticipated something of the kind, and had accidentally withdrawn, as soon as he saw there was a prospect of difficulty; so that the Court was set at defiance by the dog.

Witness, said Mr. Jagger.

Sir, exclaimed a thin man in the corner, who had been subpoenaed, to his own great terror, and who at that particular moment had an idea that he was the only witness in the world, staring to his feet, under the vague impression that he was to be sworn on the spot, and thoroughly convinced that testifying and committing perjury were only different names for the same thing.

Not you—the man with the dog!

Mr. Rawley looked the Court full in the face.

Will you oblige the Court by removing that animal? said Jagger, mildly.

Certainly, said Mr. Rawley. Bitters, go home!

Bitters rose stiffly and went out, first casting a last glance at Mr. Slagg, for the purpose of being able to identify him on some future occasion; and having comforted himself by a violent onslaught upon a small dog belonging to the Judge, whom he encountered in the entry, was seen from the window walking up the street with most profound gravity.

The World to Come to an End Aug. 12.

Astronomers are inhuman—we mean immortal;—yes, they are not of this world. They know all things; are able to foretell all future events; are ever ready to announce to the world that we are on the verge of destruction. In the whole, they are terrible fellows.

One of these grey headed, dangerously wise beings, whose years have brought upon him the infirmities of old age, announces that a comet is flying with a rapidity toward the center of our earth compared with which our lightning telegraph is unto it like the slow pace of a snail; that it is traveling at the incomprehensibly rapid gate of 102,000 miles per second in the form of a blazing molten mass whose diameter is millions of miles. Its soaring is so true and direct towards the centre of our earth that it wavers not a hair's breadth in its orbit. On the 12th of next August, according to a mathematical result of a computation of a row of figures a mile in length, the wonderful deed will be done. Which side of the earth it will strike or form what direction it will come the astronomers do not state—probable it swallow up our entire planet; that, not jesting too freely, judgement day, if we go according to scriptural authority, is in perfect contradiction to the above wild speculation.

To show the wild theory of most of our astronomers who delight in predicting and startling the world with sensational announcements, we were to be placed in perfect darkness for three days and nights during March 22d, 23d and 24. We had our gas and lamps prepared and were in perfect readiness to meet the sad catastrophy, but lo! the darkness cometh not.

A billiard room in San Francisco with ten tables is managed by a young and pretty woman, who swings a skillful cue.

WIDOW WOOD.

I don't say that brother Ben's widow wasn't good looking, for her age and her size. Then, too, she had a pretty penny left her. Ben was always lucky in business. And she might of married very well if she wanted to change her condition; but, you see Margaret Ann was a fool—she, a widow of forty, to set her cap at young Sam Spencer, who was only twenty-four. If I was her brother-in-law, and if Ben had said to me, as he did, 'Richard, always be kind to Margaret Ann,' I could'nt help seeing. The fact of the matter is, that as a general thing, widows do make fools of themselves oftener than girls.

In this case I admit, age was the only obstacle. Sam was a good man—above selling himself to a widow old enough to be his mother, for her money bags. Sam was clerk in the store, I was poor Ben's partner. I'd tried to buy the widow out. I'd said over and over again, 'Margaret Ann, you have plenty, and to spare; why not retire,' But you see she would'nt drop it—After a while I found out the reason. It was Sam Spencer.

That was why she liked to sail about the store in her deep black silks; that was why she was always finding some excuse to haul down that part of the stock he had, in hand, mixing everything up and giving him no end of trouble.

You see, I could'nt help it. The concern paid, and the widow Wood owned just as much as I did. If I'd said 'Margaret Ann go home,' she would'nt have said 'I've a right here.' That was it. She never did anything but bother and pry. She had no children to occupy her, and she brought her pet white poodle along with her, 'So lonesome," she said she was, "in the big house opposite, and that was why she had had us come to tea so much, of course."

Well, this went on for nearly a year. Big eyes at Sam, sweet smiles soft speeches! I used to wonder whether old Ben knew how soon he had be forgotten. To be sure he was sixty when he died, and a bald-headed, stoop shouldered man, with solemn ways about him; but she'd been his wife for three and twenty years, and though I'm a bachelor, I know what feelings ought to be. And Ben was my brother too. I hope it wasn't wicked of me to make up my mind to put an end to her capers, as Sam went out one night, and to tell him that we wanted a young lady as cashier, and what not, and that Lilly Rathbone could leave Grigg & Grater, I'd give her the place. Sam was in love with Lilly, I knew that; but Margaret Ann had never seen her.

"Margaret Ann," says I one day, "we'll have a new cashier to-day. We need one, and I've engaged one.— "Well," says Margaret Ann, "perhaps we do. I hope he is a nice young man, and good looking. Good looks attract custom."

"I'm glad you coincide with me," says I. And I laughed to myself for I knew Margaret Ann was thinking of some one else to flirt with. But I said nothing.

It was fun to see her face change when she saw Lilly behind the counter next day. She gave it to me in the private office, I can tell you. She hated females about the store, and she didn't like Lilly's looks. I could laugh at her however there. I had good references with Lilly, and I had signed a written agreement with her for six months. She was to be cashier, you see, as I told you. Margaret Ann couldn't help herself and I supposed she knew it, for she said nothing after that, and Sam and Lilly were as happy as young birds. I believe he proposed behind my counter; I know he did it somewhere, and I know he was accepted.

"Lord bless you," says I to myself, "and help you to build your nest." I'm not crusty, if I am a bachelor.

A few days after I found Margaret Ann walking the office in a towering rage, with her face flaming.

"Richard," says she, "a woman is always right about another woman. Men admire a pretty face so, that they are blinded by it. It was always so with Mr. Wood. Many a time he's thought a woman everything that was splendid until I've proved that she wasn't, by telling him things. Now I've found out your Lilly Rathbone. She's exactly what I thought—exactly!"

"Well, what is it?"

"No better than she should be," says Margaret Ann. "I saw her kiss Sam Spencer behind the counter this blessed morning."

"And he didn't want her to I suppose, and hollered for help?" says I.

"You know what men are," says she; "of course he kissed her back."

"Didn't he kiss her first?" says I.

"Well, she let him anyhow, says she.

"Well" says I, "I suppose you used to kiss Ben after you were engaged, if not before."

"What has that to do with it, says she. Why, they—at least—did he propose her coming here, Richard?"

"No," said I, "but they are engaged, Margaret Ann.

"Don't believe it," said she.

"It's gospel truth," said I.

Ah then—well I didn't mind it; it didn't hurt me a bit—but then that woman turned around and slapped me in the face, she was hopping mad.

"Such actions in a respectable store! You depraved brute!" she said; and marched out, and didn't come back for a week, for which I was truly thankful.

When she did come back she was all smiles and amiability; and she talked to Lilly, and she smiled at Sam, and she really did come out beautifully, considering. Lilly took a great notion to her.

"What a nice, pleasant lady Mrs. Wood is," she said, as we were folding things up that night; "and so pretty too, for her age. I think she is splendid."

"Glad you like her," said I.

"Dear me!" said she, with her head under the counter.

"Sister-in-law, you know," said I "one of the family; it won't do to praise her too much."

"Oh, I wasn't thinking of what you said, Mr. Wood," said she. "I am so surprised about my key. I am sure I hung it here. A little brass door key, with a nick in the handle, and a piece of pink ribbon tied to it. I can't think where it is gone."

Well, we both looked everywhere. We unpacked packages and peeped into boxes, and poked down cracks in the floor. Lilly kept worrying about getting a locksmith to fit another before she could get in, and said that Rose was always so tired.

Rose was her sister. The two were orphans, and kept house together in one little room of a very respectable tenement house.

"Iv'e always had tea ready before Rose got in," said Lilly, "but to-night she'll have to wait."

It's odd how we remember little things sometimes. Perhaps the girl's pretty puzzled face, and her graceful motions as she ran about looking for the key impressed this upon my mind. At all events we did not find the notched key tied with pink ribbon, and Lilly went home without it. I told Margaret Ann about it when I saw her next, and she inquired very politely of Lilly as to the end of the affair when she next saw her. The key was never found, but Lilly said she had two made, so that such a thing could never happen again. She would keep one and Rose the other.

"And as I presume it was lost here, you must have the value of it from us," said Margaret Ann. "It's not much, but it's but just" And that I thought was very kind of widow Wood, considering.

"Well, time passed on, and one day was about like another. People began to go to the country, and trade was dull. And Sam told me that Lilly and he were going to be married soon, God willing.

I had just left Sam when Margaret Ann's colored stepped across the street, and told me that her mistress wanted to see me.

Of course I went over, and when I got into the back parlor, I found Margaret Ann wrapped up in a shawl, her eyes red with crying.

"Anything happened?" says I.

"Yes," says she, "I'm afraid so. I'm so sorry."

"Dear me! Do mention the facts" says I.

"Well," says she, "I can hardly bear to do it; who has a chance at the safe besides you and me?"

"Nobody but Lilly Rathbone," says I.

"You are sure?" says she.

"Why, of course" says I.

"Ah! Well," says she, "perhaps there's another way out of it. May be you've had occasion to use that money of mine. I mean that thousand dollar bank-note that I put in there in a pocket book last week."

"No," said I. "Of course I'd have spoken of it. It was your private money."

"It's gone, Richard," said she. "You saw me look into the safe today?"

"Yes," says I.

"Well," says she, 'it was gone then. I couldn't bring myself to speak of it. You see a girl like her has so many temptations; going to marry and all. Richard promise me you won't have her arrested, or anything, if it is her."

"Its not," I cried. "Besides, it was your money. You should be the prosecutor of any thief."

"Dear me, yes," says she, and I'll let her go; but I must get it back and she must leave the store.

"How can you think so ill of the girl?" said I. 'Why don't you suspect me? I'm ever so much more doubtful character than she is."

"You are my brother-in-law," said Margaret Ann. 'Now listen to reason. Come to the store with me and we'll search. If we don't find it, I shall charge Lilly with the theft to-morrow, and if she don't confess, get a search warrant out for her rooms.' I'll be very kind, but I cant lose a sum like that.

She cried again. I did really feel that she was in great trouble. We went to the store again, and we searched the safe, but the money was gone. Margaret Ann had the number in her pocket-book. It was easy to identify it, and besides a poor girl like Lilly did not have thousands around loose. I confess myself that the poor thing was in a suspicious position, and I said if she would prove guilty, my faith in human nature was gone.

"Mine too," said Margaret Ann I've come to like her so. And then poor Sam.

I went home to tea with my sister-in-law, but we had not much appetite. She promised not to come to the store until closing hour and to be very merciful, and to give the poor girl every chance.

And so we parted. I arose to say good night, and came around the table to shake hands with Margaret Ann, when being but a clumsy old bachelor, my coat caught in a little wicker work sewing basket on long spider legs, and upset it. Out tumbled [illegible] and buttons, and tape, and I stooped down to pick them up, when among the litter I saw a key—a brass door key, with a nick in it, and a piece of pink ribbon tied to the handle. It was a very little thing, but it made my blood run cold.

If that was the key that Lilly had lost, what was it doing there? I didn't dare to look at my sister-in-law. And I walked the floor all night, but by morning my mind was made up.

At nine o'clock I met that boy and girl at the store and told them I would be out all day. In ten minutes more I stole Lilly's key from under the counter, and went out. I went to her house—to her little room on the third floor and entered it like a thief. It was very poor and very bare, but very neat and clean; and there was a closet in it, with a few dresses hanging up on pegs, and a bonnet box on a shelf.

Into that closet I went, and there I sat down on an old trunk and waited. I heard a queer old clock ticking in the room. I heard it count the hours, ten, eleven, twelve.

And I kept saying to myself:

"If you are a wicked, suspicious old fool, Richard Wood, Lord forgive you."

But I waited still, and just as the long black hands pointed to half past one, I heard a knock at the door—such a knock as ladies sometime give with a parasol handle, such a knock as my sister-in-law always gave at the office door.

I drew my closet door tight shut and put my eye to a crevice in it.

There was another knock—a pause; and then I heard a key turn in the lock, and my sister-in-law came in. She looked around her, shut the door, re-locked it, and stole across the room. Then—God forgive the woman; I suppose she was mad with jealousy—she lifted up the mattress of the neat little bed in the corner, and taking a red pocket-book from her bosom, thrust it under, drawing the quilt well about the bed afterward.

"I hardly think you'll marry Sam Spencer after all Miss Lilly," said she aloud, with a wicked toss of her head. 'I've outwitted you.'

'Not quite,' said I. 'Margaret Ann, there are two words to that matter.'

I walked out of my closet and stood with my back against the outer door. She knew herself trapped, but her wicked tongue had its way still.

'So, you're in the habit of coming here! she said. Nice young ladies certainly.'

'I never come here before,' said I, and you know that; but I've been here all day waiting for you. I saw Lilly's key in your basket last night, and I began to guess the truth. Bring me that pocket-book.'

Margaret Ann did it. She was as pale as death, and almost as cold. I looked at her and felt sorry for her, after all.

'You're my brother's widow,' I said 'and a poor, foolish, jealous creature. I haven't told any one of my suspicions yet, and I never will on two conditions.'

'Name them,' said she; 'I can't help myself.'

'You'll retire from the business,' said I

'Glad to do it,' said she.

'And you'll give that thousand dollar note to Lilly as a wedding present.'

She looked at me and gave a great gulp

'Nasty little cat,' she said; I wont!

But she did, and only I ever knew why the Widow Wood was so generous to Lilly Rathbone on her wedding-day, or why she started for Europe on the very next steamer that sailed from New York and still remains there.

Mother Shimpton's Prophecy.

An exchage says Mother Shimpton's prophecy is almost forgotten except by antiquarians. It was first published in 1488, and republished next in 1641. It must be confessed that the greatest part of it has been fulfilled and we have only ten years to wait in order to determine whether the concluding lines will prove as true as the earlier ones. These are Mother Simpton's words:

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accident fill the world with woe,
Around the world thoughts shall fly,
In the twinkling of an eye.
Waters shall yet more wonders do
Now strange yet shall be true,
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at root of tree
Through hills man shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at his side,
Under water men shall walk;
Shall ride shall sleep shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen,
In white in black in green.
Iron on the water shall float,
As easy as a wooden boat,
Gold shall be found, and found
In a land that's not now known;
Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew,
The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty one.

Anecdote of Dr. Franklin.

The conversation having turned, in presence of Dr. Franklin, upon riches, and a young person in the company having expressing his surprise that they ever should be attended with such anxiety and solicitude, instancing one of his acquaintances who, though in possession of unbounded wealth, yet was as busy and more anxious than the most assiduous clerk in his counting house, the Doctor took an apple from a fruit basket, and presented it to a little child who could just totter about the room. The child could scarce grasp it in its hand. He then gave it another which occupied the other hand. Then, choosing a third, remarkable for its size and beauty, he presented that also. The child, after many ineffectual attempts to hold three, dropped the last on the carpet and burst into tears. 'See there,' said the philosopher, there is a man with more riches than he can enjoy.

THE LIBERAL TICKET.

The Republicans met at Cincinnati last week, and nominated Horace Greeley for President. It was a purely Republican affair, and as such, it will, no doubt, receive a large support from the Republican party. As to the Democracy, however, there is no claim upon it to support these nominees. It has made no promises to support Republican candidates and can, with perfect fairness, withdraw all sympathy from the liberal movement, that was to be national in its character. Greeley is certainly a much better man than Grant, and if there are no other candidates in the field than these two, he will receive a great many Democratic votes, and will certainly be elected.—But we are in favor of the nomination of a Democratic ticket, and hope soon to see the announcement of a Democratic national convention for this purpose. With the Republican party, so equally divided on these two candidates, we have reason to entertain great hopes of a Democratic success, and we firmly believe it is within our grasp if but discretion, and good sense are brought into requisition for the furtherance of this object. Our voice, then, is for war on party principles, and we call for an out and out Democratic ticket, with which to make the fight.

* * *

The New York Tribune says that the administration journals appear to have entered upon the arduous work of demolishing the personal character of Liberal Republicans, attacking each seriatim. Yesterday it reached Mr. John D. Defrees, of Indiana, and Col. Frederic Hecker, of Illinois. Mr. Defrees is an honest, Christain gentleman; but the organ finishes him as "a perfect incubus on the Republican party and chronic office-seeker." And Col. Hecker, the German patriot, is turned off "a garrulous old man, fond of notoriety." This style of tactics may help re-elect President Grant; it certainly will not damage the cause of Liberal Republicans.

Mr. Greeley a few weeks ago frankly stated that he would support the Cincinnati nominee, provided the Democratic party did not appear in the field in form, attempting to take advantage of Republican divisions; and that in case there was a regular Democratic nomination, he would support the strongest Republican candidate—As the nomination of Mr. Greeley was a surprise, we beg leave to exercise the same privilege now, in regard to him. We may favor his election provided there is no Democratic ticket in the field.

Now that a new Town Board and Marshal have been elected, after one years masterly inactivity, we trust that some thing will be done towards improvements. Show your hands gentlemen. We propose to say something this year, if nothing is accomplished.

THE LIBERAL CONVENTION!

Horace Creely for President!

GOV. GRATZ BROWN, OF MO., FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

The Liberal Republicans met in Convention last Friday for the nomination of a ticket and the adoption of a platform. The attendance was very large and the assemblage one of the most intelligent that has ever been convened in the country. We give below extracts of the proceedings:

Horace White, from the Committee on Platform, reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by the Convention.

RESOLUTIONS.

We, the Liberal Lepublicans of the United States, in National Convention assembled at Cincinnati, proclaim the following principles as essential to a just government:

1. We recognize the equality of all men before the law, and hold that it is the duty of the Government in its dealings with the people to mete out equal and exact justice to all, of whatever nativity, race, color or persuasion, religious or political.

2. We pledge ourselves to maintain the Union of these States, emancipation and enfranchisement, and to oppose any reopening of the questions settled by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution.

3. We demand the immediate and absolute removal of all disabilities imposed on account of the rebellion, which was finally subdued seven years ago, believing that universal amnesty will result in a complete pacification in all sections of the country.

4. That local self-government, with impartial suffrage, will guard the rights of all citizens more securely than any centralized power; that the public welfare requires the supremacy of the civil over the military authority and freedom of persons under the protection of the habeas corpus. We demand for the individual the largest liberty consistent with public order, for the State self-government, and for the nation a return to the method of peace and the constitutional limitations of power.

5. The civil service of the Government has become a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition and an object of selfish greed; it is a scandal and reproach on free institutions, and breeds demoralization, dangerous to the prosperity of republican government.

6. We therefore regard a thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necessities of the hour; that honesty, capacity and fidelity constitute the only valid claims to public employment; that offices of the Government cease to be a matter of arbitrary favoritism and patronage, and that public stations become again a post of honor; to this end it is imperatively required that no President shall be a candidate for re-election.

7. We demand a system of Federal taxation which shall not necessarily interfere with the industry of the people, and which shall provide the means necessary to pay the expenses of the Government economically administered the pensions, the interest on the public debt, and a moderate annual reduction of the principal thereof, and recognizing that there are in our midst, honest but irreconcilable differences of opinion with regard to the respective systems of protection and free trade, we remit the discussion of the subject to the people in their Congressional Districts, and the decision of Congress thereon is to be wholly free of executive interference or dictation.

8. The public credit must be sacredly maintained, and we denounce repudiation in every form and guise.

9. A speedy return to specie payment is demanded alike by the highest considerations of morality and Government.

10. We remember with gratitude the heroism and sacrifices of the soldiers and sailors of the Republic, and no act of ours shall detract from their justly earned fame for the full rewards of patriotism.

11. We are opposed to all further grants of lands to railroads or other corporations; the public domain should be held sacred to actual settlers.

12. We hold that it is the duty of the Government, in its intercourse with foreign nations, to cultivate friendships of peace, by treating with all on fair and equal terms, regarding alike as dishonorable to demand what is not right or to submit to what is wrong.

13. For the promotion and success of the vital principles and the support of the candidates nominated by the Convention, we invite and cordially welcome the co-operation of all patriotic citizens without regard to previous political affiliations.

HORACE WHITE,
Chairman of Com. on Resolutions.
G. P. THURSTON, Secretary.

The next order of business was stated by the Chair to be the nomination of candidates for the Presidency without the formal presentation of candidates, but by roll of States The result of the first ballot was as follows:

FIRST BALLOT.

Adams	203
Trumbull	108
Davis	92½
Greeley	147
Brown	98
Curtin	62
Chase	2¾
Sumner	1

Before the vote was announced, Gratz Brown, by unanimous consent took the stand and thanked his friends for their support, but withdrew his name, and asked his friends to support Greeley. [Great cheers, with many persistent hisses.]

The chair announced the following as the result.

SECOND BALLOT.

Adams	203
Trumbull	110
Davis	97½
Greeley	147
Brown	85

Necessary for a choice 308. No choice was made.

THIRD BALLOT.

Greeley	239
Adams	243
Trumbull	146
Davis	81
Brown	2
Chase	1

There being no choice the roll was again cal'ed. There was great excitement during the call.

FOURTH BALLOT.

At the end of the call the vote footed.

Greeley	257
Trumbull	156
Adams	264
Davis	44
Brown	2

FIFTH BALLOT.

Adams gained 6 in Delaware, 4 in Indiana, 10 in Kansas, 10 in Pennsylvania, 1 in Missouri, 5 in North Carolina, 8 in Verment, 4 in West Virginia. Greeley—3 in Indiana, 4 in Louisiana, 2 in Missouri, 2 in North Carolina, 1 in Pennsylvania, 2 in Wisconsin. Trumbull a few scattering gains and losses. South Carolina gave Chase 14 and Virginia gave him 9.

SIXTH BALLOT.

Adams	324
Greeley	3 2
Trumbull	19
Davis	16
Chase	32
Palmer	1

Indiana changed twenty-seven for Adams. A stampede of changes to Greeley here occurred, but the noise and confusion rendered it impossible to hear details.

Illinois changed solid to Greeley, except one delegate, who insisted on his vote for Trumbull.

The Chair finally announced the whole vote at 714; necessary to a choice 357.

Adams	187
Greeley	482

SCENE OVER THE NOMINATION OF GREELEY.

Amid much excitement and confusion the Secretary again called the States. As the call proceeded and one State after another increased the votes for Greeley, wild cheers and shouting interrupted the proceedings. When the vote of Indiana, 19 for Greeley, was announced amid cheers of the delegation from the State, and many others rising to their feet and swinging their hats with great enthusiasm. When the call of the States was through, it was announced that Illinois delegation was absent, not having cast their vote. Without the vote of Illinois, the vote stood:

Greeley, 318.
Adams, 293.

The chairman of the Maine delegation announced a change of two votes from Trumbull to Adams. Illinois, on reappearing, cast twenty-seven votes for Adams, which was received with cheers and swinging of hats.

After order had been restored, Illinois added fourteen votes for Greeley and one for Trumbull.

Words are inadequate to describe the scene of confusion occurring. All order ceased. The President hammered with his gavel on the desk without avail. A general intermingling of delegates ensued, creating what may be called an intermixed conglomeration of confusion. Men in groups were gesticulating violently, and voicing their thoughts in the loudest demonstrative tones. Occasional cheers interrupted the order. The Chair's mallet kept going unavailingly, but finally brought the Convention into comparative quietude, whereon several delegates simultaneously attempted to address the Chair at once. Another relapse of temporary confusion. The chairmen of delegations having to force their way to the front in order to secure recognition from the Chair, and to be heard by the Secretary in announcing the changes of votes. Pennsylvania finally got her change into 6 votes for Davis and 50 for Greeley, which secured the nomination for Greeley. Then confusion and tumult reigned supreme for some minutes. The vote of Indiana was changed to 1 vote for Adams, and 27 for Greeley.

SPEECH OF GEORGE W. JULIAN.

Calls were made for a speech from Hon, Geo. W. Julian, of Indiana. He said: If my physical health would allow me to talk to you, it would afford me great gratification. I am, however, and have been for some time past, an invalid. I have retired from politics, and truly would not have been here at all had it not been for the Liberal Republican movement, which I could not possibly stay away from. I am in it and of it, and shall go with it to the end. If I can gather up my health, which I think will be greatly invigorated by what we have done, I hope bye and bye to be able to help your cause. [Loud applause and calls for Palmer, Curtis, and Tilton, none of whom, however, appeared.]

VICE PRESIDENT.

Gov. Gratz Brown of Missouri was nominated on the second ballot, as follows:

Brown	425
Geo. W. Julian	175
Walker	75

* * *

It seems to be pretty well established that Secretary Fish has gone to settle the interlocutory difficulty with Great Britain in the manner already hinted at. That is, he will announce to the Geneva Board that America doesn't want that immense bill of consequential damages, allowed,—that on the contrary, she wishes the principal of consequential damages disallowed, and merely presents the figures as a horrible example of what the contrary would lead to.

* * *

Greeley or Grant—which? The Democracy can elect Greeley on a liberal platform, or continue Grant, Morton, Chandler and Cameron, in power four years longer.—State Sen.

The Democracy can elect their own ticket providing it don't make a fool of itself in its selection, which would be nearly as bad as to support Greeley.

* * *

THE reports from Washington, last week, which represented Grant and Colfax as in anxious waiting and constant receipt of dispatches from Cincinnati, show that they were pretty badly scared. Morgan, of Leslie's Weekly, might find a good subject in this for a sketch—dispatches coming in, Grant taking a drink to steady his nerves, and Colfax looking at the beverage longingly, and regretting his temperance professions.

WHAT THEY THINK.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The result of the Cincinnati Convention, its candidates, and its platform, is known to all parts of the country. It is true that the nomination of Horace Greeley for President will be a surprise to the great majority of the people, but a surprise more from the fact that such a selection had not been anticipated, rather than from any question of his fitness, his ability, his patriotism, or his availability. The Convention was true to its purpose from the first to the last. It was Republican in its origin, Republican in its membership, Republican in its declaration of principles, and Republican in its candidates, and yet so National in all things that it offers a common ground upon which all lovers of true Government can unite.

The Convention was a revolt by Republicans against the evil of centralization which at this time overshadows the Union and threatens the annihilation of every local Government in the land.

It was a Republican revolt against the use of the Civil Service to perpetuate corruption, nepotism and incompetency in the public service, and to transfer all political power from the people to those holding office.

It was a Republican declaration that our present system of taxation is not a doctrine of the Republican party, and that in the choice of Representatives in Congress every Republican voter is free to vote for such candidates as best agree with him on the important question, of Taxation and Revenue Reform.

It was a declaration by Republicans that the war has closed, and that the Government in all its departments lay aside the sword, and be conducted as a peace establishment.

Horace Greeley is known to all the land. His personal integrity is unquestionable. He has won his distinction before the people by a life of industry, toil, and ability. The Presidency can hardly add anything to his fame. But, in a movement by the people for Reform, there is no person to whom the task can be more fittingly or confidently committed than to him. That he will root out corruption in every branch of the Government no one doubts; fraud will not approach him, nor will he tolerate incompetency or dishonesty for the sake of friends or party.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The Liberal Convention yesterday completed its work by the nomination of Horace Greeley for President and B. Gratz Brown for Vice President, upon a platform which every sincere friend of Reform and enemy of political despotism and corruption can indorse. The action of the Convention created some surprise and a fair share of dissatisfaction among certain gentlemen who went into the movement as partisans. It is always so. With so many candidates many ardent gentlemen were doomed to disappointment. But the Convention was a success in point of numbers, character, and work performed. The success of its ticket must depend solely upon the manner in which it is received by the element which created it. It was a Republican Convention.

GENERAL REMARKS BY THE PRESS.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 4.—The Union and American (Democratic) publish this morning sketches of the lives of Horace Greeley and Gratz Brown. Its editorials express the opinion that the ticket would have been stronger with Brown for President, but speaks kindly of Greeley.—It says the ticket can and will sweep Northwest, if seconded by the national Democracy. It adds that its election depends solely upon the action of the Democracy, and whatever they shall conclude is best to be done for the higher interest of the country will be done cheerfully.

The Banner says the ticket cannot fail to command the respect of the American people, and which from its truly national character, to say nothing of the truly national platform, which was and is its superstructure, ought to possess an irreproachable strength, and satisfy the liberal element of the whole country. The ticket is a strong one, notwithstanding the fact that its nomination was affected through agencies not altogether uncommon to nominating conventions, and smacking a little too much intriguing to be entirely in accordance with the unselfish patriotism which inspired the Liberal movement, and produced the convention. It attributes the defeat of Adams to the influence of Frank Blair.

The Statts Zeitung says Greeley and Brown are good men and liked by both Americans and Germans in this country, but if Mr. Williams had been nominated they would have been satisfied.

BOSTON, May 4.—The Post, a leading Democratic paper, speaking of the Cincinnati Convention and its nominations says it is proposing of lofty results with which the people everywhere sympathize, but when it came in the application of its means it failed miserably. Few persons in their sober senses will deny that the selection of Horace Greeley by an assembly so powerfully equipped with the popular sympathy, as a candidate for President is an appointment for which they were not prepared.

The Advertiser heads its leading editorial subject, "The Ridiculous Mass."

The Journal says the general opinion of the Republicans is that Greeley is decidedly the best nominee whom the Cincinnati Convention could have selected for the benefit of the Republican party.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The Chronicle and Republican both oppose the nomination of Greeley.

DETROIT, May 4.—The Free Press, a Democratic paper, says the Cincinnati nomination: "Greeley is a strong man with whom to demoralize the Republican party. It will probably result in the defeat of Grant's nomination or election." It considers the chances of the Democracy largely increased, with nothing necessary to secure it but a strong nomination and platform.

The Post, an Administration paper, ridicules Greeley's nomination, and it will not injure the Republican party in the least, while it will render the the Democratic cause utterly hopeless.

The Tribune, Independent Republican, says: "The truest and most sagacious friends of the Liberal movement saw with regret Greeley's nomination, and would regard his election as a public calamity, and he is not entitled to Republican support in the present candidacy.

MEMPHIS, May 4.—The nominations at Cincinnati are almost unanimously regarded as the strongest that could have been made. The Avalanche and Appeal unhesitatingly endorse the nominees, and will support the ticket.

NEW YORK, May 4.—The Herald has a two column double-leaded article on the nominations at Cincinnati yesterday. It says they will excite both surprise and interest. The nomination of Mr. Greeley is the most striking event in some respects, ever known in our political history. It attributes it to the strength of his personal character and the devotion of his admirers. After some reflection that Greeley and Brown are both journalists, and that the nomination of Greeley is largely due to the support of the independent press, and especially the Herald, and after reviewing the names which were before the convention, to show that Greeley was the strongest and most popular candidate, the Herald goes into an inquiry as to the effect of the nominations, and the success of the ticket.

The Richmond Enquirer says:—"The Cincinnati Convention has presented the strongest ticket to the country that could be presented. As lookers on, we may be permitted to express it as our opinion, that Grant will discover this to be the hardest rock he has ever butted his head against.—Greeley and Brown are both acceptable to the people of the South, and it they have to decide between this and another four years of Grant's bayonet rule, there will not be much hesitation which horn of the dilemma they will take.

The World says that there has been many rumors as to Mr. Greeley's course in reference to the Tribune, the most important of which is that he will resign the editorship, sell his stock, and retire from the paper. The reason alleged is that the candidacy would embarass the action of the paper so as to deprive it of its use and influence in the Presidential contest.

* * *

The New York Tribune contains the following on the Cincinnati Convention:

We make no comment on the ticket presented yesterday. The people, without distinction of party, are considering it, and will in due time indicate their judgement thereon.

The platform has been to us throughout an object of much greater solicitude than the nominations, and our interest has centered in what should be said bearing on Protection and Free Trade. There is an honest and serious difference among Republicans and Reformers on this question.

* * *

IN Browne's Winchester speech he made the feeble attempt to excuse Grant's administration for the defalcations that have been made under it. He seemed to think that the absolute defalcation of a million and one hundred thousand dollars, and two million and two hundred thousand dollars still in litigation, and very small amounts—only $3,300,000, stolen and discovered within three years of Grant's rule. But Mr. Browne forgot to estimate how much has been stolen and not discovered.

IT is quite amusing to see some of the smaller Republican papers pitching into such men as Horace Greeley, Gov. Palmer, Schurz, and others, who are identified with the reform movement at Cincinnati.

IT has been suggested that the Cincinnati Convention was so organized that it would have nominated the Devil himself to beat Grant. His Satanic Majesty would have hard work in beating him—in meanness and corruption.

HOUSE BURNED.—Mr. Glirger who resides about two miles west met with a severe loss last week by the burning of his house. It caught from the chimney, and only had time to save a few things before it was consumed.

TOM BROWNE has been "opening the campaign" again—this time at Winchester. It is only the second performance of this kind, though he has gone through the process of "opening the champagne" several times since he was nominated and swore off.

A young girl went into a prominent dry goods store here. One of the polite clerks asked her whether anyone was waiting on her. She looked down modestly, and said, "Not now, there was a feller waiting on me last winter, but he's quit." Poor gal.

LOGANSPORT can boast of the most economical man in the west. He recovered from a severe attack of fever, recently, and had left, among other nostrums, a half pint of castor oil. He is taking the oil at regular intervals because he "don't want to see it wasted."

THE Republican Convention in Kosciusko County, recently, is characterized as a reckless, drunken mob—a somewhat different story from that spread out so eloquently in the Indianian. The Union makes out that there was a good deal of bad whisky punished, but this is an old story for Warsaw.

SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION.—The Seventh Annual Annual Convention of the Sabbath Schools of DeKalb County will be held at Corurna, on June 4th and 5th, 1872. Well, the fact is, its the first we've had for a long time that didn't taste like dog meat. Our market has heretofore been supplied from the Bologna dog sausage factory of Columbia City.

SOMEBODY has disturbed the equanimity of our friend Beane, of the Goshen Democrat. Hear him: There are some almighty mean men living in this country yet. We know of one or two sons of guns that will never get their just dues unless there should after all the discussion about the matter, prove to be a regular old fashioned hell fire and brimstone, and melted lead for drinking water. We will give the name of one of them at the proper time.

DOLLY VARDEN.—This new style of goods, the "Dolly Varden" so much talked about just now in "dress circles," is an overdress nearly similar to a polonaise. It is used as a house dress and is becoming quite fashionable. "Dolly Varden" is a character in Dicken's navel of "Barnaby Rudge." She was a locksmiths daughter, a lively coquette, and the garment now named after her is a revival of the style of dress worn in England at the period that story is laid.

NEW YORK & CHICAGO AIR LINE.—A corps of engineers reached this place last Tuesday, going east, surveying a line for the above road. This looks like business as tney have not asked for subscriptions to pay for the survey, but are going on their own book. The line as surveyed passes just through the north of town, and if the road is located there it will suit us first rate. With this on the north, the Eel River and B. & M. on the south, and the Saginaw on the west, Auburn will be pretty well supplied with railroads.

☞ USE DR. MARSHALL'S LUNG SYRUP ☜

The Press of last week gives an account of a shocking accident that occurred there the Saturday night previous:

Joseph O'Donald, who had been about town in an intoxicated condition during the day, attempted to get on the Atlantic Express, when he slipped under the train, the wheels running over his foot crushing it terribly. The injured man was removed to the house of Mr. Fretz, on Washington street, where his limb was amputated by Dr. Chamberlain, assisted by Dr. Ford of Auburn. The wounded man is a cooper, without family, and about fifty-three years old. He has a brother and sister at East Cambridge, Mass.

AN ADVERTISING DODGE.—A violent democratic paper, whose editor thinks that the late C. L. Vallandigham, was the greatest statesman America ever produced, and whose paper was suppressed for treasonable utterances during the war, is out in a double-leaded leader for Geo. W. Julian as Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-Large in this State. We presume its editor is after an advertisement, and doubtless thinks that the article will be extensively "copied" and "credited;" we therefore refrain from naming it for less than the "usual rates."—Indianian.

That's right. Any paper of the Vallandigham stripe, that can swallow Julian as a Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-Large ought to be "spotted" instead of "copied." The article was evidently written, like a great many others we know of, that it might be "copied." If that is an index of a good journalist, we have some mighty good ones in this district.

We give this week one of the finest poetical effusion with which we have yet been afflicted. It is simply gorgeous, and were we to give the name of the author, it would be heralded far and near. Being a young man, we feel like encouraging him. Those sweetly expressed lines:

Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow are nowhere. Come again with your inspirations, promising youth, and let them shine forth in all their startling splendor. "A Daniel has come to judgment."

COL. A. Y. HOOPER, a talented legal gentleman from Columbia City, gave us a call last Saturday. Mr. H. is favorably spoken of for Congressman for this district, and from his known ability and personal qualities, we are satisfied he would be the hardest man to beat in the district. We trust the Republicans will be liberal enough to nominate some man against whom the Democracy can make some showing, and we confess Hooper is not the man. Though we would like to see the Colonel prosper we want some little show in the race.

WE were shown the other day a series of steel engravings, which for beauty and design surpassed anything of the kind ever seen. They were in a series of twelve pictures, comprising "Belshazzar's Feast," "Our Savior," "Daniel in the Lion's Den," "Martin Luther," "John Calvin," "Go and Sin No More," "The Lord's Prayer," "The Angel Delivering Peter From Prison," "The Savior Raising Lazarus," "The Savior in the Garden of Gethsemane," and "Mary at the Savior's Tomb." The first named is 22x38 in size, and need only be seen to be pronounced unsurpassed.—They are all admirably executed and designed, and we can fully endorse the merits that are claimed for them. Geo. W. Gordon is the general agent for this series of engravings in DeKalb County, who will receive subscriptions for them. Agents wanted.

SMALL POX.—One case of smallpox has appeared in our place, in the family of Samuel Lauferty. It was communicated by his brother in law on a visit here a few weeks ago, while suffering with the varioloid. Mr. Lauferty did not know at the time that his relative was thus afflicted. About ten days ago his little boy grew sick, and the usual symptoms of the disease were developed. A consultation was held by our doctors and every means taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

There are many wild rumors thereto, and we have deemed it our duty to give a fair statement of the facts. Sanitary measures have been instituted and the utmost caution observed. All the members of Mr. Lauferty's household have remained within doors, and there is no fear at the present time of its having been communicated to others. The woman who was in the employ of the family at the time is now at her home several miles east of this, suffering from the infection. The case here is convalescing, and our citizens are entirely at rest as to its spread. No one need now be deterred from visiting Auburn for fear of this disease.

EEL RIVER RAILROAD.—The Logansport Pharos of last week says that there is danger of Logansport losing the Eel River Railroad without persons living along the line of the road, and the public generally exhibit more liberality in the matter of granting the right of way. Up to this time great trouble and expense has been incurred in securing the right of way across the lands on the line of the road, and an opposition has been developed entirely unexpected. The danger to the road is serious, and the contractors declare they will cease work without a different feeling is manifested. It will take a large sum of money to purchase the right of way, and we call upon the people generally to exert their influence in assisting the company to overcome this unexpected obstacle. The defeat of the road now would be a blow to Logansport, and her enterprise, from which she would not recover for years. It is too important to be trifled with, and we hope our citizen will take immediate action in the matter.

TOWN ELECTION.—We must, again, for another year at least, submit to Republican rule in our place, which we trust will be some little better than the last. Republicans of this place are so partisan that we believe they would have voted for the old Board had they been nominated, in the face of their imbecile Administration. Not so with the Democracy.—Quite a number voted for the best men without regard to party. Yet with all this, we increased some little over last year. We came within two of electing a trustee and six more votes would have given us the Marshal. A number of Democrats did not manifest enough interest to vote, and so it went by default. If all our votes had been cast, and theirs, too, we would have elected about half the officers of the town, at least. The whole vote cast was 202, with 40 votes not polled. Last year the votes cast was 166, with 20 votes not pulled. This gives us an increase in one year, in the voting population of 56, which ought to show people outside that Auburn is rapidly increasing in population.

The Board elected is: 1st Ward, C. Beugnot; 2nd Ward, H. E. Altenburg· 3d Ward G. A. Porter; 4th Ward, J. W. McKay; 5th Ward, W. A. Lowry; Clerk, Albert Robbins; Marshal, M. C. Markle; Treasurer, J. Abright; Assessor, Wyllys Griswold.

Numbering of Ballots Illegal.

We thought that it was generally understood that the Supreme Court of Indiana had decided that the numbering of ballots by inspectors of elections was null and void.

A case comes up from Tippecanoe county, in a suit brought by a Mr. Williams against the inspector of election for Fairfield Township in that County, Mr. Williams protested against his vote being numbered, and upon the Inspector disregarding his protest, he sued him and recovered $300 damages, and the Supreme Court decided in Williams favor. So now, we say to our friends that if the Inspectors of Election presume, in wanton violation of the law and in utter disregard of the decision of the Supreme Court, to number their ballots, to earnestly protest against the same and to inform these gentry that if they dare to do so they will most certainly be made to pay the penalty of their infraction of the law.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Sun publishes the following congratulatory telegram to Mr. Greeley:

WASHINGTON, May 4.

To Horace Greeley:

Allow me to congratulate you on being selected to lead a movement which, by the will of the people and God's blessing, is to reform and purify the Government.

(Signed.) LYMAN TRUMBULL.

WASHINGTON, May 4.

To H. Greeley:

I warmly welcome your nomination and predict your election.

MAY COMES.

April gave her weeping tears
To May, who like a God of war
From far with chariot of fire
Came, her eyes the lightnings;
And her voice the rolling thunder.
Man weary with the toil of day
Could not believe that it was May.
Far more it seemed like God in
Majesty to judge the world;
In fire and wrath to punish
Satan, and the day of peace
To bring. Yea more it seemed
As if the Lord of Hosts in strength
Of battle hurled His fury at the Dragons head. 'Twas May, who Came in strength that she might Show her power forth. Her wealth
Shall with abundance bless the Land. Lovely May, with joy we Welcome you. Bring flowers and love,
Bring peace and plenty within
Thy arms. Bring joy and happiness
To every heart. The works
Of Nature wake their harps of Praise to thee. The Lord, our God,
His angels sends to till the flowers,
Those stars of earth of which our
Lowly Jesus loved to tell, to Tune anew the harps of birds, who
Love to sing in Sylvan bowers.
May, in the Sylvan bowers of earth,
Will find a long love song to Greet her, when she comes with
All the bliss of heaven to meet us,
How we love in Sylvan bowers
To gather bliss among the flower.
To all who love these lines of
Fleeting pleasures, I would say
Follow the Lamb of God who died
Upon the tree. Yea died for all
Of us that we from sorrow might,
Be free.

DEATHS.

PALMER—Mrs. Cathaine Palmer, died last Monday evening, at her residence, on Van Buren street, aged about 61 years. She was stricken with appoplexy a few days ago, this being the third time. She was buried on Tuesday afternoon.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No,' send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers' the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

A pious but uncultivated Judge closed a sentence with the following touching reproach: 'Prisoner at the bar, nature has endowed you with a good education and respectable family connections, instead of which you go prowling round the country stealing ducks.'

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers] equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it he will send a copy of the prescription used, [free of charge], with directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. Parties wishing the prescription will please address

A Young Man of Means.

I arrived in New York, a few days ago, and immediately took rooms at the Astor. I have always made it a rule to have the best of everything, even if I am obliged to get trusted for it. I had not been at the Astor but one day when the clerk brought me my bill.

It is customary, said I, to pay by the day?

It is, with young men of your stamp, he replied.

What kind of a stamp do you take me for? said I.

You look like a two cent stamp, he replied very insulting. You either pay the bill or go out. Have you got any money? said he.

My estimable young friend, I replied, you have probably heard of Ben Franklin long deceased. That eminent physician was at one time in the proverb line, and did a very good business. He said among other things, that time is money. Now, I haven't got any money, but as regards time, I am in affluent circumstance, and if you will receipt that bill, I will give you a check for as much time as you think equivalent, and throw you in a couple of hours for your trouble.

He made no reply, but from the fact of the porter's coming up immediate after removing my trunk to the sidewalk and hustling me out after it, I inferred that I wasn't considered a financial success.

I immediately called a hackman, and told him to take me to a cheap but respectable hotel. And the cheaper it is, I added, the more respectable I shall consider it.

He drove me to the Excelsior House, and I told him I was under a great many obligations to him, and if at any time I could do him a favor, I should feel grived if he didn't speak to me about it, for my proud spirit spurns an obligation.

If you don't fork over them fifty cents, sir, said he, there'll be a funeral in your family, and it won't be your wife, nor your children.

But I am busted, said I. If meeting-houses were selling two for a cent, I could not buy even the handle of a contribution box.

He swore at me awfully and said he would have it out of my trunk, so he bust it open.

But the contents of that trunk are far from valuable, for I carry it filled with sawdust. It looks just as respectable, and in a case of emergency of this kind is invaluable.

◆

Charles Livingstone, a convict at the Jeffersonville (Ind.) Penitentiary, recently made an attempt to escape, which is thus described:

"He called to his assistance several of his fellow prisoners, and had himself secreted in a box containing spokes, and in this way was taken through the gates of the prison to the warehouse of Messrs. Hall, Sage & Co., prison contractors. In arranging the box his confiters had forgotten to lable it 'This side up with care,' and it was permitted to stand the wrong end up, and thus Livingstone was compelled to enact the part of an acrobat standing on his head. The unpleasantness of the situation, and the pain caused thereby, soon compelled him to make his presence known, by calling, as loudly as possible under the circumstance, to be released. When the box was opened, it was found that Livingstone was nearly exhausted.

◆

Why Some are Poor.

Cream is allowed to mould and also spoil.

Silver spoons are used sometimes to scrape kettles.

The scrubbing brush is left in the water.

Fine handled knives are thrown into hot water.

Brooms are never hung up and soon spoiled.

Dishcloths are thrown where mice can destroy them.

Tubs are left in the sun to dry and fall apart.

Clothes are left on the line to whip to pieces by the wind.

Pie crust is left to sour instead of making a few tarts for tea.

Dried fruit is not taken care of in season, and becomes wormy.

Vegetables are thrown away that would warm for breakfast.

The cork is left out of the sugar jar and flies take possession.

Bits of meat are thrown out that would make hash.

Coffee, tea and pepper are left to stand open and lose strength.

Pork spoils for want of salt and because the brine wants scalding.

◆

SOUND ADVICE.

The following paragraph, clipped from a lengthy editorial in a recent issue of the World, commends itself to our judgment as peculiarly appropriate at this time:

And yet, we may perhaps be permitted to say, without offence to anybody, that this raking into the past record of public men willing to join the great movement for reform, is not, in all respects, quite wise. The new movement cannot be successful without ignoring past differences of opinion. Its very basis, its fundamental condition, is, that citizens who have fought each other on issues now settled or dead, may cordially co-operate in matters on which they at present agree. A leading plank of the new platform is universal amnesty; but this implies, on the part of the Liberal Republicans, a complete obliteration of what leading Southern men have done in the recent past. And so, if Democrats and Liberal Republicans are to act together in this Presidential canvass, they must necessarily sink out of sight many topics on which they have heretofore been in sharp conflict. It is a necessity of the new situation that "bygones be bygones." If we fully agree as to what ought to be done now, why should men whose hearts are in the new movement be pestered and worried with the stand they took in obsolete controversies? There is no good reason why the conscientious differences of honest men on questions now out of politics, should be revived and flung in their faces to obstruct their future co-operation. Let the dead past bury its dead. Let bygones be bygones between citizens whose patriotic zeal impels them to act together and strength en each other in the present crisis.

Gorver & Baker's
Sewing Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD,
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and oll its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & Mo. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

THE BALANCE WHEEL.

The world's, so full of talent,
Will be nearer full of right,
When people do the best they can,
And do it with their might;
And, while we talk of doing,
There's a point I would reveal;
You make an even speed, if you
Will wear—a balance wheel.

Some folks are ever preaching,
And are ever praying, too;
They'd have you practice what they say,
But not as they would do;
You never see example
Of the holy things they feel;
They have no moral power,
For they have no—balance wheel.

Brown thinks, if he is social,
That his wealth is sure to grow
He button-holes you 'bout the time
You'd give a V to go;
He's thick with all the sporting men,
And bore's you till you feel
That Brown's a clever fellow,
But he lacks—a balance wheel.

Smith tries the game of dignity,
And makes a grand display;
He frowns on every living thing
That comes within his way;
No person will approach him,
And no person design to kneel;
But people very freely say
He needs—a balance wheel.

Tom vows he will be practical,
He realy labors hard,
And aims to be a millionaire,
Like Astor and Girard;
He never reads a paper,
Yet he works away with zeal,
And looses all because he failed
To get—a balance wheel.

A scholar says that learning
Is the only noble aim;
He studies morning, noon and night,
Till he is near insane;
His head is full of wisdom
That he never will reveal;
So mark him down as nothing
For he lacks—a balance wheel.

Bill forms a resolution;
He is 'bound to make a sum,'
By 'giving in' to ev'ry man,
And differing with none;
He's never slow with 'Yes' and 'No.'
And slip'ry as an eil,
His neighbors say he is an ass,
And lacks—a balance wheel,

Sam hates the name of weathercock,
And would reverse the rule;
When once he takes a notion,
There's a notion with a mule;
If he should find his error,
'Tis a thing he'll not reveal,
The people say he is a stick
And needs—a balance wheel.

No wonder that so many fail,
And fizzle out again;
They take the stuff for one great man
And make two little men;
Or venturing beyound their depth,
They drown their fiery zeal;
You find them known as—able men
Who lack—a balance wheel.

There world, so full of talent,
Would be nearer full of right,
If we would run the engine
With its whole effective might;
And though we're doing wonders,
We would greater things reveal,
If on the apparatus
Each would hang a balance wheel.

Horace Greeley.

Horace Greeley was born in Amherst, New Hampshire, February 3d, 1811. His father, Zaccheus Greeley, was a farmer. His childhood was characterized by eagerness, as well as aptitude in the acquisition of knowledge, fondness for study rather than play, and a habit of closely scrutinizing whatever phenomena came in his way. He was scarcely ten years old before he had read, chiefly by the light of pine knots, every readable book accessible within seven miles of his father's house. His delight in books led him, while yet a child, to the determination to be a printer. In 1821, the family removed to Westhaven, Vermont, where for five years he assisted his father in his labors as a farmer, at the same time eagerly availing himself of every opportunity for reading and study. In the spring of 1826, he entered the office of the "Northern Spectator," at East Pultney, Vermont, as an apprentice to the art of printing. He speedily became an expert workman, while he availed himself of the peculiar facilities for intellectual improvement which a printing office ever affords. He became the best workman in the office, and sometimes rendered important assistance in editing the paper.

In June, 1830, when he was in his twentieth year, his apprenticeship suddenly terminated by the discontinuance of the "Northern Spectator," the breaking up of the establishment at East Pultney. His knowledge of political statistics, of party movements and their leaders, was so extensive that, young as he was, he was regarded as an authority in such matters. His parents were now residing in Erie county, Pennsylvania. After spending a few weeks with them, he worked for a short time in Jamestown and Lodi, New York, and subseqnently for a somewhat longer period at Erie, Pennsylvania.

In August, 1831, he went to New York city, with a scanty wardrobe, and only $10 in his pocket, in quest of employment, which he soon obtained. He worked as a journeyman in several different offices till January 1, 2833, when he commenced the printing business for himself, entering into partnership with Mr. Francis Story. The firm of Greeley & Story were the printers of Dr. Sheppard's "Morning Post," the first penny daily ever published in the world. This paper failed, however, in less than three weeks, and the firm of Greeley & Story at the end of six months was dissolved by the death of the junior partner. Mr. Greeley afterward took for his partners Mr. Jonas Winchester and Mr. E. Sibbett, and the business was continued under the name of Greeley & Co. The "New Yorker," a weekly paper of which Mr. Greeley was the editor, was commenced by the firm on the 22d of March, 1834. It was a political, literary and family newspaper, and in the department of political statistics especially it was regarded by all parties as an authority. Its circulation for that period was extensive, but owing to some defects in its business arrangements, it was not profitable to the proprietors, though it was continued for seven years. The slender income from the 'New Yorker' forced Mr. Greeley to angage in other labors. He supplied the 'Daily Whig' with its leading articles for some month, and for one year. in 1838–39, edited the 'Jeffersonian,' a weekly political journal published in Albany, devoted to the interests of the Whig party.

In 1840 he edited the Log Cabin, a weekly journal established to promote the interests of Wm. H. Harrison, then a candidate for the Presidency. This journal obtained a wide circulation, and exercised an important influence.

On the 10th day of April, 1841, Mr. Greeley commenced the publication of the New York Daily Tribune. In the following autumn the Weekly Tribune was issued, the New Yorker and Log Cabin being merged therein; and with these journals his name has since been identified. In 1848 Mr. Greeley was elected to Congress to fill a vacancy and served in that body from December 1, of that year to March 4, 1849, distinguishing himself chiefly by his opposition to the abuse of the mileage system. As an editor and a lecturer he labored zealously to promote the welfare of the laboring classes. In 1850 a volume of his essays were published under the title of 'Hints Towards Reforms.' In 1851 he made a voyage across the Atlantic and during his stay in England served as one of the jurymen at the Crystal Palace exhibition. After his return he published a volume entitled 'Glances at Europe.' In 1856 he published a 'History of the Struggle for Slavery Extension or Restriction in the United States from 1787 to 1856.' In 1859 he made a visit to California, traveling thither by way of Kansas, Pike's Peak and Utah.

During his California tour Mr. Greeley was everywhere well received, and at many points he addressed throngs of people on the topics of politics, the Pacific Railroad, temperance, and the like. On his return to the East, he found the country agitated by the stormy, political convulsions preceding and subsequent to the election of Mr. Lincoln to the Presidency. Mr. Greeley espoused the Union cause, but deprecated a resort to armed force. During the continuence of the struggle, while supporting the Government in its measures for the suppression of armed resistance to its authority, yet he left no opportunity unimproved, in showing his great anxiety for a restoration of peaceful relations between the people of the contending sections. It was to promote this object that Mr. Greeley proposed the famous 'Niagara Conference' of 1864. Although the meeting of distinguished civilians on the occasion was not productive of the good results which its promoters hoped to see, yet it served to show the abhorrence with which at least one of the actors regarded a state of warfare. Since the close of hostilities Mr. Greeley has been constantly employed, and all the great questions of the day have in turn received his attention. He was the first prominent Republican to plead for general amnesty to all who had engaged in hostilities against the Government. His labors in this direction have done much to create, in the North, a sentiment favorable to the removal of disabilities from the Southern people.

B. GRATZ BROWN.

B. Gratz Brown was born at Lexington, Kentucky, and is just 46 years old. He settled as a lawyer at St. Louis; entered the State Legislature at the age of 26; soon after became connected with the St. Louis Democrat, and edited it from 1854 to 1859; aided to start the Republican party in Missouri in 1857; raised and commanded a regiment in 1861—subsequently a brigade, was United States Senator from 1863 to 1867, and was elected Governor of Missouri on the broad platform of general amnesty in 1870. He, perhaps, precedes any other Republican as the founder of the Liberal party, which gathered in National Convention at Cincinnati. He is a careful, well-poised man, very firm in his convictions, of keen perceptions, and a firm believer in the power of the people to govern themselves, without the interference of outside force. He has proved a capable Governor of Missouri, and is more popular with its people to-day than when he was first elected to his present position.

Vanderbilt's Grave.

A newspaper correspondent recently described a tomb on Staten Island near an old Moravian church, reached by a beautiful and solitary road, and crossing a gracefully sloping hill. It is a subterranean vault about thirty feet square, laid in cement, and which is entered through a small granite temple of the Doric style, above which stands a shaft thirty feet in hight. An admirable statute of Grief adorns the temple and forms an addition to this retired sepulcher. Here Mr. Vanderbilt the now aged and feeble man, has prepared his final resting place—his grave which Spencer designates as: 'The world's sweet inn from pain and wearisome turmoil.'

The death of Buchanan Read is expected hourly.

Letter to Farmers.

BELOVED FARMERS:—Agricultur is the mother ov farmproduce; she is also the step-mother of gardin sass.

Rize at half past 2 o'clock in the morning, bild up a big fire in the kitchin, burn out two pounds ov kandels, and grease yure bates.

Wait pashuntly for da brake. When da dus brake, then commense to stir up the geese and worry the hogs.

Too much sleep is ruinous to geese and hogs. Remember yu kant git rich on a farm, unless yu rize at 2 o'clock in the morning, and stir up hogs and worry the geese.

The happiest man in the world is the farmer; he rizes at 2 o clock in the morning, he watches for da lite tew brake, and when she dus brake he goes out and stirs up the hogs and worrys the geese.

What is a lawyer? What is a merchant? What is a doktor? What is a minister? I answer, nothing!

A farmer is the nobless work ov God; he rizes at 2 o clock in the morning, and burns out haff a pound ov wood and two kords of kandels, and then goes out tu worry the geese and stir up the hogs.

Beloved farmers, adew,

JOSH BILLINGS.

Irish Wit.

The late James T. Brady was very fond of the natural ready wit of his countrymen. One day, speaking of this to a friend, he said, 'I'll just show you a sample. I'll speak to any of these men at work; and you will see that I will get my answer.' Stepping up to some men who were at work on a cellar near by, he spoke to them cheerfully: Good day, to you, boys. That looks like hard work for you.

'Fair an' it is,' was the answer, 'or we wouldn't be havin the doin of it.'

Pleased with this, he asked the man what part of Ireland he came from.

'Ha! said Brady, on hearing the name, I came from that region myself.

'Yis,' said the man, with another blow of his pick, 'there was many nice people in that place; but I never heard that any of them left it.'

Social Intercourse for Farmers.

Farmers necessarily live at considerable distance from each other, and in consequence of this and their habits of steady labor, confine themselves too much to their own fields and firesides. They and their families need recreation, need pleasures, need something to counteract the effect of the constant labor in which they are engaged. The mechanic in the village or city has his mind frequently drawn away from his work by that which is going on around him; but the farmer, being differently situated, finds nothing to break up the monotony, unless he seeks for it elsewhere. It is quite probable that more work would be accomplished, and a better tone of feeling be experienced, to say nothing of the more cheerful countenance which would be worn, if a half day each week were given to social intercourse with fellow farmers instead of devoting six full days each week to unremitting labor. After a day spent pleasantly away from home, the labor is not so irksome—the laborer is happier. Allowing that as much was not accomplished by giving a little time to relaxation, it should be borne in mind that food and raiment for the family, forage for the stock, and money for the bank, are not the only things worth striving for. We need happiness. But if a portion of this time be given to a wide-awake farmers club, ideas will be gained, practical knowledge acquired, which in time will bring about results far in excess of those which will be realized by the farmer who does not improve these opportunities.

KENNETH'S AMBUSCADE.

A Charming Story.

'Three girls domiciled in the very next room. There's an end to my writing for one month at least.'

Kenneth Ross pushed his papers into a confused heap, and lighted a cigar in a sort of quiet despair.

'There are cousins: Flora. Alice Aymer and Rosa Fernall—blue eyes, black eyes, and melting gray. By the way that monkey Rosa isn't bad looking. I rather fancy that peculiar shade of filbert brown hair, and big gray eyes and cheeks where the blood flutters like a pink pennon. Rosa Farnell would make a study for my next heroine. I may as well put her to some useful purpose. Heigho!'

Kenneth Ross paused a moment, as the peal of girlish laughter echoed in the adjoining apartment.

'They are laughing at me, I'll wager my opal scarf. Girls always think a bachelor fair game; they've no more respect for the dignity of the man than so many Brazilian monkeys.'

And Mr. Ross looked complacently in the mirror opposite, which reflected an oval brown face, with shining black hair and mustache, brilliant dark eyes, and a mirthful, spirited mouth.

Tap, tap, tap, sounded softly on the pannel of his door, even while he was engaged in taking his personal survey of himself, and he had just time to take his feet off the table before Miss Flora Edgeworth put her sunshiny little head into the room.

'Cousin Kenneth, are you there?'

'Yes.'

'May we come in?'

'Why you'll come in whether I grant permission or not, and may as well—Yes.'

'I just want the girls to see what a dear little scholarly den you have got here, all hung with pictures and meerschams and deer's horns, and darling dismal skulls, and—'

Flora threw open the door and admitted her companions—rosy, laughing damsels of eighteen and twenty-one.

'Here he is, girls—the old bachelor as he appears in his native wild!'

'Now, I tell you what, young ladies,' said Mr. Ross, throwing his half-smoked cigar deliberately out of the window, 'I must trouble you to be a little ceremonious.'

For Alice and Flora had pounced upon his loose manuscript, and were already laughing over the rather illegible chirography.

Miss Fernall stood near the door, a little confused, and very pretty, in her blushes and uncertainty.

'Alice! Flora! don't!' she appealed.

'It's no use, Miss Rosa, said Kenneth despairingly, 'Girls will you be so kind as to leave my writing desk alone? There is no use looking in that drawer, either, unless you are particularly interested in blacking brushes and old boots.'

'How can you, Flora?' pleaded the shocked Rosa.

'Oh, my, girls!' twittered Miss Edgeworth, ecstatically, 'here's a bottle of real Farine cologne. Out with your pocket handkerchiefs—be quick.'

But Mr. Ross preserved a stately silence.

'Don't be cross, Kenneth,' said Flora, sprinkling a scented dew drop on her yellow curls from the slender, foreign shaped bottle. 'We're going to the postoffice now. Rosa Fernall has written a twelve page letter to her sweetheart out in Canada—'

'Flora' exclaimed Rosa Fernal, turning scarlet.

'And,' pursued the relentless Flora, were, going to post it. Come, girls, the sun is getting more oppressive every minute.'

And the next moment Mr. Ross was left alone in the summer silence of the room, with heavy moss roses nodding at the open casement, and the dreamy murmur of maple boughs and far off bees in his ear.

'A twelve page letter to her sweet heart! pondered Mr. Kenneth with a very ominous contraction of the eyebrows. 'She must have had something very interesting to write. I wonder who is Canada, eh? I wish it was Van Dieman's Land.'

Mr. Ross rose from his easy chair, and began to walk up and down the floor.

'It's too confounded hot to breathe here! he said, impatiently, taking up his straw hat, 'I'll go and take a tramp in the woods. Twelve pages!—what could she have found to fill up twelve pages?'

Flora Edgeworth had succeeded in planting a thorn in her cousin's breast, all unconscious though she had been.

The sun was low in the cloudless western sky, when Kenneth Ross returned from his abstracted ramble in the woods, and the old fashioned country house was very still, as he ascended the oaken staircase, and went absently along the corridor towards his own apartment.

'Hallo!'

Mr. Ross gazed vacantly around the room with something of the bewildered feeling that might have belonged to the eastern prince when he found himself transported from pole to pole in an enchanted dream.

'I'm in the wrong room I do believe for there is Flora Edgeworth's white zephyr shawl on the bed, and Rosa's black velvet Derby hat, and no end of ribbons, and gloves, and lace collars on the bureau. I don't see how I ever came to make such a blunder—I must have been in a brown study.

He balanced the coquettish little black velvet 'Derby hat' on his hand as he spoke.

'So this is the fashionable style of the chapeau, eh? It certainly is a fact that women borrow their dress ideas now-a-day from the nobler sex. This is just a fac simile of my last summer's tile, and that little sacque with the big horn buttons is my cutaway coat over again. I wonder now whether Rosa's little hat would fit him?'

Mr. Ross adjusted the article of dress on one side of the curls jauntily, and viewed himself not ill-pleased in the mirror.

'Upon my word, it don't look so bad only this long, flapping veil is confoundedly in the way. And now where's the sacque. A little tight in the sleeves, but otherwise quite a decent fit, if a fellow holds his arm well back. There's Alice's blue muslin dress. I've two minds and a half to put it on just for the fun of the thing.'

A momentary silence ensued, followed by the rustling of muslin.

'It don't meet round my waist by at least good six inches, but I can hold it up. I wonder what makes the thing drag on the floor, and hang round one's legs so. Oh the crinoline ought to go under.'

For the 'dignity of manhood' we are sorry to chronicle the fact that our hero intent on the tableau solitaire, did actually then and there proceed to the closet, and piratically take down a hoop skirt, which he solemnly put on!'

Jupiter! how comical it feels!' he ejaculated, with an amused face, 'why I should not dare to go within a yard of a vase or statute, and I'm quite certain I should swamp all the chairs and tables I came near. Bother this trailing muslin—always in the way.'

For Mr. Ross had unthinkingly plunged his masculine boot through the delicate fabric of the dress.

'I'm not certain but that I should make quite a nice looking woman,' mused Kenneth strutting backwards and forwards before the mirror, with his Derby hat balanced daintily, and the blue muslin revealing about a foot and a half of calfskin boot and trousers. 'On the whole—tomb of the prophet! Is that the girls?'

Mr. Ross gave a blindly desperate jerk at his sacque, and a pull at the crinoline, but all in vain.

The sweet gay voices, intermingled here and there with a ringing laugh, or a snatch of a song, drew nearer and nearer.

For an instant Mr. Ross wildly contemplated a rush through the hall to his own door, but a moment's reflection convinced him that such a retreat would be impossible.

'I must stay and face it out,' he thought with a cool prespiration breaking out on his forehead; 'but hold on there's the closet. It's just possible they will only stay here a minute or two.'

And Mr. Kenneth Ross, totally oblivious to the majesty of man fled precipitately into the closet, tumbling over his crinoline and muslin in a most disastrous manner, and hopelessly splitting open the seams of poor Alice's sacque.

'Why the deuce didn't think to secure the key?' he thought, as the girls streamed into the room. 'However, I can hold tight on to the door handle, if any one attempts to get in. If—by Jove—the girls should see me in this rig, I should never hear the last of it. I don't see either why I'm obliged to play the eaves-dropper when its against my will.

He leaned up against the shelves and breathlessly awaited the progress of events.

'Why.' ejaculated a soft voice—Rosa's own, 'where's my Derby? Was I careless enough to leave it down stairs? Flora you have hidden it.

'I wonder what you'll accuse me of next,' said Flora in an injured tone of voice.

'You told Mr. Ross that Cousin Simon's letter was to—

'Your sweetheart. Well, he ought to be I'm sure. Mr. Simon Montrose is the handsomest young man that I know.

'Oh, Flora, he don't compare with Mr. Ross.'

'Rosa Fernall, be honest,' said Flora, speaking indistinctly, with two or three hair pins in her mouth, 'who do you like the best, cousin Ken. or Simon Montrose?'

'Flora!'

'Tell me now, honestly.'

The answer came in a low, half inaudible voice—

'Kenneth!'

The heart under Alice's sacque gave a joyous leap.

Mr. Ross' head came in contact with something on the upper shelf, and down came a perfect rain of band-boxes.

There was an instant of terrified silence, and then all the girls began to scream—

'Mercy! ejaculated Alice, what is it?'

'How silly we are here!' said Rosa, exceedingly tremulous; 'It is only the cat.'

'As if a cat could make such a noise as that,' sobbed Flora. 'Call Uncle John—bring a revolver! Alice do look and see what it is.'

'Do you look,' faltered Alice, retreating.

'I'll look myself,' said Rosa Fernell, very bravely advancing to the rescue.

But when the door handle refused to turn even she blanched.

'Some one is holding the door inside. Call the men.'

'There's no necessity,' quoth a voice from behind the pannels.

And the next moment the closed door flew open, and the crinoline, together with a countenance whose utter sheepishness can never be described, came forth.

'Cousin Kenneth Ross!' shriekde Flora.

'Mr. Ross,' faltered Miss Farnell.

'Why, it cant be possible,' ejaculated Alice.

And then the three girls clung to one another in paroxysms of laughter.

'The fact is ladies,' continued Kenneth, confusedly, I—want some one to help me off with this mouse-trap of a hoop skirt. Miss Alice I'm very sorry I've split your sacque open, but—well, if you don't stop laughing, I can't explain, that's the long and short of it.'

But Rosa Fernell had stopped laughing already, and the pink of her cheeks was deepening into scarlet.

She had just remembered the words carelessly spoken in that room, not five minutes ago.

In an inexpicably short space of time Mr. Ross had torn off his feminine adornments and fled ignominiously, followed by the peals of laughter of his cousin and Alice, Aymer.

Rosa—strange little piece of contradiction—had began to cry.

'Poor little thing she's hysterical.' said Aunt Megg, who had just appeared on the scene.

But Rosa Farnell was not hysterical.

The full delicious moon of a summer was in the mild heaven that night, as Kenneth Ross strolled into the garden moodily puffing at a cigar, and contemplating leaving Warburgh to avoid the girl's sarcasm.

'I was a fool,' quoth Kenneth loud —'but who's there?'

I was Rosa, with two or three white clover pinks in her hand coming from the lower part of the garden.

And by the full brilliant moonlight, Kenneth saw the traces of tears on her cheek.

'Rosa you have been crying.'

'No I haven't!'

And to prove the truth of her assertion, Rosa began to cry afresh.

'Look here, Rosa,' said the young man gravely, 'I have been thinking of leaving Warburgh, to-morrow.'

'But,' pursued Mr. Ross, 'I'll stay if—if you'll only tell me to my face what you told my cousin when I was hidden away like foolish rat in a trap, Rosa. Speak to me little one!'

'What shall I tell you?' faltered Rosa.

'That you love! that you will be my dear and cherished wife!'

And she told me so, in language that lovers best like to hear.

And Mr. Kenneth stayed in Warburgh and braved the ridicule of Alice and Flora, while little Rosa marshalled on his side.

But he never read the girls any more homilies on the dignity of manhood or the majesty of human nature.

To use Flora's expressive language, 'it wouldn't have gone down.'

A Woman Cut Up and Boiled in a Soap Kettle.

From the Kansas City Times.

Information was received at this office last evening of a somewhat mysterious transaction that has created considerable gossip in Sixth Street, West Kansas City. It appears that a house formerly occupied by a surgeon, and situated on Sixth street, has recently been leased by a widow lady from Harlem. When the house was opened a most nauseous stench invaded the nostrils of the parties who entered. The order was of a nature peculiar to the dead, and at once excited the curiosity of members of the family. An investigation made by the daughter of the Harlem lady discovered in the corner of the cellar of the empty house the entrails of a human being, wrapped up in some old clothing.

This discovery was mentioned in the neighborhood, when a Scotch family, residing next door, explained the mystery as follows:

A short time ago a young lady died in the vicinity in a state of abject destitution. She was supposed to have been buried by the city. A few days afterward the attention of the Scotch store keeper was attracted to the cellar of the house occupied by the doctor. He made close inspection of the cellar in company with another man, and was horrified to discover the body of a woman in the cellar in course of dissection. The wife of the Scotchman informed the police that the next day the doctor was engaged in boiling up the remains of the woman. She asserts that she distinctly saw the head of the woman thrown into the soap kettle with the other remains. The stench is reported to have been very annoying to the neighbors, so much so that a lot of horns were thrown upon the fire to burn and neutralize the sickening odor.

That the body of an unknown white woman has been mysteriously disposed of in this manner, there can be but very little doubt. If the statement of these people can be relied upon, the woman was young and had beautiful teeth. Who she was and how she died and where the body was procured, cannot be, at present, explained. It will remain, as it now is, a mystery.

TOM. O'CONNOR, an unassuming Irishman, is said to be the largest cattle owner in Texas. He does not know exactly how many he has, but the total will not vary much from 60,000. It is a rule in that State that a calf, as soon as weaned, is the property of the first man who brands it. O'Connor, therefore, seems to have been active with his brand.

Indiana is up to snuff. Mrs. Byrne has been nominated for constable in Harrison township, Henry county. If elected, Mrs. Byrne should make it red-hot for evil doers.

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 16, 1872.

Democratic National Convention.

The Democratic National Central Committee met in New York on last Wednesday and unanimously agreed to hold a National Convention at Baltimore on July 9th, 1872.

THE Democratic Convention of Tennessee, which met at Nashville, on Thursday, declared in favor of the Cincinnati nominees, Greeley and Brown.

THE New York Herald refers to General Grant as 'the soldier and philosopher.' The Herhld is somewhat sarcastic in its professions of regard for Ulysses.

IN response to the inquiry whether there was any possibility of his withdrawing, Mr. Greeley answered that no action taken by the Republican Convention would cause his withdrawal, but that the failure of the Democratic Conventionto to endorse him might.

THE Washington specials to the Cincinnati Commercial have the following speculations on the Presidential situation:

'Rumors that Grant will be thrown overboard, or else that he will withdraw, still continue to multiply and the opinion of leading politicians now, is that he will be thrown aside for some more popular man.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that conclusive evidence was furnished the Congressional Committee that Hon. David S Gooding was elected member of Congress from the Fourth Indiana District by a majority of seventeen votes, the radical Congress awarded the seat to Jerry Wilson who claimed a majority of four. The voice of the people is thus annulled for purely partisan purposes. Will these outrageous proceedings never cease?

Infamous.

It is susceptible of proof that Deputy Sheriff McFarland voted the inmates of the county jail in the Ninth Ward, even to taking the negro Harvey, a resident of Ohio, and under sentence to ten years' imprisonment, in the penitentiary for murder, and with the approval of Sheriff Ruckle. By such means the Grant party succeeded in the recent city election, and they claim it as an Administration victory.—Ind. S'n:

OWN thing is already certain—Horace Greeley is personally gaining ground at a rate which his most ardent friends could scarcely have antipated. We know of several strict Republicans in this county who would have nothing to do with the Liberal movement a few weeks ago, but who now declare their purpose of voting for Mr. Greeley. This is the case everywhere.—No man could have been nominated at Cincinnati who can control so vast a number of Republican votes in opposition to the regular nominee. It is now probable that Mr. Greeley will develop so much personal strength as to defeat the new and selfish combination for discarding Grant and compromising upon a third man. Mr. Greeley's friends may be so numerous before the assembling of the Philadelphia Convention that thew will consent to the withdrawal nor to compromise.

Hon. M. C. Kerr.

In speaking of the able and exhaustive argument presented by Hon. M. C. Kerr, in support of a tariff for Revenue only, the Seymour Sun says:

This speech marks Mr. Kerr as a statesman second to none, and will place him high upon the nation's roll of great men. Mr. Kerr is one of the few men of the present day who have been faithful to the people in all things.

Indiana would do herself honor, and Mr. Kerr no more than justice to put him at the head of the ticket in the present canvass, as a candidate for Governor.

He would carry more than 100 Republicans in Jackson county, and we believe the Second District would give him ten thousand majority over Gen. Browne.

The nominee for Governor ought to be put upon the ticket for the purpose of being Governor in fact, if elected, and not simply to carry some one else into that office.

A STARTLING report comes from Washington, that Senator Morton has abandoned the championship of Gen. Grant, and is now seeking the nomination for himself, employing his brother-in-law, Mr. Burbank of Omaha, as a tool to forward the "conspiracy." It is stated that said Burbank has addressed "strictly confidential" circulars to the delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, suggesting that Gen. Grant is not just the man for the "crisis" and that Senator Morton is. One of these "letters,, fell into the hands of a delegate, who revealed the plot. So the story goes—but it lacks confirmation.

We copy the following items from the Louisville Courier-Journal:

All roads that lead from Greeley go to Grant.

Horace Greeley was weaker the day he was nominated than he will ever be this side of election day.

Greeley holds the pen, Grant holds the sword. And is it not written, 'The pen is mightier than the sword?'

THE Washington special to the St. Louis Times thus defines the status of Hon. D. W. Voorhees:

Much has been made of a dispatch sent hence by Dan. Voorhees, regarding the Cincinnati nominees. It by no means indicates that he will not support the ticket. He simply says he will await the decision of the Democratic Convention, and will abide by by its action. In private conversation he expresses himself as very well satisfied with Greeley, and thinks, as do nearly all the Democrats here that he is bound to win.

In regard to the probable nominee of the Philadelphia Convention for the Vice Presidency, the same correspondent says:

Notwithstanding the Grant Convention is so near at hand, we hear very little of it. The fact that Grant is to be renominated divests it of all interest regarding the leading place on the ticket. All that is said bears upon the Vice Presidency, and it seems very well understood that Colfax—even if he shall have any strength at all—will have a severe struggle. It is possible that he may not be mentioned outside the two or three State delegations that have been instructed for him. He has no one to say anything for him, nor dees any one say anything against him.

Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, has a strong party working in his interests, and he already has the delegations of several States pledged to him—among them Mississippi and Arkansas.

Senator Cameron is also pushing his claims with unusual assiduity. His Senatorial term expires next March, and he has no hope whatever of being re-elected, even should the Radicals carry Pennsylvania. His recent conduct in forcing an obnoxious State ticket upon his party has weakened and probably killed him as a manager there. It is thought, however, he may still have some strength as a candidate against an outside man. It is understood Grant leans toward Cameron, under the belief that he will be necessary to balance some of Greeley's great strength in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hendricks' Position.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer interviewed Mr. Hendricks, a few days ago, upon the political situation, and he thus represents his feelings and opinions:

Mr. Hendricks opened the conversation by stating, in the most polite manner possibie, that he had heretofore avoided conversations for publication with newspaper men, but that he had no objection whatever to exchanging views in confidence with any intelligent person upon political or other topics. In response to this I hastened to assure the ex-Senator that I did not belong to that class of newspaper men who had brought disgrace on the profession by worming themselves into the confidence of prominent men, and then making what they considered great 'hits' by the betrayal of secrets and publication of the unguarded expressions of private conversations.

After thus introducing National expressions of opinion we got along very nicely, and a long, and to me, very interesting conversation upon the state of the country, the position of parties in Indiana and elsewhere, the comparative strength of candidates, etc., ensued.

At the conclusion of the conversation I wrote out the following statement of Mr. Hendricks' position, and received his consent to have it go before the public as such:

'I will make no effort to influence the action of the National Democratic Convention, and will abide by its decision. At this time, in view of the fact that there has been no concert of action among the leaders and prominent men of the party, it behooves all to move with prudence, dignity and caution. The question of indorsing the Cincinnati nominees, or making straight-out Democratic nominations, is one that should be well weighed and carefully considered. It is impossible, at this early day, to say what the feeling of the masses of the Democeatic party in Indiana toward the Cincinnati ticket is.

As far as I can judge, the Democracy of Indiana will not occupy any decided ground until after the meeting of the State Convention, which takes place on the 12th of next month.—That convention will doubtless nominate a straight Democratic ticket and refer the question of Presidential nominations to the National Convention. As far as I am concerned, I feel in duty bound to sustain the action of the National Convention. If it nominates a straight Democratic ticket, I will supper it with all the zeal, influence and ability I possess. If it endorses the nomination of Greeley and Brown, I shall certainly support that ticket with equal zeal and energy.—Any other statement of my position in regard to this matter has been made without authority.'

In conclusion Mr. Hendricks referred to the report that he had volunteered to run for Governor on the Liberal or any other ticket as a mistake. The office had no attractions for him, and nothing but belief that his name would add to the prospects of the Democratic ticket's success would induce him to accept the nomination.

THOSE who have horses are happy.—They wear fine linen, and drive to and fro every day. Alas, we have no horse—not even a clothes horse, nor a saw horse, nor a horse chesnut. If we had a kingdom we'd play Richard, and offer it for a horse—one of the gentle kind that is sound in wind and limb—warranted to have been born in the year when all good horses were born—just seven years old—one that was well trained, and would'nt balk, nor bite, nor kick, nor run away and make us sell the buggy for kindling wood, and do other naughty tricks. Yes, if we had a kingdom we'd own a horse, sure.

THE Indianapolis Sentinel has changed hands, having passed under the control of Messrs. L. G. Matthews, John Fishback, T. F. Ryan and John C. Shoemaker, Auditor of State. Mr. Mathews will have the editorial management. The price paid for the stock, machinery, good will, &c. is $75,000.

THE SAGE AT HOME.

Chopping Wood at Chappaqua.

[From the New York World of Monday]

Mr. Greeley arrived in Chappaqua at ten o'clock Saturday morning, accompanied by Alvin J. Johnson, Esq., his son, and two other gentlemen. His visit at so early an hour was not looked for by the inhabitants, and consequently but few people were at the depot to receive him. Having alighted from the train, he retired to his residence, which is about a quarter of a mile from the depot, and situated almost in the center of

HIS EXTENSIVE FARM.

It is a very large French-roof house, and is entirely concealed by the foliage of the trees. To the west of this house stands a larger and more finely finished one, which has just been completed. The main farm contains about seventy-five acres, and for the most part is covered with little trees. The branches have all been trimmed, it is said, by Mr. Greeley himself, who, when home goes to Chappaqua, walks over his farm to see what is necessary to be done. Shortly after his arrival in the village it was found out by the people, and scarcely two hours had elapsed when many of his friends from Pleasantville and the surrounding towns called to see him, and all congratulated him on his nomination. When he had rested he examined his axes which are numerous and which are always kept by his gardiner in good trim, and in his shirt-sleeves started for the woods where he

CUT DOWN A NUMBER OF TREES.

Before he went he left directions that if any person shauld call for him to send them to the woods. While he was at work a large number were in search of him; some found him out but others were forced to return again to his house and wait until he came back. Late in the afternoon Judge Hart, of Mount Cisco, and I. T. Williams, of Chappaqua, called on him, and remained until he started for New York. At six o'clock a dispath arrived from this city for him, and as soon as he read it he made preparations

TO LEAVE CHAPPAQUA

And took the 6 P. M. train. The residents of Pleasantville, Unionville, Kenisco and White plains, who had heard of his arrival in the morning, concluded to honor him with a serenade, and for that purpose Searl's band of Pleasantville was engaged,—When the serenaders arrived at Chappaqua, about 7 P. M., they were sadly disappointed to find that Mr. Greeley had left. At first they refused to credit the story, and not until one of their number had called at his residence was it believed. His sudden departure caused considerable surmises, and from the variety of opinions it was almost impossible to get at the real cause. The writer, who called at the house of Mr. Greeley's gardener, learned that a large number of people had intended to call on him at Chappqua, and he, fatigued by the visits of so many people, had resolved to pack up and return to this city with Mr. Johnson, at whose house he remained.

What Grant Thinks.

It is evident that Grant and his henchmen are not easy with the political prospects. They do not want Greeley to be supported by the Democracy, because they see in that event the handwriting on the wall. The New York World's Washington correspondent thus states the fears and the hopes of Grant:

'A prominent Republican Senator, and an earnest friend of General Grant, had a conversation with the President to-day relative to the Cincinnati Convention and its nominations. The President stated that as the matter now stands he did not think the Cincinnati Convention amounted to much. All depended upon the action of the Democratic party; if they indorsed the nominees of the Cincinnati Convention the contest would be at least close. He did not think, however, that the Democrats would take Greeley. He did not see how they could, although the Convention had dodged the tariff question in their platform. He had no idea that the Democrats would do so. That was one of their live issues, and they were not prepared to surrender it. He had great faith that the regular Democratic Convention would meet, that it would nominate a straight ticket, and that the Republicans who shouted for Greeley at Cincinnati would come back to the fold from which they had strayed. This would, he thought leave Greeley without any support, except a few personal followers, and the fight would be between the Republican and Democratic candidates. When it was suggested to the President that perhaps the Democrats would endorse Greeley's nomination, the President simply remarked that that would put a different phase upon the question. But he has no idea the Democrats will do so.'

That's the Way the Money Goes!

They say that Grant has reduced the national debt $200,000,000 during his administration. Yet the records of the Treasury Department do not show it, nor do the records of the War Department show what has become of the millions of dollars seized or turned into that department during the last five years. In the House at Washington an inquiry has been raised as to what has become of the vast sums of money paid into the war department, and to know why and how that department has expended one hundred and five millions and five hundred thousand dollars in excess of all appropriations within the past five years. There must be something very rotten in that Denmark when a single bureau can pay out of the United States Treasury, in the time named, so much money in excess of the amount voted it. People would like to know where it has gone to. How much of it has been used to influence State elections? How much of it has been used to influence Judges on the United States Court bench? How much of it has been used to keep carpet-bag Governors in office, and to protect loyal plunderers in different States?

THERE seems to be but little prospect for the success of the movement started for the purpose of throwing Grant at Philadeldelphia, and either nominate Greeley there or compromising on some third man as a candidate. There is no doubt that Morton and some of the other schemers and banditti of the Republican party are getting badly scared, and would gladly make some bargain which would reunite the disrupted party and insure the election of a regular candidate, and the preservation of the party organization for the purpose of retaining the spoils. But it has gone too far for this. Morton and his fellow brigands have underestimated the strength of the Liberal movement too long. They have directed the purpose of the various State conventions solely towards the renomination of Grant. Some fifteen States have named their delegates to do this work. The delegates are of such character that they cannot look upon more than one idea at a time. They will understand that they have been sent to Philadelphia to vote for Grant, and they will do nothing else.

Such of the politicians and journals as pretend to belong to the Liberal movement, and yet favor a compromise with the regular party shutting out Grant, will meet with discomfiture also. They seem to ignore the fact that the constant and cumulative exposure of Radical corruption has aroused the people to a sense of self-protection, and that they will not now allow themselves to be betrayed again into the support of an Administration like that which has weighed them down for the past three years.—Already Mr. Greeley may boast of having at least one-third of the Republican party in its popular element. Convinced of his strength, he will scarcely care to sacrifice himself to the demands of the politicians. Nor will his hosts of friends permit him to do so. If the politicians cannot make this proposed cambination and compromise, the people of the country will elect a President to suit themselves.—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

The Man Who Fired the Nauvoo Temple.

[From the Peoria (Ill.) Transcript.]

Among the events of the famous Mormon war was the burning of the Nauvoo Temple. The structure was burned in the night, and so successful was the party engaged in the firing, that probably he was never even suspected.

The recent death of the incendiary, however, has removed the necessity of further secrecy, and a day or two ago we were put in possession of his name and the facts connected with the burning of the Temple by the only living person cognizant of them.

The Temple was fired by Joseph B. Agnew, who recently died in Appanoose township, Hancock county, in this State, at the age of 58 years. It was always supposed that the party who burned the building had entered through the basement, but the facts are: Mr. Agnew surreptitiously obtained a key to one of the doors of the Temple some time before the act. No one was engaged with him, and only four knew he was the party. Three of these are now dead. Agnew prepared his fire balls and other combustibles at his residence. Placing these in his saddle bags, he rode on horseback to Nauvoo, and in the night entered the Temple with his key, passed up the cupola, arranged his materials and fired them, and then quietly escaped the way he came. Our informant who is a responsible and prominent citizen of the western part of the State, says he thinks he can procure the key of the Temple which Agnew secured in order to accomplish his work.

A pugilistic encounter was iminent the other night when it was ascertained that the Marshal was'nt around, and it dried up.

The standing call of this section of country is for more rain. The ground has not been thoroughly wet for ten years—more or less.

Dolly Varden sassage is all the rage now. It is made of spotted coach dogs, and striped like the running gears of a wagon.

It is pretty near time for announcements to be made of candidates for the various offices. We charge $5 for each, invariably in advance.

We have had several fights, this week, among our young men, and we hear of two or three more that are to come off soon. Big business, boys.

One of our fine-haired boys is learning the boot-blacking business. Last Saturday he gobbled in twenty cents in about five hours—he still boards at home.

Grant used to set type, Colfax is an old newspaper man, while Greeley and Brown are experienced printers. Four typos running for the highest offices in the people's gift ought to make a good impression.

We have heard it stated that it is dangerous to borrow newspapers, as there is reason to fear small-pox. The best way is to get your paper direct from the publisher. Then you are always safe. Terms $2 per year. Ahem!

About these days, ye housewife armeth and equippeth herself with sundry pails of soap suds, and mops and clothes, and cleaneth ye house. Ye housewife's husband bemoaneth and sweareth, and refuses to be comforted with cold dinners, and ye gentle exercise of beating carpets.

The farmers are all plowing and trade is consequently somewhat dull. Some folks have easy times, therefore, and may be seen standing in the doorways listening to the gentle music of the organ grinders, and killing time till business is again lively.

The days of house cleaning have come, the saddest of the year; but after renovating your rooms don't fail to call and purchase some of those beautiful steel engravings, now offered to the public by G. W. Gordon.

Last Thursday a couple of our boys took a livery rig from J. Rainier & Co's stable. The horse took fright and upset the carriage. The oldest one walked ten miles last Sunday to try and borrow some script. (Hic.)

Wheat has been steadily advancing in the markets of the country for the past few weeks. We should not be surprised if it did not go higher yet, on account of the unfavorable reports from the new crop.

We notice that W. H. Dills, Esq., has made several improvements on his property, which will increase the value of it very much. Many others are repairing and painting up their dwelling which we will notice in the future.

Reports come from Albion that the citizens of that town are not by any means confident that the Baltimore & Ohio railroad will build the extention on that route. Some think that it will yet be located on a line further south.—Lagrange Standard.

Sour grapes.

Public Documents.—We are in receipt of seven large books of the Congressional Globe, containing the debates of the second session of the Forty-first Congress.—We recognize the frank of Hon. Wm. Williams, representative from this district, and though he is our opponent politically, we regard this as a personal favor and render thanks accordingly.

A young lady at an evening party found it apropos to use the expression, 'Jordan is a hard road to travel; but thinking that too vulgar, substituted the following: Perambulating progression in pedestrian excursion along the far-famed thoroughfare of fortune, cast up by the banks of the sparkling river of Palestine is attended with a heterogenious conglomeration of unforeseen difficulties.'

The artic soda fountain, at Davenport & Co's., is one of the finest institutions in the place, and one that we appreciate with considerable ability. It furnishes a beverage that is highly calculated to please and inwigorate, as the elder Weller would say Then they have a new syrup called the Dolly Varden, that is immense. We see lots getting invigorated every day, and it seems to do them good.

The Corporators of the B. & O. Extension give notice in the Ohio Statesman that ter per cent of the capital stock has been subcribed, and that there will be a meeting of the stock holders of the 'Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railway Company Ohio Division,' at the office of W. C. Quiney, in Columbus, on the 08d day of May inst., to choose seven Directors for said Company.—Defiance Dem.

Baltimore & Ohio.—Assistant Chief Engineer Randolph, of the above road passed through our place last Friday, on his way to Albion. The two corps of Engineers now employed on both ends of the line are expected to meet near Albion, and Mr. Randolph wishes to be there in time to receive their reports. He stated that work would begin about the first of July.

There is to be another Concert at Corunna, in a couple of weeks, by their old teacher, and we would suggest that if he intends to make another stump speech, at the closing of the entertainment, to have it put on the programme, We have heard several inquires in regard to it, and one big fellow down here says they don't get his quarter if there's any "speechin" going on (?)

Town Pump.—We are to have a town pump. A pipe has been driven on Main street, in front of the Court House, and a pump attached. A platform is to be made and a horse trough placed thereon for the special convenience of our farmers. We expect to hear it exclaim, 'Walk up, gentlemen. Here's the superior stuff, here it is by the hogshead or the single glass and not a cent to pay. Walk up, gentlemen, walk up."

The same interest that was manifested one year ago in the talked-of building of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Extension on this line, is being aroused in connection with the proposed New York & Chicago Air Line. The towns of Goshen, Bryan, Napoleon, etc, are discussing the contemplated enterprise with considerable enthusiasm. We wish we might get it. We wish we might get it. We certainly need it and ought to labor to secure it.—La-Grange Standard.

Farmers tell us that they have made excellent progress this season with farm work. A very large area of oats has been sown, and much more than the usual amount of corn will be planted—of flax, much less than formerly. Potatoes are deservedly attracting more attention as a crop than formerly, and are, we think, a profitable crop to raise, as much so as any we have. The old story which we here every year that all the fruit is killed comes to us, but we will wait and see.

Work on the D., E. R. & I. R. R., has been suspended from Denver to Logansport. The suspension is caused by the failure of the citizens of Logansport to raise the money for the payment of right of way, which they have obligated themselves to do. At Denver the D., E. R. & I. R. R., connects with the I. P. & C. R. R. thus furnishing a western out-let to the former. By the first of June it is expected that through trains will be run from Detroit to Indianapolis.—Col. City Post.

Ice Cream.—This delicacy is now being served up in superb style by Smith & Hare who have furnished a room in excellent style over their store for the accommodation of the public. Their opening has been quite successful, and we believe that they will receive a liberal support. They keep ice-cream always on hand, and by the arrangements they have made, small parties of ladies and gentlemen will find it quite agreeable to give them an evening call.

We suggest to our brethern of the press that a meeting of the Democratic editors of the State be held at Indianapolis, the day before the meeting of our State Convention. At such a meeting a free consultation on the political situation could be held and much good might result there from. What response shall we receive to the proposition?—Laporte Argus.

We made a similar suggestion some weeks ago to meet at the capitol and we believe it would be fraught with much good.

Spring Races.—We are in receipt of programme and complimentary to the spring meeting of the Columbia City Driving Park Association, to take place Friday and Saturday May 24, and 25, 1872. Arrangements have been made with the Eel River Road to carry passengers at half fare. Our citizens will therefore have every encouragment and as the meeting of this Association have proved highly interesting in the past, there is no doubt but that all attending will be well paid for their trouble.

Personal.—Major Sailor, a prominent legal gentleman, of Huntington county, visited our place place yesterday. The major is looking over the field with a view to his nomination for Congress. This is the third candidate that meets with our approbation and all we ask of the Republican Convention is that all three be nominated. This will preclude the necessity of a choice of the three, and will give great satisfaction to their numerous friends.—Our Republican friends are becoming somewhat exercised as to the nomination. No need of it, gentlemen. Look at the Democracy. No excitement there. Calm and cool is the watchward.

W. W. Griswold, Esq., returned last Saturday from an extended tour in Wisconsin, and had the exquisite pleasure of participating in the luxury of a railroad smash-up on the Northern Pacific, and carries a Dolly Varden shoulder.

Messrs. Williams and McDovgal have had the enterprise to put in one of their drive wells in front of the Court House for the benefit of the public, and now the Town Board should see that it is properly planked and drained, and a horse trough constructed.

SETTLE UP.

Those knowing themselves indebted to me are requested to call and settle immediately. All outstanding accounts not settled by the June 1st, will be left in the hands of the proper persons for collection.

T. B. Totten.

Marriage Licenses.—The following marriage license were issued from the Clerk's office during the month of April:

Andrew Camp and Maggie M. Hanes.
J. W. Stroh and Codelia A. Clark.
John H. Baxter and Emily J. Whetzell.
James J. Smith and Fidelia Nelson.
Ernest Mansdoerfer and Amelia Mader.
Alfred P. Meyer and Rebecca M. Eberly.
Wm. Rainier and Lucy Mills.

John E. Lung and Sarah J. Reever.
Milton Chaney and Lizzie F. Wasson.
T. D. Gross and L. H. Mallory.
Thomas Andryslak and Mary A. Kqadkouska.

As an offset to the above there are thirteen applications for divorce before the Common Pleas Court, to convene next week, the largest number at one term ever before known. The knot should be tied a little more tight to make it hold.

Fort Wayne elected nine council men, seven of whom are Democrats, an increase of three over last year. We were particularly glad to see Morgan beaten, in the fourth ward. He blowed his bazoo a good deal two years ago, and allowed he could not be beaten. He was then elected by a good majority. Things have changed, and so has Morgan. The people have changed also, and it would seem from the manner of voting, as Johny was beaten 120 times this year. He takes a back seat this year and contemplates his former glory. The Germans deserve great credit for their noble work in this ward, and now that they are getting back in their old track again, after being fooled around by a 'people's dodge,' we feel assurred that they will now have peace.

P. S. Underhill, it is said, was a candidate on the Republican, independent, citizens, and gasoline stone ticket. This is only an assertion, however, as there is nothing in the polling of the votes in the fifth ward to indicate any such a suicidal movement, by this popular American juggler. P. S. is a popular fellow with about one tenth of the votes of the fifth ward, and can talk gasoline with a suavity of manner rarely unequaled.

Destructive Fires.—Every day brings us news of destructive fires occuring in towns only a short distance off, the last being that of Marshalltown, the county seat of Marshall county.

Delphos, Ohio, was visited by a terrible fire the other day destroying two thirds of the place. Somerset was also similarly visited, and town after town are being swept away almost daily. What means has our town at the present time of preventing and of checking a fire should one get started in our midst? None that would be of much service to us, and yet we are entirely indifferent in the matter, and set around as though there was no danger. A good hook and ladder company would materially aid us, yet no one seems inclined to agitate the matter so as to have one organized. We doubt whether the cisterns constructed by the town last year would be of any assistance to us in dry weather, and we can look for but little good in this direction. It is time that some attention was paid to this matter, as after we are once thoroughly burnt out, there will be little need. Let something be done.

Unsatisfactory.—So far as we are able to judge, the nomination of Messrs. Greeley and Brown, for the Presidency and Vice Presidency, does not meet with a very unanimous shout of approval from the Democracy, in this county. At the meeting of their Committee in Auburn, last Saturday, which was attended by a considerable number of the party from all parts of the county, the predominant feeling seemed to be that they would now have a candidate of their own. The party seems to be too deeply rooted and grounded in the faith here, to follow off after such strange gods as Greeley and Brown, even if Hendricks, Voorhees and others recommend it as the best policy. Andy Ellison received over seven hundred votes in this county, for Congress two years ago, despite the frantic efforts of the trafficking leaders to sell the party out to Rascal.—The Cincinnati Democrats will find it hard work to get DeKalb County Democrats into the traces, we predict.—Waterloo Press.

How we do float. Now as you have taken a Democratic view of it, how does it look from a Republican stand point.—Hundreds of Republicans in this county are going to vote for Greeley, we predict against the national cigar holder, as Mr. Grant has been appropriately named.—There are honest Republicans here, who know of the corruptions of the present administration, and they are going to see it purified by the election of old Horace.

The School Interest.—Hon. M. B. Hopkins, Superintendent of Public Instruction visited our place last Monday, in his official capacity. A meeting of the Commissioners, County Examiner, and School Trustees of the various townships and towns of the county was held at the Auditor's office, and the many questions connected with this interest carefully canvassed and discussed. Mr. Hopkins is a venerable gentleman of large experience in school matters, and the ease and clearness with which every questions was answered was sufficient to prove the fitness of the man for the position. The following gentlemen were in attendance: Geo. Ensly, Esq., Commissioner; J. A. Bains, County Examiner; G. W. Maxwell, of Butler; Chas Bassett, of Waterloo; W. W. Griswold, of Auburn; H. H. Houser, Butler township; Peter Shaffer, Jackson; T. S. Murray, Concord; Saml. Greenameyer, Wilmington; I. M. Thomas, Union; A. Conrad, Richland; W. R. Emerson, Troy; all School Trustees. The various questions were taken up and explained, and we have no doubt much good will result from this mutual discussion of many vexed questions pertaining to this cause. A lecture was to have been delivered by the Superintendent in the evening, but as there had been no arrangements made, it was omitted.

State Certificates.

To the Teachers of the Ninth and Tenth Congressional Districts:

Examinations will be held in each Congressional District of the State, during the first and second weeks of July, by the members of the State Board of Education, as follows:

First and Second Districts—A. M. Gow, at Evansville and New Albany.

Eight and Third—M. B. Hopkins, at Kokomo and Greensburg.

Sixth—Dr. C. Nutt, at Bloomington.

Ninth and Tenth—J. H. Smart, at Muncie and Kendallville.

Seventh and Eleventh—W. A. Jones, at Lafayette and Laporte.

Fourth and Fifth—A. C. Shortridge, at Indianapolis and Richmond.

The examinations will begin on the first and second Tuesday in July, in the order in which they have been named.

The Board, at a meeting held Sept. 21st 22nd and 23d, 1871, ordered that there should be two grades of certificates, first and second grades, and that the standard of qualifications of each be as follows:

SECOND GRADE CERTIFICATE.

1. Satisfactory evidence of good moral character, certified to by Boards of Trustees who have employed the candidate, or by other reliable persons know to the Board.

11. Superior professional ability, ascertained in the manner above indicated, and also certified to by teachers of eminent ability known to the Board.

III. A comprehensive knowledge of the theory and practice of teaching; thirty months of practical experience in the school-room, ten of which shall have been in this State.

IV. Scholarship.

1. A thorough knowledge of the branches enumerated in the first section of the School Law, act May 5, 1869.
2. The Constitutions of the United States and the State of Indiana.
3. The elements of National Philosophy.
4. The art of composition.

Thosed who pass a satisfactory examination in the subjects named, and who furnish testimonials referred to, will receive a second grade certificate.

FIRST GRADE CERTIFICATE.

Those who, in addition to the requirements for a second grade certificate, shall pass a satisfactory examination in the following branches, will be entitled to a first grade certificate:

1. Elementary Algebra.
2. The first three books in Geometry.
3. Elements of Botany.
4. Outline of General History.
5. Elements of Rhetoric.
6. Elements of Zoology.

The knowledge of these branches can be obtained from she following works, though there are others that will do as well. These are mentioned merely to indicate in a general way the range of the examination in the several branches:

Composition: Day's Young Composer.
Algebra: Ray, Loomis or Robinson.
National Philosophy: Peck's Ganol, Morton or Wells, to Acoustics.
Botany: Gray's How Plants Grow, or Wood's Object Lessons.
General History: Anderson.
Rhetoric: Quackenbos or Haven.
Zoology: Hooker or Tenney.

Those who desire to attend these examinations must inform the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Hon. M. B. Hopkins, Indianapolis, and the member of the Board holding the examination in the district in which the applicant lives, on or before the 15th day of next June, stating the grade of certificate for which they intend to apply.

As required by law, each applicant shall previous to examination, pay to the member of the Board holding the examination, five dollars.

It is especially desired that those intending to apply for State Certificates in the Ninth and Tenth Districts, should immediately inform the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the undersigned member of the State Board.

County examiners, and other friends of education, are earnestly requested to urge the prominent teachers of their respective counties to send in their names.

Rowdyism.—A fight occurred on our streets, last Tuesday evening, between two young men, and for a while there was considerable excitement. A large crowd was present in a few moments and both combatants had their friends among them. And yet with all this fighting, swearing and cursing, there was no arrest made.—Our women and children were on the streets in hearing of horrid oaths, and obscene language, and yet it was permitted in spite of the law. Although a Marshal is not ubiquitous, this affair has been cooking up so long on our streets that he should have been on the lookout for it.—It was not a sudden affair, and this officer had an opportunity of ascertaining that it would culminate in a fight. Had they been arrested and placed in jail over night it would have cooled their ardor in this direction. The Marshal did not do his duty in our opinion, and were this case to be taken as a precedent, we might have an exhibition of rowdyism every day without limit.

As the time has arrived when it is pleasant to do out door work, people should begin to look about them and consider how they can make their homes pleasant and add to the good appearance of the city in general. Put your fence in good order, straighten up your dilapidated gate, trim up your shrubbery—if you have not got any get some and plant it in your lot—make flower beds, and plant them with flowers, repair the walks in your door yard, whitewash or pain your fences and out building, and make your home inviting. Don't say you can't find time to attend to these things. You have no right to be slovenly. Your wife and children will be happier, your property will sell for more money in the market, and will be worth more money to you at home if you devote an odd hour now and then to sprucing up.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men, have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers] equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. NOT IN.

A pompous, well-dressed person entered a bank one day, and addressing the teller, who was something of a wag, inquired, "Is the cashier in?"

'No, sir,' was the reply.

'Well, I am dealing in pens, supplying the New England banks pretty largely, and I suppose it will be proper for me to deal with the cashier.'

'I suppose it will,' said the teller.

'Very well—I will wait.'

After setting in a chair, with which the teller politely furnished him, for an hour and a half, the pen-peddler asked, 'how soon do you think the cashier will be in?'

'Well, I don't know exactly,' said the waggish teller; 'but I expect him in about eight weeks. He has gone to Lake Superior, and told me he thought he should be back in that time.'

Peddler concluded not to wait.

A Sanguinary Spaniard.

A Madrid correspondent of the Independent Belge states that General Bucets, in assuming command of the troops at Malaga, addressed them in the following most remarkable terms:

'Soldiers, I am informed that the inhabitants of Malaga may, perhaps, attempt an insurrectional rising in connection with the election; in this case do not suppose that I shall send you into the street to obtain possession of the barricades. No; we shall march out of the city, and from thence the artillery will destroy it. We shall then return and march through its ruins, which will be strewn with corpses. Let no quarter be given; I wont have any prisoners made, as they might manage to escape. I wish that you may be able to say: General, I have killed so many men without making a single prisoner. My opinion is that to hold in check one-half of the population, it is necessary to kill the other half. I speak to you in the name of the National Sovereign.'

Lot and His Wife—A New Version.

A correspondent in Virginia sends the following to Lippincott's Magazine:

As I was approaching a pond a few days ago, where some negroes were cutting ice, I chanced to hear the conclusion of a conversation between two hands on the subject of religion.

'What do you know 'bout 'ligion? You don't known nothing 'tall 'bout 'ligion.'

'I know heap 'bout 'ligion; aid't I bin done read de Bible?'

'What! you read in de Bible? I say you can't tell me nuthin' what you read in de Bible?'

But I kin, dough (though). I read 'bout 'Morro.'

'What sort o' 'Morrow—to-morrow?'

'No; Go-Morrow.'

'Well, whar he go, and what he go fur?'

'Shoh, man! he didn't go nowhar, 'cuz he war a town.'

'Dar! didn't I tell you you didn't know nuthin' 'bout nuthin'. You read de Bible! Hoccum (how come) de town name 'Morro, and how de town gwine to go any whar? Town ain't got no legs.'

'Man, you's a born fool, sho'. De town named Go Morrow, but dey call it 'Morro, cus they didn't have no time to stay talking long talk.'

'Debbil they did'n! Ef dey stay dar to-day, why can't dey stay dar to-morrow? 'Splain me dat.'

'But dey all gone, and de town too. All done bu'n up.'

'Ef dere ain't no pepul, and dere ain't no town, how de town name 'Morrow? G'long nigger! Didn't I knew you didn't know nuthin' 'tall 'bout 'ligion? But, sarsastically, tole me some mo' what you read in de Bible.'

'Well, Morrow was a big town—'bout mighty nigh's big as Washington City—and de pepul what live dar was de meanes' pepul in de whole worl.' Dey was dat mean dat de Lord he could'n abear 'em, and he make up his min' dat he gwine bu'n de town clear up. But dar was one good man dar—member uv de church, a p'sidin elder—named Lot.'

'Yaas, I know'd him.'

'Whar you know him?

On de cannell. He owned a batto, and dror it hisself.'

'Heist, man! I talkin sense now. Den de Lord he came to Lot, and he say, 'Lot, I gwine bu'n dis town.' You and you wife git up and gather you little alls, and put out 'fo' de crack o' dey, cos I certainly gwine bu'n dis town and de pepul to-morrow.' Den Lot he and his wife ris and snatched up their little alls and traveled soon in the morning. And de Lord he took two light'ud [lightwood] knots and some shavin's, and he set fire to dat ar town 'Morro, and he bu'n spang up clear down to the groun.'

'What come o Lot?'

'He and he wife, dey went and dey went, t'well presently he wife say, Lor! ef I ain't gone and lef de meal sifter and de rollin' pin, I wisht I may die!' and she turn roun' and—and—she dar now?'

'What she doin' dar?'

'Nutnin.'

'Must be mons'us lazy woman.'

'No, she ain't. De Lord he tu'n her to pillow uv salt, 'cos she's too 'quisitive.'

'Dar! everybody know 'bout sack o' salt; who ever hear 'bout pillow of salt? But what come of Lot?'

'Lot, he weren't keerin' tall 'bout no rollin pin and no meal sifter, so he kept straight 'long thout turnin, nv he head to the right, neither to the let.'

'And lef' de ole woman dar?'

'Yaas.'

'In de middle of de road?'

'Yaas.'

'Must cared might little fur her—want to git married to secken wife, I spec.' But de fus man come long and want to git some salt to bake ash cake, he gwine to bust a piece out's wife, an' 'stroy her; and what you think o' dat? Call dat 'ligion? An de old left her! and you read dat—

Here a peremptory order from the foreman to go to work, broke short the conversation.

Sewing Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & CO., Druggists and Gen. Agents, San Francisco, California, and 32 and 34 Commerce Street, New York.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of
PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND
PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phospholous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients of this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington Route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening), Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

A Doctor's Adventure.

And now we'll have a cosy, comfortable evening together, said my wife! And —but what's that, Irving?

My wife started nervously as a sharp peal at the bell interrupted the brief interval of our domestic quiet.

Only the surgery bell, my dear; some body wanting me, I suppose.

And I went down stairs, secretly wondering to myself, if, after all, there was such a wide difference between a galley slave and a country doctor.

The surgery door stood wide open, but nobody was there, and though the blind darkness without I could but discern the black outline of a close carriage, and a man standing at the horse's head.

Who's there?—what's wanting?' I asked, coming to the threshold and instinctively buttoned up the overcoat I had thrown on.

You're wanted, doctor, said the man, speaking indistinctly behind the muffling that surrounded his face.

Yes; but what for? Who wants me?

I am not at liberty to tell.

I had already entered the carriage but this suspicious answer inspired me with distrust. I made a step to descend but was too late—the vehicle was already in motion.

It is quite unnecessary to alarm yourself, doctor, said a quiet, measured voice at my side. Believe me you are quite safe; I trust you will not feel any uneasiness when I tell you that you must be blindfolded.

And at the same time a folded bandage was deftly slipped over my eyes.

Hold! I ejaculated. It strikes me that this is rather superfluous. The night is dark as Erebus, and you have no lamp.

Possibly, returned the dry voice; but it is best to run no risks.

And then ensued a silence of ten or fifteen minutes, while the carraige rolled swiftly along, and the low, measured breathing of my unknown companion kept time to my own uncomfortable thoughts.

At length my companion spoke again in the same soft, modulated tones.

Doctor, one more little precaution is necessary; your promise never to divulge to human soul a word of this night's visit.

I hesitated.

I cannot bind myself to any such covenant. The relations between physician and patient are of course confidential; but—

The carriage paused abruptly here, the door was swung open. At the same instant something touched my temples—it was the muzzle of a pistol. I recoiled in horror.

You surely would not murder me?

Your promise, doctor.

I promise! I gasped, recoiling once more from the chilling touch of the pistol.

Very well. Come.

I was led up a narrow walk through a doorway into a room, where the bandage was removed very suddenly from my tired eyes.

The spot was very familiar to me—a ruinous cottage, long since abandoned to decay, in the very heart of dense, swampy woods. How the carriage had ever reached it, I was at loss to know. Upon a pile of straw, hurriedly thrown into a corner of the mouldering floor, lay a prostrate figure, moaning at every breath. His face was concealed by a handkerchief, and the blood was slowly dripping from a gunshot wound just above the ankle—a wound that had been clumsily bandaged by some unskilled hand—Moreover, there was a dark red stain upon the straw where his head lay, and his light brown hair was matted with coagulated drops. Two or three men stood around, with rude masks of black cloth drawn over their faces, in which three slits were cut for eyes and mouth; and a female figure knelt beside the heap of straw, veiled closely.

The men silently made way for me as I advanced into the apartment, and held their lanterns so that the lurid light should fall upon my strange patient. As silently I stooped and examined both the wounds.

Well? asked my carriage companion.

I can do nothing. The man must surely die.

Nonsense! A mere bullet through the leg—what does that amount to? hurriedly gasped the man.

In itself not much; but that upon the skull cannot but prove fatal.

A low half suppressed cry broke from the woman opposite. She tore the veil from her face, as if she could not breathe through its heavy folds, revealing features as white and beautiful in their marble agony as so much sculptured stone. She did not seem more than thirty, but I afterwards knew that she was indeed ten years older. But in spite of her present anguish, how grandly beautiful she was!—Large dark eyes—hair like coiled gold, catching strange gleams from the shifting lanterns—and a broad smooth brow—it was a face you do not see but once in a life time.

And yet in the midst of her distress, she never spoke.

At least you can do something for him, doctor, said my interlocutor, impatiently. Don't let us waste time here.

As I proceeded in my ministrations, the moaning grew fainter and fainter, the convulsive movement grew scarcely perceptible. A faint gleam of hope lighted up the face of the woman, who knelt with clasped hands opposite; she looked appealingly to me.

He is better—he is surely better soon, I answered moved to pity in spite of myself He cannot live half an hour longer.

The horror of that sepulchral silence that fell upon us as my accents died away —shall I ever forget it? And five minutes afterwards the breathing, spasmodic and painful to hear, died into eternal stillness.

The woman lifted a corner of the handkerchief and gazed into the gastly face.— It was that of a young man of two-and-twenty, and who had evidently been marvelously good looking.

Ah, heavens! he is dead!

Her clear, agonized voice was ringing in my ears as they led me back into the darkest of the night. I felt a bank note pressed into my hand as I entered the carriage again.

Doctor, you have done your best; it is not your fault that your efforts were unsuccessful. Remember—you are pledged to secrecy!

The next moment I was whirling swiftly through the November midnight, with the stange, unquiet feeling of one wakened suddenly from a startling dream. Yet it was no dream—alas! it was startling reality.

The carriage stopped at a cross road near the village.

Please to alight here; sir, said the driver. You are not very far from home.

I obeyed, and stood listening in the middle of the road, while the noise of the carriage wheel died away, lost its distinctness in the shriek of the restless winds, and the clock in the village church tolled out the hour of one.

Late as it was, however, my surgery was still open and lighted up; the servant from Haddenleigh Hall had just ridden up to the door.

If you please doctor, you are wanted immediately at the Hall. The Colonel said that you were to ride my horse, if yours was not already saddled, and I can walk, so there will be no time lost.

I mechanically mounted the noble animal that stood waiting for me, and rode off, rather glad of an opportunity to revolve in my mind the singular adventure that had that evening befallen me.

Haddenleigh stood a little way back from the road, on a magnificent knoll crowned with century-old chestnuts and beeches, and I reached the broad steps in about half an hour, by hard riding.

As I entered the vestibule, Col. Hadden who had been paceing up and down the hall in a perfect agony of impatience come to meet me.

Is that your Dr. Meller? I thought you never would come. We are in a pretty state of confusion here! Burglars in the house—my wife's set of diamonds gone—nobody knows what else, but old Hopkins left his sign manual on one of the fellows. They must be caught; they can't escape far. For you see.—

Yes, but Col.—

Oh, say, I understand you, you want to see your patient. It's Hopkins, the butler; he's got an ugly blow on the left arm —and afterwards my wife went herself for D. Maynard—no offence Meller, but he lives nearer than you—but he was out. She has only just returned. I could'nt very well leave Hopkins—and Mrs. Hadden is such a kind good soul, she insisted on going herself to fetch Maynard—

But my dear sir—

Ah true? come along with me to Hopkins room.

Hopkins, the butler, was as voluble as his master, and ten times as circumstantial, and by the time I had set his broken fore-arm. I was pretty well in possession of all the particulars of the attempted burglary at Haddenleigh.

And now, doctor, you'll take a glass of wine, said the hospitable old gentleman, ushering me into his library.

It was brilliantly lighted, and warm with the crimson glow of the genial fire before which, in a singularly graceful attitude, sat a lady, wrapped in the gorgeous folds of an India shawl.

My wife, doctor. Isabel, my love, this is Dr. Meller.

We stood before one another in silence; I could not speak, for I knew that I was looking into the startled, agonized eyes of the woman who had knelt scarcely an hour ago by the dying coach in the desolate cottage—Colonel Hadden's new wife of whose beauty I had heard so much.

The Colonel talked on but I heard not a word that he said. I could but marvel at the wonderful self-possession of the woman, who smiled and looked grave, and said 'yes' and 'no' just in the right place exactly.

To be sure, the Colonel was saying as I woke into a sort of consciousness of his voice, the loss of Isabel's diamonds is someting serious, but of course we shall recover them again. Only, my love, it was rather careless of you to leave them on the drawing-room table.

It was careless, replied Mrs. Hadden.— Doctor, you are not going? Colonel, you have forgotten that curious old book you were wanting to show Dr. Meller.

I had entirely forgotten it, ejaculated the Colonel. I'll get it in half a minute, and then you can take it home with you, doctor.

As the door closed behind the honest old gentleman, Mrs. Hadden glided up to me and placed her cold hand on mine; it was like the touch of an icicle.

Doctor, you have my secret; you will surely not betray it?

I am pledged to silence, madam, I returned coldly, but this is deceit—

It is not my fault, doctor, replied the woman, it is my fate. How I endure it I scarcely know: were I to pause and think I should go mad. The man who died to-night was my son. Colonel Hadden knows nothing of my first marriage nor of this dreadful secret of my son's criminal life that has weighed me down for years. Over and over again I have thought to escape from it, but it has followed upon my footsteps like a doom. To-night closes that chapter of my life—oh, heavens! how dreadful! But my secret is safe— the diamonds provided for that.

But your husband, Mrs. Hadden?

She covered her palid, beautiful face with her hands.

I knew what you would say, doctor, I love him and honor him beyond all men; but what can I do! Believe me, I have never willingly wornged or deceived him. I never dreamed of—

She paused abruptly. Colonel Hadden was just entering the room, and the smiling, casual remark that she addressed to him filled my heart with undisguised amazement; almost admiration.

I rode home to my blue-eyed little Eleanor, feeling, as I entered the snug sitting room, as if I were returning to the homely, happy atmosphere of every day life. But I never forgot the terrible excitement and feverish suspense of that November night.

The desperadoes who had attempted to rifle Haddenleigh Hall were never detected or taken; all traces of them seemed to have vanished utterly out of the earth.

And were it not for the bank note which had most liberally recompensed my services, and the everlasting witness borne by Mrs. Hadden's lovely, startled face, I should almost have been tempted to fancy that all the events of that marvel ous November midnight were the fragments of a dream.

A Great Farmer's Maxims.

The successful life of Mr. Jacob Strawn the prince of American farmers, is attributed to the close observance of the following maxims, originated by himself:

When you wake up do not roll over, but roll out. It will give you time to ditch your sloughs, break them, harrow them and sow them.

Make your fencing high and strong and tight, so that it will keep the catle and pigs out.

If you have brush, make your lots secure and keep your hogs from cattle; for if the corn is kept clean they will eat it better than if it is not.

Be sure to get your hands to bed by eight o'clock—they will rise earlier by force of circumstances. Pay a hand if he is a poor hand, all you promise him; if he is a goodhand, pay him a little more, it will encourage him to do still better.

Always feed your hands as well as you do yourself, for the laboring men are the bone and sinew of the land, and ought to be well treated.

I am satisfied that early rising, industry and regular habits, are the best medicines ever prescribed for health.

When rainy, bad weather comes, so that you can't work out of doors, cut, and haul your wood.

Make your racks, fix your fences or a gate that is off the hinges or weatherboard your barn where the wind has blown the siding off, or patch the roof of your house.

Study your interests closely, and do not spend your time in electing Presidents, Senators and other small officers, or talking of hard times while spending your time whittling &c.

Take your time and make calculations, Don't do things in a hurry, but do them at the right time, and keep your mind as well as your body employed.

In May or June when butter is plenty, work it thoroughly two or three times and add at the last working nearly one grain of saltpetre and a teaspoonful of pulverized sugar to each pound of butter; pack it tightly in stone jars to within two inches of the top, and fill the remaining space with strong brine; cover the jars tightly, keep in a cool place. It will keep sweet a long time.

If caught in a shower, and you get your hat wet, brush it before it is dry. And so of the horse. When he comes it wet with prespiration, smooth his hair with a course brush—a common broom is far better than nothing—in the direction you wish it to lie when it is dry. The animal will feel better and it will be only half the trouble to clean him.

If on going into the barn yard, you see any of the cattle standing with their backs up, shivering with the cold, be assured they are shaking money out of your pocket. The cold winds are freezing, blowing off from them the flesh which they manage to accumulate during the past summer.

A few durable, light and good tools ought to be an appendage of every garden, and these should be kept in perfect working order. Clean them every time after being used, as soon as done with, and put away in the tool room under cover, where they will keep dry.

Are you saving your ashes and storing them away in a dry place for use upon your corn and other crops the coming season? Buy all you can from your neighbors. To them we should say, Keep all you've got, and get all you possibly can.

Little Dolly Varden.

From the Chicago Post.

There was once a little girl named Dolly Varden. Her mamma was a very good mamma, but her papa had a Dolly Varden nose, produced by drinking too many Dolly Varden cocktails at the Dolly Varden saloon round the corner, and he used to neglect his family. One time when her ma asked him for one dollar (averring that she had a farthing from him for two weeks) to buy a Dolly Varden for their little daughter, the brutal man refused and put a Dolly Varden all around her ma's left eye. Well, one day Dolly Varden dressed herself in her very best, had her hair done up in Dolly Varden style, put on her Dolly Varden hat, and her Dolly Varden boots, and her lovely new Dolly Varden, and went out for a walk. She went into a confectioner's to buy some Dolly Varden caramels. While there she saw in the Indianapolis Evening Journal a column of Dolly Varden notes, and stopped to read the paper. This apparently trivial circumstances cost her her life As she passed down the street she came to a dry goods store where a painter was lettering a sign over a third story window 'Dolly Vardens of every kind.' He turned round on the scaffold to look at a Dolly Varden circus horse which was passing in John Robinson's great show, and lost his balance falling to the ground. No, not to the ground, but upon Miss Dolly Varden who was passing beneath. Her sweet Dolly Varden parasol was no protection against the falling body, and she was dashed to the earth, her lovely Dolly Varden being bespattered with his brains.

Throwing a Rope to a Wreck.

Practical experiments with the guns constructed by Herr Cordes for shooting out ropes to persons in danger of drowning, caried on at Bremen, have proved the contrivance to be one of greatest utility. German naval authorities are of opinion that it constitutes the most useful appliance for the purpose in existence. By means of a sort of rifle charged with 2½ grammes of gunpowder, a bolt is shot out into the sea having a rope attached to it which the drowning man is thus enabled to seise, in order by it to be pulled to the shore. It has been proved that a heavy bolt is more serviceable than a light one for, with the same charge of powder Herr Godes succeeded in throwing a two pound bolt 140 paces, and a 1½ pound bolt only 112.— Herr Cordes has also constructed small cannons which charged with from ¼ to ½ pound of gunpowder, throw out 20 pound bolts with ropes full 400 yards into the sea. The German society for saving persons from shipwreck has warmly acknowledged the merits of the invention, and ordered its adoption at its own station recommending its use at the same time, to vessels of all kinds

The absorber will go to sleep and rest while the eliminator will be tossing and tumbling, restless and nervous, and will wake up in the morning fretful peevish, and discouraged. After a struggle he escaped from the store and was forced to suspend business for a week, which period he spent in firing with a shotgun through the window down the chimny and up through the floor, in the hope of exterminating the vigilant brute. Finally he had to pay the former owner of the beast a liberal price to come and take him away in order that he might proceed with his business, and then he found that his own bombardment of the premises had riddled the molasses barrels, oil casks, etc. and smashed the crockery in a most expensive manner. The Value of Small Courtesies.

Civility costs nothing and is often productive of good results. here is an instance.

A local doctor of medicines at Bath, England, had just had a legacy of twenty thousand dollars, and a comfortable house left him by a lady who was only known to him by his once offering her a seat in his carriage

A gentleman known to the writer once assisted a very old and feeble man to cross from the London Mansion House to the Bank of England. This crossing is a very dangerous one, especially at midday when the city is full of cabs, omnibuses, drays, and vehicles. When the old gentleman had got safely across he exchanged cards with his obliging friend; and there the matter rested. Some four or five years after this incident occurrd, a firm of London solicitors wrote to the young gentleman who had taken pity on the on the old man, informing him that a legacy of five thousand dollars and a gold watch and chain, had been left to him by a gentleman who took the opportunity of again thanking him in his will, for an act of unlooked for civility. It is not likely that all will have gold watches and chains left to them or neat little bundles of crisp notes, but it is certain that acts of civility are productive of sufficient results to our inner selves to make it worth our while to practice them wherever we find an opportunity

Caught in His Own Trap.

A girl, young and pretty, and above all gifted with an air of admirable candor, lately presented herself before a Parisian lawyer.

'Monsieur, I have come to consult you on a grave affair. I want you to oblige a man I love to marry me in spite of himself. How shall I thus proceed?'

The gentleman of the bar had, of course, a sufficiently elastic conscience. He reflected a moment, and then, being sure that no one overheard him, replied hesitatingly:

'Mademoiselle, according to our law you always possess the means of forcing a man to marry you. You must remain on three occasions, alone with him; you can then go before a Judge and swear that he is your lover.'

'And will that suffice [illegible]'

Yes, Mademoiselle, with one further condition.'

'Well?'

'Then you will produce witnesses who will make oath to having seen you remain a good quarter of an hour with the individual who has trifled with your affections.'

'Very well, Monsieur, I will retain you as counsel in the government of this affair. Good day.'

A few days afterward the young lady returned. She was mysteriously received by the lawyer, who scarcely gave her time to seat herself, and questioned her with the most lively curiosity.

'Capital!'

'Persevere in your design, Mademoiselle, but the next time you come to consult me, give me the name of the young man you are going to make so happy in spite of himself.'

A fortnight afterward, the young lady knocked at the door of the counsel's room. No sooner was she in than she flung herself into a chair, saying the walk had made her breathless.

Her counsel tried to reassure her, made her inhale salts, and even proposed to unloose her garments.

'It is useless, Monsieur,' she said; 'I am much better.'

'Now, tell me the name of the fortunate mortal.

Then, the fortunate mortal be it known to you, is yourself,' said the young beauty, bursting into a laugh. 'I love you, I have been here tete-a-tete with you three times, and my four witnesses are below, ready and willing to accompany me to a magistrate,' gravely continued the narrator.

The lawyer thus caught had the good sense not to get angry. The most singular fact of all is that he adores his young wife, who makes an excellent house-keeper.

Fifteen thousand Government troops are now concentrated in the Department of Biscay. Opposed to them are 7,000 Carlists, who adopt a Fabian policy.

Several large manufacturing establishments in Hamilton, Canada, have locked out their employes rather than yield to the nine hour movement.—About one thousand hands were locked out.

A severe hail storm passed over Washington county, Kansas, recently. It is reported that the ground for a mile in breadth was covered with hail stones, some of which were as large as pigeon eggs.

The fires in the woods in the vicinity of Scranton, Penn., are still raging, in many quarters destroying vast amounts of lumber and timber. A number of barns, small houses, &c., have been destroyed in the vicinity of Macon and Lehigh Falls.

Hands Off.

The Indianapolis Sentinel hoists the names of Greeley and Brown "Subject to the decision of the Democratic State Convention of June 12th."

"We do not understand, says our neighbor of the S. B. Union that the State Convention will have anything to do with the matter. The question as to whether the Democratic party will make nominations can only be determined by the National Convention, and we should deem it very unfortunate to have it agitated before the State Convention. It would only introduce an element of discord, when we want the most perfect harmony. Let the State Convention attend to its legitimate business—make its nominations, and appoint delegates to the National Convention from among its very best and most discreet leaders. Let those delegates go without instructions, empowered to act for the best interests of the whole country according to their best judgment.

No man can forecast the requirements of the hour on the 9th of July next. Only after consultation with delegates from all portions of the country, and a comprehensive view of the situation, ought the delegates act. They cannot do this if they go hampered with instructions. We sincerely hope this distracting question will not be introduced in the Convention. "Hands off," is the only true motto at present."

Promoted for Ballot-Box Stuffing.

It will be remembered that a vacancy occurred last winter in the Fourth Senatorial District of Pennsylvania, and that Col. Gray was the Grant, and Col. McClure the anti Grant candidate for that position. At the October election the republican candidate was elected by over 7,000 majority; at the special election the returns elected Gray by something over 800 majority. Astonishing as appeared this great change, Col. McClure stoutly maintained that the opposition to the Grant movement was greater than the figures demonstrated. Accordingly steps were taken to contest Gray's election. The Senate committee instituted a thorough investigation, and elicited the fact that Col. McClure had received nearly 300 majority over his competitor to whom the seat has been awarded. During the investigation it was clearly proved that Grant's office holders perpetrated these vile frauds upon the ballot box, at the same time exposing the tactics resorted to by their tools to change votes casts for McClure to ballots in favor of Gray. So conclusive were these evidences of fraud that Gray quietly left his seat in the Senate and departed for home, thus virtually acknowledging that McClure was honestly elected. The Senate, as a matter of course, awarded the seat to McClure, who has since organized the anti Grant element into a solid phalanx. In order to give our readers some idea of Col. McClure's opinion of Mr. Grant, we annex the following extract from a recent speech, giving the details of his contest with the administration candidate for State Senator:

"Nor did the desperation of administration power end when an investigation was ordered. It was proven from day to day that the Custom house, the Post office, the Navy yard, the Arsenal, and the revenue offices had vomited forth their repeaters, their perjured election officers, their leaders of gangs of rounders, their silenced ballot box stuffers, and their expert forgers of returns. One by one, by name and official position, they were pointed out, by sworn testimony that no effort was made to impeach, and circumstantially convicted of their crimes. The daily journals published and commented on the startling evidence, and no one of ordinary intelligence can plead ignorance of these fearful wrongs or wrong doers. Notwithstanding President Grant's profuse professions, and public proclamations in favor of civil service reform, not one of those well known criminals have been removed, excepting two or three who have been promoted in their respective departments.

Mr. Voorhees' Explanation.

We can but think that Mr. Voorhees' speech on the floor of the House on Monday was premature, gratuitous and in bad taste. In the first place, it imitated a bad Republican example in taking advantage of the flimsy pretext of a "personal explanation," or introducing partisan politics into a place which should be devoted to making laws, removing abuses and originating measures for the public good. Because Republicans have, on many occasions during the past few years, made a sort of political meeting of Congress, there is no reason why Democrats should fall into the same pernicious practice. In the next place, Mr. Voorhees undertook this means to exercise an undue influence over the present political situation, which is just now too unsettled to justify such decided expressions as he employed.

The tenor of Mr. Voorhees' speech would induce the people of the country to believe that the Democracy on one side, like the extreme Radicals on the other, are desirous of fighting the war over again, and unwilling to take progressive steps toward the acceptation of what has been done and the application of Democratic principles to a new order of things. In conveying such an expression, Mr. Voorhees speaks for himself and not for the Democratic party. He has always been a fierce partisan, and naturally would find it harder to accommodate himself to any abandonment of past positions, and any compromise for future advantages, than would the people who have never been so actively engaged in partisanship, and who are now willing to sacrifice something of the past in order to gain something of the future.

While thus plainy expressing our disapproval of Mr. Voorhees' speech, on the ground of taste and judgment, we are not among those who credit for a moment the assertions made by Democratic members of Congress to the effect that he spoke in the interests of Grant, and as a result of a certain agreement to take this stand. Mr. Voorhees is an honest man and a sincere Democrat. Indeed, it was his sincerity as an old Democrat which betrayed him into his mistake. When he went so far as to say that Grant had been more liberal to the South than Greeley, the assertion was simply hot headed and one which can not be sustained by facts. We can not charge all the positions and utterances of the New York Tribune to Mr. Greeley, who has been absent a great deal from his paper, and who has not always been able to direct as he may have wished a great concern in which he is, after all, but a small stockholder.—But comparing his personal utterances and actions with those of Grant, and with an intelligent estimate of the feeling of the Southern people, the comparison made by Mr. Voorhees was unjust and untrue.

Mr. Voorhees has said that since certain Democrats were working privately in the interests of Mr. Greeley, he had the right to speak openly against him. He has the right certainly. Nobody will deny him this. But he would have displayed better judgment under the same circumstances, if he had pursued his convictions against the endorsement of Mr. Greeley in the same way that other Democrats are using theirs in his favor—in a calm, quiet and unostentacious manner. The delight of the Grant Republicans over Mr. Voorhees' speech is of itself a sufficient indication of the bad judgment which suggested it.

It is nearly two months before the assembling of the Democratic National Convention. One month before the time, the Radical Convention will have met and nominated. The Liberals will have decided definitely upon their line of action. Now, with such time and opportunity for judging, when a dozen important movements may transpire, is it not premature to take any such positive ground as Mr. Voorhees assumed? Does it not savor of the extreme partisanism and unforgetfulness that has kept the Democratic party down for years?—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

The Legislature of Connecticut on yesterday re-elected Mr. Ferry to the United States Senate, for another term, by eight majority. Mr. Ferry is a Liberal Republican, and because of his opposition to some of the obnoxious measures of the administration, he was ostracised by that wing of the Republican party. There were seventeen Republican members of the Legislature, however who had the manliness and independence to refuse to attend the Legislative caucus, and they united with the democrats in the support and election of Mr. Ferry. This is the first fruit of the Liberal Republican movement and is regarded by the friends of Mr. Greeley as a sigificant victory

---

The Democratic National Committee has done its duty most nobly in calling a Convention of the Democracy of the nation, without further hesitation or waiting. Passiveness, whatever reasons there may have been for it in the future, should give way to action, strong and determined, upon the part of the Democracy now. The Cincinnati mountain has labored, and its work is before the country. Next will be the labor of the office-holding ring at Philadelphia. Then will come the convention of the people at Baltimore.

Greeley's Weakness.

It is a great pity that Greeley, who was always a strong admirer and firm supporter of Henry Clay, did not become imbued with the same spirit of firmness that characterised the "Mill Boy of the Slashes." When the Democratic party offered Mr. Clay a Presidential nomination if he would support its anti-tariff principles—"Never," replied Mr. Clay, "I would rather be right than President." Mr. Greeley is not a less ardent advocate of protection than was Mr Clay, but as Mr. Curtis says in the admirable article from Harper's Weekly printed on the outside of this issue, he is vacillating and a compromiser, and he is so eager for a Presidential nomination that he is willing to throw principles, friends and prejudices—and no man has stronger prejudices than Greeley—aside for an emty nomination.

Mr. Greeley has long been an honored member of the Republican party, as he was of the whig, and has given it years of hard service, but he is a poor General, and could never be trusted as a leader. He was never known to fight if he could make a bargain. It is well known that he dickered with the South to defeat Seward at Chicago.

It is a part of history that he traded with extreme radicals in '64 to defeat Lincoln, and he was suspected of having dickered with the Democrats to nominate Chase in '68 that Grant might be defeated. He would have given the South the better part of our country to buy peace, and since the war he tried to trade Universal Amnesty for Universal suffrage, when all saw that each would come to us in its own good time. And now he has bartored his life-long principles, forsaken his life-long political associates for a nomination that confers no honor and will be barren of success. As he grows older Horace Greeley developes the foolishness of a yearling heifer.

Reporter of Supreme Court.

The Kokomo Democrat says that there seems to be but one feeling in the Northern part of the State, in regard to the nomination for the above office, and that is that John W. Kern, of Howard county is just the man to make the race.

In 1870 the Democracy of Howard county in opposition to his wishes, made him their candidate for Representative. Mr. Kern went into the fight with a will, made thirty-two speeches in the forty nights that intervened between his nomination and the election, and ran over 400 votes ahead of the ticket, being defeated by a small majority. In this township the Republican majority was 129 on the State ticket, while Mr. Kern carried it by 79 majority.

John W. Kern is a gallant representative of the young Democracy of Indiana, and deserves a place on the State ticket. He is a fine stump speaker and has the means and energy to canvass the entire State, if nominated.

The Democracy will find hosts of his friends at the convention who will work long and late for his nomination.

The Supreme Court of Indiana on the 22d of September last, decided that the clause of the law requiring a residence of twenty days in a township or precinct or ward previous to the election, in order to entitle a person to vote, is unconstitutional and void. The case came before them on an appeal from Wayne county, in the case of J. Quin, vs. the State of Indiana. We quote the following extract from the decision bearing on this point:

"In section 1, of the act of March 11th, 1867, statues of Indirna, vol. 3, p. 324, it is enacted "that no person shall be deemed to have acquired a residence in any township, city or ward, so as to entitle him to vote therein, until he shall have been a bona fide inhabitant of such township, city or ward, at least twenty days before the day of election, at which such person shall offer to vote.

And in section 6, of the act of May 13th, 1869, statutes of Indiana, vol. 3, p. 236, it is enacted that a person whose right to vote is challenged, shall make oath, among other things, that he has been, "for twenty days last past, a bona fide resident of the township, precinct or ward."

We are of the opinion that the enactments are unconstitutional and void. The constitution requires only that the person shall be a resident of the township or precinct in order to entitle him to vote, if he possess the other qualifications, and the legislature can not say that this residence shall be, or shall have been for any specified length of time. If it can say that it shall require twenty days to constitute a residence, why may it not say that it shall require ninety of them or three hundred and sixty-five days?

It is not in the power of the legislature, by changing or attempting to change the well understood and commonly received sense of words in the constitution, as it attempted to do in the act of 1867 above quoted to avoid or change the meaning or effect of a provision of the constitution. A person who has fixed his place of habitation at a point, intending to remain there, is a resident of that place. Webster defines the word 'reside' to mean, 'To continue; to sit; to remain; to dwell permanently or for a length of time; to have a settled abode for a time; to abide continuously; to have one's dwelling or home; to remain for a long time." It is clear to us that the word 'reside' used in the clause of the constitution with reference to suffrage was intended to embrace the idea of fixed or permanent residence. There must be the act of abiding or dwelling in the place with the intention of remaining. Whenever these two unite there is residence within the meaning of the constitution, and the party, so far as this qualification is concerned, is a voter."

Mr. Greeley's persistent devotion to the business of word-chopping is explained on the theory that he wants to provide plenty of timber for Greeley clubs.

Meeting of the Editors' and Publishers Association.

An adjourned meeting of the Editors' and publishers' Association of the Tenth and Eleventh Congressional Districts of Indiana, was held in the parlors of the Dwight House, South Bend, on Friday, May 17, 1872.

The meeting was called to order by J. B. Stoll, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The following editors and publishers were present:

S. E. Taylor, Laporte Herald;
A. Beal, D. S. Marsh, St. Joseph Valley Register;
A. B. Miller, South Bend Tribune;
J. D. Osborn, H. S. Fassett, South Bend Union.
S. T. Montgomery, Mishawaka Enterprise.
A. P. Kent, Elkhart Review;
C. K. Baxter, Waterloo Press;
W. M. Stark, Goshen Times;
J. B. Stoll, Ligonier Banner;
H. E. Wadsworth, Laporte Argus;
Platt McDonald, Plymouth Democrat;
Reub. Williams, Northern Indianian;
T. C. Mays, Auburn Courier;
F. B. Thomas, Winamac Democrat;
J. D. Devor, Lagrange Standard;
Hi. Sweet, Lagrange Independent;
Ed. Molloy and Em. Molloy.

The report of ex-Secretary Chase was presented, examined and approved, as was also the report of ex-Treasurer of D. E. Van Valkenburgh.

Allowances for printing and other expenses were made—to C. H. Chase, 9.05; J. B. Stoll, 6 01.

A. P. Kent, of the Elkhart Review, and S. E. Taylor, of the Laporte Herald, were admitted to membership.

It was resolved to make an excursion to Put-in-Bay, on the 16th of July. A. Beal and J. B. Stoll were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements. It was ordered, that none but members of the Association, or those regularly in their employ, be considered members of the excursion party.

The next meeting of the Association will be held at Mishawaka on the second Friday in October.

J. B. STOLL, Pres't.

A Raging Fire.

A Port Jervis special of the 18th, before the rains says in Pike county, Pa. fire covering a territory of seven miles in extent, sweeping over some of the best land in section 12, was raging. Large steam sawmills were destroyed and many dwelling houses. The lumber camps of Dodge and Meigs, containing several million feet of lumber, were burned. The inmates of the cabin narrowly escaped with there lives at Wagonteer's, Scallahan's and Dowling's settlements. There is nothing left but the charred and smoking ruins. Dozens of families were compelled to flee for their lives. A quarter of a million dolars will not pay the losses in this section. The land of the Blooming Grove Park Association has been swept over and large numbers of wild game destroyed. In Wayne county, Pennsylvania the fires compelled the suspension of coal transportation over the Delaware & Hudson canal company's railroad leading from the mines to Honesdale.

The lumber villages of Carter and Gould, Pennsylvania, have been almost totally destroyed, only three houses remaining in the places. Sussex county, New York, and Sullivan, and Delaware counties, New York, and Monroe county, Pennsylvania, are still being swept over by the forest fires and the losses are estimated as footing up in the millions

A Card.—The Tribune has ceased to be a party organ; but the unexpected nomination of its editor at Cincinnati seems to involve it in a new embarrassment. All must be aware that the position of a journalist, who is at the same time a candidate, is at best irksome and difficult; that he is fettered in action and restrained in criticism by the knowledge that whatever he may say or do is closely scanned by thousands, eager to find in it what may be so interpreted as to annoy or perplex those who are supporting him as a candidate, and to whom his shackled condition will not permit him to be serviceable. The undersigned, therefore, withdraws absolutely from the conduct of the Tribune and will henceforth, until further notice, exercise no control or supervision over its columns.

Horace Greeley

Brick Pomeroy is a model Democrat. He gives his opinions freely upon all subjects and often speaks harshly about his political associates. Below we give a sample:

Look at the Democrats of the United States!

A pack of fools!

A congregation of cowards and the leader of thieves.

Three millions of men afraid to move!

An army of men without a leader—a mob without a head—a host without a name or an idea!

Where are the captains—the generals—the leaders—the organizers of the party?

Asleep, drunk, stealing, or making bargains with political enemies?

The Hon. William Allen of Ohio at one time United States Senator, and who would make a better President today than any man mentioned in connection with that office by any party in the country, was recently interviewed by some partizans of Mr. Grant in regard to his re-nomination. Chilicothe Advertiser states that the response of the old chieftain was this: "If it is the only way to wrest the Government out of the hands of the present Administration, as a patriotic act I would vote for any eligible white man or saddle colored negro to beat Grant

---

Mr. James W. Fitzgerald of Cincinnati became so enthusiastic over the nomination of Greeley and Brown that he wrote Greeley a note a few days ago informing him of his intention to stump the State of Ohio, in his interest. He received in reply, the following hastily written note: "J W. Fitzgerald, Esq.—Get a wheel-borrow and go West," H. G.

ED. COURIER.—The death of Mr. Schelhorn's children is supposed to have resulted from natural causes, instead of poison as has been rumored. The attending physician of the child does not see any reason to suspicion criminal poisoning although there was no post mortem of the bodies made. An inquest was held upon the first body, the adult. None of the people of Leo suspicion anything like homicide in the cases.

NOTICE.—A special meeting of Cedar Encampment No. 65 I. O. O. F. will be held Thursday evening, May 23d, for the purpose of conferring the Patriarchal degree and transacting other business. All members of Cedar Encampment are especially requested to be present. A cordial invitation is extended to all encampment members. D. D. G. M., G. A. Williams is expected to be present.

By order of

S. L. YANDES, C. P.

F. E. DAVENPORT, Scribe.

WE have not been authorized but we nevertheless make the the suggestion of Wm. B. McConnell, as a suitable candidate for Prosecuting Attorney for this District. Though young in years he is old in legal and literary attainments, and we can heartily endorse him for that position. He is one of those excellent young men, of hight moral character, indefatigable as a student, and well worthy the confidence of the people. We name him as our choice.

AUBURN is still on the increase—mighty still. Her relations are changing every day and Grandpaps and Uncles are made in a short space of time. For instance there is Grandpap Ford, who has heretofore usually been denominated Doctor and there's uncle Cook, all of which change may be ascribed to a simple turn of the wrist, as jugglers say. No juggling about this, however, as it weighed eleven pounds and a half, and is a girl of the female persuasion. Dr. Spooner holds the belt for the present.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Our citizens were surprised last Monday to learn of the death of Jacob Snyder, residing in Jackson tp. Mr. Snyder had been in town a day or two before apparently in good health, and though he was sick on last Saturday, there was no complaint of anything serious. On Sunday he complained, about one o'clock, of faintness, but soon recovered, and had laid down a short time when those present saw him breathe his last.—He had been recently married to his second wife and was regarded by all as an excellent man, an enterprising citizen, and a gentleman possessing very amiable qualities.

"Music hath charms," but this is the way they do it: "It was a young woman with as many white muslin flounces round her as the planet Saturn has rings. She gave the music stool a twirl or two, and fluffed down on it like a whirl of soap suds in a hand-basin. Then she pushed up her cuffs as if she was going to fight for the champions belt. Then she worked her wrists and hands, to limber 'em, I suppose, and spread out her fingers till they looked as though they would pretty much cover the key board, from the growling end to the little squeaky one. Then those two hands of hers made a jump at the keys, as if they were a couple of tigers coming down on a flock of black and white sheep, and the piano gave a great howl as if its tail had been trod on. Dead stop—so still you could hear your hair growing. Then another jump and another howl, as if the piano had two tails and you trod on both of 'em at once, and a clatter and scramble and jumps, up and down, back and forward, one hand over the other, like a stampede of rats and mice more than anything called music.

W[illegible] of a woman who [illegible] near a large city, who being asked by the pastor one day if her husband feared the Lord, replied, fear him? why, bless you, he is so feared of him that he never goes out o' the house Sundays without takin' his gun along. We know of some naughty boys who fear the Lord in the same way, and always take a long pole with with them in their Sunday perambulations. They never go fishing on the Sabbath, however; oh no.

Spring Races.

One thousand dollars in premiums is offered at the Spring Races, on the 24th and 25th days of May.

Who is it that does not admire that noble animal—the horse? Come and see him perform his feats of wonder on the 24th and 25th inst.

The half fare arrangement on the D. E. R[illegible] R[illegible], [illegible] the days of the races, will draw an immense crowd from the Eel River valley.

As the time approaches, the excitement increases over the races on the 24th and 25th days of May. Quite a number of noted trotting and running horses are already in town.—Col. City Post.

LIVES there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself has said, 'Rah for the fourth of July. A few base souled renegades have the face to assert that the celebrating of the Fourth of July is dying out, and ere the hundredth anniversary of the Independence of the United States as a nation shall have arrived, that date will practically cease to glorified by the fire crackers and the pin wheel. We think this is a mistake—to call it by no harsher name—even with regard to the pyrotechnics; but it is treason to the instincts of the patriot's heart to argue that the date which began our National life will ever be forgotton. Let us, citizens of Auburn, "take time by the forelock," and the coming Fourth have such a celebration as the place used to see in its younger days, with roaring cannon, spread-eagle orations, free lemonade, small beer, squibs and wonderful and generous pyrotechnical displays.

There are a few shares yet to be taken of the stock of the Building Loan, and Savings Association It is hoped that those who have taken no interest in this matter will do so immediately.]

Newspaperial.

The adjourned meeting of the Editorial Association, at South Bend, last Friday, was about the most pleasant and successfull of any yet held. In the first place South Bend is one of the finest places in the district in which a gathering of this kind could be held, because our editorial brethern there must be placed in the front rank as newspaper men. Three very large and well filled papers are published there weekly, all well sustained and we would say that their proprietors were making money, if it were not for the fact that they were playing a game what we might vulgarly term cut throat, without the shadow of an excuse to justify them in their unprofessional management of affairs. While we regard each with friendly feelings, we cannot help but think that they are not only injuring themselves but setting a very bad precedent to other places. When publishers of a place cannot work in unison and harmony as to their business it is because of their own inherent ugliness in business matters

A new paper, the Tribune, came out a few months ago and placed the price of their subscription at one fourth less than their competitors. This was a bad stroke of policy in two ways; first, had they looked at the matter in a business like way they must have come to the conclusion that their neighbors would do the same, and second, as a matter of business it was simply a proposition to furnish an article at cost or less. The same way with job work. Each office would have had its share of work, at reasonable prices, had not one proposed to do it for less. The step cannot but be regarded as suicidal, and although every office enjoys the prerogative of conducting its business to suit itself, yet we believe it is not an abuse of friendship to offer a suggestion even in such a case as this. Good common sense is about the best principle we know of on which to conduct business, and if our friends can justify their action on this ground we have nothing more to say.

Many of our very best editors were in attendance, and the manner in which everything went off, the interest taken, and the social features of the occasion made it as a most agreeable and successful affair. Such meetings cannot fail to do good — South Bend is a live town, full of manufactories and live enterprising men.

We stopped at the St Joseph Hotel, so would a great many others if they knew what kind of a house it is.

There's Jerry Knight, with a bird's eye view of a skating rink, ready to greet you with one of his bland smiles, and you can bet Galloway is out getting something good to eat.

Capt. Allen, at the Dwight House, is also a live man, and if the place had good buildings they would have first class hotels.

We are under many obligations to Mr. Beal of the Register and his aimable lady for their excellent entertainment during our stay Also to Mr. Osborne, of the Union whom we regard as par excellence in all things.

SOME of our neighboring Postmasters don't seem to understand the law relating to newspapers. In all cases where a paper is not taken from the office by the party to whom it is addressed it becomes his duty to notify the publisher. Blanks are furnished for that purpose, and the duty ought in all cases to be performed at once; else the paper is continued for several months—often a year, and the publisher is defrauded of his hard-earned money.

The following extract from the 'Law in reference to Newspapers,' we publish for the information of subscribers.

"1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If subscribers order their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place to which they are sent, they are responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.'

Waterloo Items.

We made a few observations last week of the handsome new brick school house now in course of erection, and found it not only well arranged for a building of that character, but also a most substantial structure in which all the modern improvements will be introduced. It will be a model building when finished and that town may well feel proud of it.

Several new business houses are being built on Main street in place of others removed or filling up gaps, that will add much to the appearance and business of the place.

Our excellent friend, Capt. John Butt, is displaying a fine stock of groceries, etc., and he is justly regarded as head quarters in this line. Goods of the best quality at the lowest prices.

Messrs. Boozer & Blattner are making [illegible] in the [illegible] [illegible]. They are live business men, up to the times with a large and splendid assortment of everything.

Thomas Lock, Esq., an old and prominent citizen of that place died every suddenly a few days ago.

The Eagle Hotel has changed propriesors Wm. Clouse being now the popular host This is the best house and is rapidly drawing a large run of custom.

Gust Lease is still shipping a large number of horses east each week.

A North-eastern Indiana Agricultural Society was organized at Waterloo last Monday. The capital stock is placed at $10,000. Grounds are to be purchased and suitable buildings erected. It is to be hoped that the project will meet with a liberal encouragment.

Remember the excursion next Friday and Saturday to the races at Columbia City. Half fare.

SETTLE UP.

Those knowing themselves indebted to me are requested to call and settle immediately. All outstanding accounts not settled by the June 1st, will be left in the hands of the proper persons for collection.

T. B. TOTTEN.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City, and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and the Day Coaches [illegible] for moving equipped with Miller's Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. The Davenport Tragedy.

A very strange tragedy of recent occurrence in Iowa, is well adapted to throw doubt upon the evidence usually relied on to prove the sanity of prisoners arraigned for crime. Herman Malchau, a resident of Davenport, left his wife and child at home on the 26th, apparently well and happy.—They had been married about two years; were much attached to their little boy and to each other, and were regarded by their neighbors as one of the most harmonious and contented families in the place. When Mr. Malchau returned from his work at noon, his wife had dinner ready for him, and cheerfully spoke to him about the work she had done in the morning in the way of washing the windows and other house-wifery.—There was no hereditary insanity in her family; there had never been any indications of it in her actions. She had always been jovial and talkative, without any trace of gloom in her nature. Yet, when Mr. Malchau returned to his work after dinner, this happy, devoted wife and fond mother went deliberately to work to destroy the life of her child and herself.—She took a water barrel into the house from the yard and half filled it with water, closed the doors and window shutters, laid her husband's coat on a bed and placed on it the following note which she had written:

"Malchau, I don't like to live. I wish every day for my death. How good, good, good you have been to me and child; I have kept this secret; I want you to do likewise; follow me."

When her husband returned from his cooper's shop at half past six, he found everything quiet about the house. The blinds were down, and no one came to meet him. Entering the front room, he found and read a note, but thought it a joke. He then passed into the back room, and saw his wife leaning into a barrel which stood near the door. He still took the matter as a jest until he took hold of her and found that she was dead. with her head sunk in the water.—Stunned, half crazed, he took the stiff body out, and rushed out of doors to look for his little boy. Not seeing him, a fearful thought brought him back again to the fatal barrel, and there he found the dead body of his child. All the details as developed at the coroner's inquest show this to be a case of insanity—and yet of insanity disproved by every presumption based upon the facts of her life and character, and proved solely by deliberate and secret child-murder and suicide.—St. Louis Republican.

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

MANHOOD.
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

VINEGAR BITTERS
PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
EUREKA
VINEGAR BITTERS

J. Walker, Proprietor. R. H. McDonald & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.
The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
Mar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, California

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads; 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

SPARE THAT TREE.

Woodman, spare that tree,
Touch not a single bough;
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.
'Twas my forefather's hand
That planted it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy ax shall harm it not.

That old familiar tree;
What glory and renown
Are spread o'er land and sea,
And wouldst thou hew it down?
Woodman, forbear thy stroke,
Cut not its earthbound ties;
Oh! spare that aged oak
Now towering to the skies.

When but an idle boy
I sought its grateful shade,
In all her gushing joy
Here, too, my sister played;
My mother kissed me here,
My father pressed my hand;
Forgive this foolish tear,
But let that old oak stand.

My heartstrings 'round thee cling,
Close as thy bark old friend,
Here shall the wild bird sing
While still thy branches bend.
Old tree, the storm still brave,
And woodman, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thy ax shall harm it not.

PROFESSOR MORSE.

A Story of His Adversity.

From the Washington Capital.

We happened to meet Colonel Strother, the famous 'Porte Crayon, and, the talk turning as usual upon Morse, the Colonel said:

I know him well. I took lessons under him in drawing and painting. I first saw him when he was a competitor for the remaining panel in the rotunda of the Capitol. I thought then he ought to have had it. I think so yet. He was not a grand artist, but he was enough of an one to save us from ridicule. The job was given to Mr. Powell. General Schenck did that. The General probably did not know one picture from another, but Mr. Powell was his constituent, and he believed, did Schenk, that something in the way of art should be done for the Miami bottoms, so he worked at it till he got the commission.'

And one day, said we, Congress will give Gen. Schenck permission to remove that terrible product of the Miami bottoms. But about Morse.

Well, I engaged to become his pupil, and subsequently went to New York and found him in a room in University place. He had three other pupils, and I soon found that our professor had very little patronage. I paid my fifty dollars that settled for one quarters instruction. Morse was a faithful teacher, and took as much pains in our progress, more indeed, than we did ourselves. But he was very poor.

I remember when my second quarter's pay was due him it did not come as soon as expected, and one day the professor came in and said courteously:

Well, Strother, my boy, how are we off for money?

Why, Professor, I answered, I am sorry to say I have been dissappointed; but I expect a remittance next week.

Next week! he repeated sadly; I shall be dead by that time.

Dead, sir?

Yes, dead by starvation.

I was distressed and astonished. I said hurriedly:

Would ten dollars be of any service?

Ten dollars would save my life: that is all that it would do.

I paid the money, all that I had, and we dined together. It was a modest meal, but good, and after we had finished he said:

This is my first meal for twenty four hours. Strother, don't be an artist. It means beggary. Your life depends upon people who know nothing of your art, and care nothing for you. A house dog lives better, and the very sensitiveness that stimulates him to work keeps him alive to suffering.

I remained with Prof. Morse three years and then we separated. Some years afterward I met him on Broadway, one day.—He was about the same as before, a trifle older and somewhat ruddier. I asked him how he was getting on with his painting, and he told me that he had abandoned it; that he had something better, he believed; and told about his proposed telegraph. I accompanied him to his room, and there found several miles of wire twisted about, and the battery, which he explained to me. His pictures, finished and unfinished, were lying about covered with dust. Shortly after Congress made an appropriation, and Morse was on the high road to wealth and immortality.

Small Show for Legs.

A Detroit man, who had contributed a bundle of cast-off clothing for the relief of the victims of the Minnesota fire, received from one of the sufferers the following note:

"The committy man give me, amongts other things' what he called a pair of pants, and twood make me pant sum to ware em. I found the name and where you live in one of the pockets. My wife laffed so when I shode 'em to her that I thot she would have a connipshun fit.

She wants to no if there lives and brethes a man who has legs no bigger than that. She sed if there was he otter to be taken up for vagrinsy fur havin' no visible means of support.

I couldent get 'em on my oldestboy, so I used 'em for gun cases. If you have another pare to spare, my wife would like to set 'em to hang up by the side of the fire-place to keep the tongs in.

AN IMPROMTU SPY.

A Story Founded on Facts.

BY. J. B. MUSICK.

The thought of being a spy, being detected and executed had always been a terror to my mind. When my commanding general desired me to enter the enemy's camp and discover their position, it was sometime before I could consent to so hazardous an undertaking, [illegible] love of adventure, I consented to act as an impromptu spy. Our army was at the time of which I write, lying within a few miles of Memphis, Tennessee, and I was thoroughly acquainted with every square mile of country, between us and the rebel army.

Procuring a complete disguise, I succeeded in making my way inside the rebel lines, though not without considerable difficulty, and being within a hair's breadth of detection a hundred times. The three days I was compelled to remain in the enemy's camp, seemed like so many centuries to me. Each moment I knew might be my last; but I succeeded better than I expected. Although I found suspicion occasionally aroused, I managed to allay it. With an innumerable amount of difficulties, I succeeded in making a plot of the rebel army and concealed it in the loose sole of my boot. Then by a stratagem, I procured a pass, and mounting my horse, left the camp, which to me had proved a terror.

It was early in the morning when I left, and all went on well until toward evening when a squad of seven rebel cavalry galloped down the road in my advance. I felt all my hopes sink as they came up and demanded a halt; but was compelled to obey.

When asked who I was, and where I was going, I simply handed them my pass from the commanding general of the Southern army.

'This may be all right stranger,' said the leader, giant, black whiskered, savage looking guerrilla; 'but we must search you nevertheless.'

I remonstrated against this but a pair of carbines were leveled at my breast, and I was ordered to dismount. Knowing that resistance would be useless—although I once grasped my revolver for that purpose—I sprang from the saddle.

They first took off my hat and coat. In the pocket of the latter they found a flask of brandy, which afterwards proved very beneficial to me. When my clothing had undergone a thorough investigation, I was commanded to draw my boots. Had they not deprived me of my revolver, I should have resisted the whole squad; but as I was disarmed I could only submit. With great reluctance I drew them off. The chieftain thrust his hand in one, and ripping out the false sole, drew forth the paper that I knew was my death warrant.

'A Spy!' he hissed, and in an instant I could see the fiery glance of his men turned fiercely upon me. I say all his men, I mean all but one, he, a youth of twenty, looked on me with a glance of pity rather than hatred.

From that moment I knew my doom was sealed. It seemed hard that one in the bloom of youth as I was, should meet with the horrible fate of a spy. All the scenes of my past life flashed before my mind. I thought of home, parents, brother and sisters, what would be their feelings on hearing of my fate, and in spite of myself, a groan burst from my lips.

'You'd ort to 'a' thought of that before,' growled the leader, doubtless conjecturing my feelings.

'Kill him! hang him!' chorused three or four of the most hostile.

'A Spy's fate is death, and let him receive the doom.'

In an instant the fierce guerrillas gathered about me, and I could well conceive their designs toward me. In tones of calmness that ever since puzzled me, I cried:

'Hold, gentlemen! Can you execute a man without first giving him a trial? Pause and reflect a moment on what you are about to do, before you take a step so rash, I demand a trial, and according to all military rules, you are compelled to give to me.'

'You shall have it, said the leader.' 'We'll take you before Lee, and he'll make short work of you.'

It was now fairly dark, and they consulted for some time on what course to pursue for the night. At last they decided to ride into a dense woods and encamp.

A rebel rode on each side of me and kept a strict guard over me, until we arrived at the spot dedicated to our camping ground. They made arrangements for the night, leaving the youthful rebel to guard me while the others proceeded to discuss the contents of my brandy flask. I remained at one side of the camp fire, bowed in painful reflection for an hour or more, until uproarous merriment aroused me, and I found that all the rebels, save my youthful guard, were becoming very drunk. Hope—faint as it was—sprang up in my breast. I contemplated the scene for a while and saw the inebriated guerrillas, one by one, fall asleep. I then turned my eyes on my youthful guard, and a tender, pitying gaze met my glance.

'Have you a mother?' I asked.

'I have,' he answered.

'So have I,' I said. 'Do you love your mother, and does she love you?'

'Love my dear mother? I adore her, and she loves me better than life.'

'If you should meet with a sudden and horrible death, what would be your mothers fate, do you suppose?'

A moment's pause, and then he said, 'she would die of grief.'

'Young man, I have been bad, it is true. I have been in your camp as a spy, have taken a plot of your army, but that is taken from me now. I have an old mother at home who loves me as dearly as yours loves you, and oh! think of the horror it will bring her if I am condemned as a spy. If I am taken to your camp, I shall almost as surely be hung, and that will bring my poor mother to an untimely grave, and will your cause be benefitted any by it? You now have it in your power to save my life, my mother from sorrow, and injure your cause very slightly.'

I paused and gazed very intently at the young soldier, and saw the big tear rolling down his cheek. My words had touched his heart. After a few moments he said:

'If you are taken inside our lines you will be hung, and God forgive me if I do wrong, but you shall be set at liberty. My companions are all asleep steal away and when you are at sufficient distance, I will fire my gun and raise the alarm, then you must take care of yourself.'

Seizing his hand, I placed a diamond ring on his finger and asked his name.

'Ernest Bernard,' he replied.

'Heaven grant, Ernest, we may meet again,' I gasped; then rose and crept to where my horse was tied, cut the halter, and vaulted in the saddle. A flash and report came from the camp; but I was away before the drunken rebels were broused.

I traveled all night, and at early dawn my eyes gratified with the sight of a company of blue coats. It proved to be a part of my own regiment, and they conducted me to the Union army in safety.

A few weeks later, our regiment was ordered to carry a strong rebel work. As we advanced, a dozen cannon belched forth their deadly contents among us, and a whole brigade of musketry 'joined in the chorus,' but amid the thundering roar, sulphurous smoke, whizzing balls, and dying groans, we took possession of the work at the point of the bayonet.

In the fight I saw a youthful Confederate fall. By a flashing diamond on his finger, I recognized him to be Ernest. In an instant I had him in my arms.

The wound in his side was mortal. He turned his dying eyes on me, and recognizing me, murmured.

'My mother; tell her how I saved your life, and that I died a Christian.'

These were his last words, for he died almost instantly.

Oh, how I clasped that lifeless clay in my arms, and rained the tears on the pale face.

It was several weeks before I found Mrs. Bernard. I gently broke to her the sad tidings. The good woman never fully recovered from the shock, and in a few weeks followed her son to that better world whither his spirit had fled.

Fruits of Courtship.

Ned Grimes wore a sad countenance. He was often asked what was the matter; but no satisfactory answer was forthcoming.

At length, a particular friend obtained the following particulars from him:

'You know,' said Ned, 'I have been courting Sally W., a long while; and so we had a great notion of getting married, when that darned old Colonel——'

'Go on, Ned, don't be a boy; what about Colonel———?'

'Why you see, Sally said I had better ask him; and so I did, as perlite as I knowed how.'

'Well, what reply did he make?'

'Why, he kinder hinted round!'

'Well, what kind of hints did he throw out?

'Well, he kinder hinted round as if I wa'n't wanted there.'

'Well, Ned, let us know what they were; what the Colonel said to disturb your mind so?'

'Why, he said—'

'Said what?'

'Why, he said if he catched me there again, he would cowhide me till I hadn't an inch of skin on my back; darn his old pictur!'

SAVED BY LIGHTNING.

'It looks like a shower; don't it Reuben?' said a young, fair looking matron, standing in the doorway of a cabin just as the sun was drooping behind the treetops to the west.

A young man, hardy and strong, was coming up from the clearing down by the river, with the axe he had been wielding all through the day thrown over his shoulder. These words from his wife saluted his ears as he came near, and caused him to turn his head and glance away to the southward, where a great bank of clouds were piled high against the evening sky.

Yes, Ruth, it does look like it, he answered, I thought I heard thunder just before I left work.

What have you seen to shoot, Reuben? she said. Don't go out again to-night for supper is waiting now.

I am not going he answered quietly.

I am only making sure that my rifle is in good order. But still, I may have occasion to use it before morning.

The young wife turned pale.

You don't mean to say the savages are here again? she said.

You may as well know the truth at once, Ruth, said her husband, looking her full in the face. There are redskins hanging around here, and I'm afraid they mean us mischief. I've seen no less than three at one time within an hour, skulking in the edge of the wood. Their motions tell me that we had better be on our guard to-night.

Oh, Reuben, what shall we do? and her eyes sought the bed where a rosy-cheeked boy of some two summers was lying fast asleep.

We must do the best we can. The cabin is stout and strong, and I doubt about their being able to break in, should they try it. But you must have a lot of courage, Ruth. Maybe it won't be needed, and I hope it won't. Now let us make sure that the cabin is all tight, and then we will have that supper which you say is waiting.

The heavy oaken shutters of the two small windows were put in place, and secured there, and then the door was closed and barred, and a large stick of timber that was kept for that purpose was placed against it. When the preparation had been completed, Reuben announced that he was ready for his supper. This was soon placed upon the table, and it must be confessed that the danger which hovered over them did not in the least diminish his appetite. But Ruth could hardly swallow a mouthful, and she wondered how it was that her husband could.

The darkness increased, and the sound of distant thunder broke upon their ears. Through a chink in the shutter they saw the cloud in the south was fast rising and spreading itself over the heavens.

Hark! said Reuben; what was that?

Both were silent, and holding their breath to listen. In a moment the sound was repeated. It was a footstep without. Ruth trembled with apprehension. Then another and another was heard.

The redskins were about the cabin.

They have come, cried Ruth in a low tone.

Yes, said Reuben. Hark! let us see what they mean to do.

A minute later and the door was shaken violently. Then a savage without exclaimed in broken English: 'White man, open door; Injuns want to come in.

To this appeal Reuben made no answer. He had no idea of granting the request, and the words he knew would do no good. Again the demand was made. But, as before no answer was returned. Then came a few moments of silence on their part. The mutters of thunder were nearer and deeper. The tempest was coming. Suddenly there came so fearful a blow upon the door that it made the entire cabin tremble, while Ruth gave utterance to a shrill cry of alarm.

Courage, said her husband; they are trying to batter the door down, but I hardly think they can do it.

It is not for myself I fear, she said, It is for our child Reuben.

We will do our best to save him and our own lives, he answered. Even though the door give away, with my rifle I can do much to save us.

Once more a terrible blow was dealt upon the door, and at the same time came a peal of thunder that seemed to shake the solid earth. So tremendous was the blow the savages dealt, that the prop against the door gave away, and fell from its place, and the door itself trembled as though it was coming down. The heart of Reuben sank within his breast. Another such blow must place them at the mercy of the savages. Only his rifle would stand between them and death. But at this moment Providence interposed its hand. As though the peal of thunder had been a signal for the tempest to commence, the rain came down in torrents. Not knowing the execution the last blow had done, the savages hesitated as the storm broke upon them.

A little way from the cabin stood a large oak the settlers had spared for its beauty and grateful shade. To the shelter of this the savages fled, to wait until the tempest was over. Thus our friends had a respite for a time. Hastily Reuben replaced the prop, and did his best to make the door secure again.

Suddenly there came a vivid flash of lightning, followed by a report that seemed to shake the earth as though it was a leaf suspended in mid air. For a time they were dazed and stunned by the report; and when at last they were themselves again, the rain had ceased. A bright light shone without, and Reuben once more gazed through the crevice to see what it meant.

The oak was riven into a thousand fragments, and its trunk was on fire.—Scattered among the debris lay the mangled forms of the savages. The blow that had blasted the oak had deprived them of life.

A Sad Case.

Some years ago a lady of Newport, a daughter of a wealthy and aristocratic family, became acquainted with Mr. Thos. Williams, a mechanic by trade, who, although possessed of no great wealth, was was a very agreeable companion, and favored with hosts of friends. Out of all the favorites who claimed her hand, the lady chose Mr. Williams as the one whom she most loved, and in a short time they were both married, though at the cost of her parents' displeasure, who could not understand her motives, for such an action. They went to Boston and took up a residence there, living in all the enjoyment of quiet domestic life. Years rolled on, misfortune assailed them. The husband's health failed, and about two months ago he was confined to his bed with a growing tumor. Then Mrs. Williams to keep want from her door, applied herself to dress-making, until it became apparent that her protector must die, when she was obliged to attend him. The work was too much for her and she sought relief in opiates. On Friday a lady living in a room, adjoining heard a strange noise, and on entering found Mrs. Williams upon the floor, the subject of violent convulsions, indicating an overdose of laudanum. A Physician was called, but the lady died in a few hours afterward with intense suffering.—Mr. Williams lived only until Saturday morning, when he died at half-past seven o'clock. While both were dying a conciliatory dispatch was received from her relatives, which at one time would have added new joys to their happy lives, but it came too late. On Saturday both the bodies were taken to Newport for interment.

A Manly Answer.

All honor to the boy who cannot be laughed out of doing right. Five boys, pupils in a boarding school, were engaged in a game of cards. The fifth was not standing and looking on to see how the game would go, but was engaged in work of his own. It so happened that one of the players was called out.

'Come!' said the others to their companion. It is too bad to have the game stop here in the middle. Come and take his place.

'I do not know one card from the other.'

'That makes no difference, we will teach you. Come, now; do not let our sport be spoiled.'

The boy perceived that this was the decisive moment. Ah! just such are the critical points which are sometimes the turning-points in life. His resolution was immediately taken. He made no more excuses, but at once planted himself square upon principle.

'My father does not wish me to play cards, and I shall not act contrary to his wishes.'

This ended the matter. It established his position among his companions. It compelled their respect, and preserved him from temptation in the future.

Washington Pastry.

A sojourner in Washington sends the following: I am particularly fond of lemon pie and ice-cream for dessert. At ——— hotel I went on peaceably for a couple of weeks, but always eating lemon pie under a silent protest, for I was a stranger and did not like to make objections. Finally I called a waiter and said:

John, I have nothing to say about this ice cream, but what kind of pie is this?

What kind did you order, sah?

I ordered lemon pie, but this appears to be dried apple.

Dat's lemon pie, sah. You know dey has a way of mixin' dried apples and lemons together here, to make lemon pie, sah, to dat extent it requires a man of ability to 'stinguish 'em apart, sah. De lemons is scase, you know, and dey has to 'conomise 'em so as to make one lemon do for sixteen pies.

Changed Her Mind.

Dick was poor—Katy had a rich mother—Dicky loved Katy and vice versa—Dicky was forbid the premises—notes were exchanged through the high board fence which enclosed the yard.

One day the old lady went out "calling," and Dicky was duly informed of the fact—called on Katy—remained a little too long—old lady was close at hand—no chance of escape without dectetion. At the instance of Katy, Dicky dopped into the closet—old lady saw that Katy looked confused—guessed that Dicky had been there—supposed of course that he had made good his escape—thought perhaps the young couple had agreed to elope together—determined to be too smart for them—shut Katy up in the same closet where Dicky was concealed and giving her a pair of quilts and a pillow locked her up for the night—diden't see Dicky—next morning went to let out Katy.

"Oh, Lord!" a scream—couldent get breath for a moment—finally:

"Ahem, Dicky, that you?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Dick, you must stay to breakfast.

"Couldn't ma'am."

"Oh, but you must."

Dicky concluded to stay.

Breakfast table—"Dicky, I've been thinking about you a good deal lately. You are honest and industrious I hear."

"I never brag."

"Well, now, upon the whole Dicky, I think you and Katy had better get married."

There are said to be over eight hundred periodicals published at present in London, England.

Couldn't Get the Right Flop.

In the year 1743, during the Millerite excitement in the usual quiet town of of Durham, 'Aunt Sally ——,' who would 'weigh nigh two hundred pounds,' came to the conclusion that she was bound to 'go up,' and one evening in meeting, in the midst of a warm season of exhortation, she arose and said:

'Oh! brethren and sisters, bless the Lord! I'll soon get away from this wicked world; I'm going to meet the Lord in a few days. My faith is powerful strong. Oh, yes, powerful it is. So strong," continued the old lady, extending her arms and motioning them like a bird on wing, 'that it does seem as if I could fly right away now and meet the Lord in the air.'

The minister, who was as great an enthusiast on 'going up' as the old lady, encouraged her by exclaiming:

'Try, sister, try! perhaps you can fly if your faith is only strong enough.'

'Well I can,' she exclaimed, 'I know I can, and I will!'

She was standing near a window which was raised on account of the oppressive heat, for it was summer.—With her handkerchief in one hand and her fan in the other, she mounted the seat, and thence to the top of the pew, and gave a leap into the air, with a flying motion of her arms, expecting to ascend heavenward. But the law of gravitation was too much for her faith and the gravity of the audience. Down she came with an enormous and not very angelic grunt, shaking the whole house with the concussion.

She arose, folded her wings, and with great meekness sneaked back into her seat, evidently disappointed.

The next evening some of the young folks asked her:

'Aunt Sally, why didnt you fly last night when you tried so hard?'

'I couldn't get the right flop!'—was the meek and conclusive answer.

Why Some are Poor.

Cream is allowed to mold and spoil.

Silver spoons are used to scrape kettles.

The scrubbing brush left in the water.

Bones are burned that would make soap.

Nice handled knives are thrown into hot water.

Brooms are never hung up and soon are spoiled.

Dish clothes are thrown where mice can destroy them.

Tubs and barrels are left in the sun to dry and fall apart.

Clothes are left on the line to whip to pieces in the wind.

Pie crust is left to sour, instead of making a few tarts for tea.

Vegetables are thrown away that would warm for breakfast.

Dried fruit is not taken care of in season, and becomes wormy.

Bits of meat are thrown out that would make hashed meat or hash.

The cork is left out of the molasses jug, and the flies take possession.

Pork spoiles for the want of salt, and beef because the brine wants scalding.

Coffee, tea, pepper and spices are left to stand open and lose their strength.

Potatoes in the cellar grow, and the sprouts are not removed until they become useless.

The bread is sifted in a wasteful manner, and the bread-pan left with the dough sticking to it.

Vinegar is drawn in a tin basin, and allowed to stand till both basin and vinegar are spoiled.

Cold puddings are considered good for nothing, when often they can be steamed for the next day.

The Cadi's Decision.

A poor Turkish slater, of Constantinople, being at work upon the roof of a house, lost his footing and fell into the narrow street upon a man who chanced to be passing at the time.—The pedestrian was killed by the concussion, while the slater escaped without material injury.

The son of the deceased caused the slater to be arrested and taken before the Cadi, where he made the most grave charge, and claimed ample redress.

The Cadi listened attentively, and in the end asked the slater what he had to say in his defense.

"Dispenser of justice," answered the accused, in humble mood, "it is even as this man says; but God forbid that there should be evil in my heart. I am a poor man and know not how to make amends.

The son of the man who had been killed thereupon demanded that condign punishment should be inflicted upon the accused.

The Cadi meditated a few moments, and said:

"It shall be so."

Then to the slater he continued:

"Thou stand in the street where the father of this man stood when thou didst fall upon him"

And to the son he added:

"And thou shalt, if it so pleases thee, go upon the roof, and fall upon the culprit, even as he did fall upon thy father. Allah is great!"

The Courier.

AUBURN, IND., MAY 30, 1872

THE Republican Press have just recently discovered that Horace Greeley was in favor of peaceable secession.—As long as he served the powers that be, nothing was said about it.

TOM BROWNE, is chuck full, and can't hold out any longer. He is now making a delivery of a few old played out war speeches. Come, Thomas, lets have something new.

IT is stated that the income of the Order of Odd Fellows in the United States amounts to $3,500,000 per annum. One hundred million is annually devoted to charitable purposes.

In the Apache country the Indians are said to have become so peaceable that it is hard to tell a redskin from a white man; the only difference being that the white usually has no scalp and the Apache has two or three.

SHALL we elect Greeley or Grant. —Exchange.

Neither of them. We can and will elect a Democrat if the Baltimore Convention will give us the opportunity.—Pittsburgh Post

THE Dolly Varden Candidate of the Republican's for Governor makes flaming speeches about the war issues. Why not give us something about the Stover affair, touch up Ham Conner, the late Chairman of the State Central Committee and tell to the people of the money filched from them by State officials since the war.

Good News for Grant.

Custom House Inspectors William Hussy, Samuel Barclay, and George Bliss last night seized on board the steamship Moro Castle 15,000 Havana cigars which were stowed away in India rubber bags and ready to be thrown overboard to men in small boats who were on hand to pick them up. The owners would not claim them.

And if Not, Why Not?

It might have pleased God to make man incapable of sin, but for certain wise purposes, (for which consult the catechism) he did not choose to do so. Shall man be more wise than his maker? If the Democracy can save the country from corruption, military rule and absolutism, by electing to the Presidency this fall such an old Republican sinner as Greeley, they have a perfect right to do so if they choose.

THE farm of A. is taxed to the last spear of vegetation. A. is a producer and adds to the wealth of the country.

The bonds of B. contributes never a cent to the support of town, county, State or Federal Government.

Thus the party in power pampers men of leisure at the expense of the man of labor. Has royalty—with all its crowns, and sceptres, and thrones—done more than that?

Attorney-General Williams is earning his salary and evincing his gratitude to his master by telegraphing from the Pacific coast enthusiastic prophecies of a large vote for Grant in November. Now let Robeson be sent to Camden, Fish to New York city, Creswell to Hartford county, and Delano to Ohio, and let each of them telegraph to Washington at intervals glowing accounts of Grant's prospects in the sections assigned to them.—They may succeed in keeping up the spirits of their master and his military court, if not in deceiving the people.

Unfit for President.

There is no sympathy for the people in the breast of President Grant. A face that is always stern, stolid and never seen to smile—a sour morose disposition, careless of others feelings, betrays the icy heart within. He eludes association with good men, and stands alone, as it were, in a sort of Arctic soliude where no genial spring or Autumn separates the bright but brief summer from the long, dim, pitiless winter.

Of such men it is well, perhaps, to make Generals but not Presidents, whose every heart-pulse should beat in unison with the wants of the people.

Kerr for Governor.

We are glad to see that quite a number of democratic papers are urging the nomination of Hon. M. C. Kerr for Governor. He has been our choice from the first.

We understand that Mr. Kerr is not an aspirant for any position. His private affairs need his attention. and justice to himself and family demands that they should be put in better shape; and his wasted fortune, never very large, recuperated. But he will not refuse to serve in any position in which he may be placed, if the people call him.

Mr. Kerr is one of the foremost men of the country. Everywhere he is recognized as one of the ablest champions of the people. His honesty, his devotion to principle, his aims which tend only to the good of the country, has given the people confidence in him, and they will yet see that he shall be rewarded for the labor he has done, and the sacrifices he has made, in the last eight years.—Seymour Democrat.

The Grant Convention convenes at Philadelphia next Tuesday

MR. GREELEY accepts the nomination of the Liberal Republicans. His letter of acceptance, delayed as he remarks, until he could learn how the work of the convention was received in all parts of the country, reviews the platform at some length, in a spirit of hope and admiration, and closes with the following generous and patriotic sentiment:

"With the distinct understanding that if elected I should be President, not of a party, but of the whole people, I accept your nomination in the confident trust that the masses of our countrymen, North or South, are eager to clasp hands across the bloody chasm which has too long divided them, forgetting that they have been enemies in the joyful consciousness that they are and henceforth must remain brethren."

This sentiment is platform enough for any one who is actuated by a genuine love of the laws and institutions of his country and not moved by selfish considerations. It is as noble, pure and christainly as the sermon on the mount, and it is earnestly to be hoped will tend to the restoration of that kind and forgiving spirit which should exist among brethren of a common nationality.

The Bounty Law.

The late law in regard to bounties does not include soldiers who enlisted for three months. Under the law the accounting officers have decided as follows: All soldiers who enlisted for three years between, May 4 and July 25, 1861, and were mustered for three years prior to August 6, 1861, and were honorably discharged, are entitled. if they have not received the same for such service, to $100 bounty. Soldiers who were discharged for promotion are not entitled to the bounty, as such a muster out was not such as was contemplated by General Order No. 15, 1861, under which the contract was made. Where soldiers were enlisted and mustered as above, and died or were killed in the service, their heirs having received, or being entitled to receive, the bounty under the act of July 22 1861, are not entitled to this bounty. Where soldiers were enlisted and mustered as above, and have died subsequent to discharge, their heirs are not entitled to this bounty, for the reason that bounty is a gratuity, and is only payable to the parties named in the law or order under which the contract was made. Soldiers entitled to this bounty are not entitled to bounty under act of July 28, 1866, and vice versa. The bounty there granted is under the conditions named in the act, which conditions are not changed by subsequent law. A law of the same date extended the time for filing claims under the act of July 28, 1866, which was limited to January 13, 1871, by the act of January 30, 1873. All claims which may have been filed in the proper department since the date of limitation will be considered without refiling.

An Indignant Denial.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The following is the letter from Mr. Voorhees to one of his constituents referred to in a special telegram from Washington, of the 17th inst:

DEAR SIR: Your favor is at hand. The idea that I would, under any circumstances, support Grant, seems too ridiculous for serious consideration. The statements are maliciously and absurdly false. The reason why I won't support Greeley is that he is no better man than Grant in any respect, and on some points worse. This was my meaning when speaking the House.—No honest and intelligent Democrat can support either Grant or Greeley without first abandoning his principles. Fire and water can mingle more easily and more consistently than I could become an adherent of either of them. I shall stand by my sincere and life long principles If I did otherwise I would be a dishonest man, unworthy of my own respect or the respect of anybody else. If for this course I am to be condemned, I am entirely content. I would not take any other for all the honors the world has to give.—I confidently believe, however, that the great Democratic party will not commit a disgraceful suicide at Baltimore on the 9th of July. I believe it will be guided by principle and honor, and present candidates for whom the true and honest masses of the Democracy can vote with self-respect. I shall labor to bring about such a result: others are laboring to nominate Greeley, the most odious man to the Democratic party in the United States. I am willing that the public may judge between them and me, and determine who has been true to himself, to his party, and to his convictions.

Yours, truly,
D. W. VOORHEES.

A Monster Institution.

It is said that the New York Grand Central Hotel is the largest in the world. it can accommodate guests enough to stock a good sized town.—The building contains fifty halls, fifteen hundred windows and two thousand doors. The carpeting alone covers a space of seven acres, and the marble tiling embraces an area of one acre—The steam pipes employed would extend in a straight line twenty-five or thirty miles. There are ten thousand gallons of water on the roof ready for constant use in case of fire, and one hundred and seventy five feet of hose on evry floor. The cost of furnishing the house was upwards of half a million of dollars, and there is not a room in the vast establishment that is not the perfection of good taste and convenience. Board varies from $3 to $4 per day.

Straight-Out Democratic Nominations.

There are two classes of Democrats who are in favor of a straight-out Democratic nomination at Baltimore, and we have a few words to say of each.

The first class are time-honored Democrats who dislike to change front, and now think it possible to elect a Democratic candidate by taking advantage of the split in the Republican party.—But they are sincerely and zealously hostile to the re-election of Grant; and just so soon as they are convinced that a straight-out nomination cannot accomplish that object they stand ready to yield to the exigency, accept the situation, and do the next best thing, which is to ratify the Cincinnati nomination at Baltimore.

This class of democrats are steadily and rapidly diminishing in numbers, and for these plain, practical reasons: They admit that there is not the slightest hope of success under their programme unless they can bring to the support of an independent Democratic ticket the whole body of the Democrats in the North and in the South.

Open to conviction, and watching the drift of sentiment in their own party, this class of Democrats are beginning to see that an independant Democrat ticket, so far from binding the party together, would certainly split it in two. They are becoming satisfied that, irrespective of what is done at Baltimore, a large portion of the Democracy will vote for Greeley and Brown. They do not fail to perceive that this would be the case in some of the New England States, in new York, in Pennsylvania, in Indiana, in Illinois and in other portions of the North.—And more especially do they see that this is true of all the former slaveholding States, and particularly those which are under the heels of Grant's carpet-baggers. Indeed, this class of Democrats cannot be blind to the fact that the Democracy of the reconstructed States are more favorable to Greeley than they would be to Hendricks, Groesbeck, or any other Democrat whose record is such as to give him any hold upon the Northern Democracy.

These obvious facts will soon determine the course of that class of Democrats of whom we are speaking; for they will ere long come to the conclusion that straight-out Democratic nominations will not hold the Democratic masses, but rend the party asunder, and therefore the only chance for beating Gen. Grant is to ratify for Dr. Greeley.

The other class of Democrats to whom we refer is a small one, and we shall dispose of them very summarily. They are for Grant, and are carrying on their work in his behalf under the false pretence of maintaining the honor and consistency of the Democratic party, and under a disguise so thin that everybody with half an eye sees right through it and discovers their duplicity. Feeble in numbers, the subjects of suspicion to their old associates, and only too plainly engaged in picking up their traps preparatory to marching over to the Grant camp, their opinions will have no weight with the Baltimore Convention; while throughout the rest of the campaign they will prove to be far more damaging to the new party which they join than the old party which they desert.—N. Y. Sun.

Scarcity of Honest Men in Office.

Diogenes, three thousand years ago, ran about Athens looking for an honest man. The historians have forgotten to say whether he found one or not. We fear that a similar search now would only terminate in results equally unsatisfactory and obscure.

The taint is on both and all parties alike. The Tammany rascalities in New York have their counterpart in the whisky and tobacco rings, the General Order ring, etc., etc., in which the politicians of the other side appear to be deeply implicated.

Never was Mr. Calhoun's portrature of the 'cohesive power of public plunder' so apt to impress one as at the present time The plunder in his day, however, was the merest bagatelle, compared with what we see now, while the plunderers have multiplied in the same ratio. Men in office appear to have lost all moral sensibility, while honor and honesty are ceasing to have the same meaning that they formerly had.

This cannot go on forever. We cannot always 'run' this government, on a system of politics divorced from morals. That is the very system that is in vogue at this moment in all the States, and in many of the more important departments of the Federal Administration. If the people are not great fools, they will upset that system and insist upon having a better one in its place. Candidates for office must have character. Just now, the rule seems to be to get on with as little character as possible. Why should not the public, in the aggregate, be as particular about the sort of men whom they select to transact their business in Washington or Albany as that same public is, individually, when it has to choose servants for its domestic household? The public must take a livelier personal interest in the choice of its servants, and not delegate the duty, as they do now, to the back politicians. In that way, honest men enough, and men who will not rob, nor take bribes, can be got. If there is any other way, we should be glad to have somebody point it out.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The growing hostility to the Grant dynasty is noticeable in the number of Republicans who are daily coming out for Greeley. If it is safe to form an estimate from our local indication, fully one fourth of the Republican party of the country will support the Cincinnati nominees. We hear of Liberal Republicans on all hands, and every man of them with whom we have talked is ready to form a compact alliance with the Democracy and go to the polls hand in hand, to work for the success of a united National, State and County ticket. If wise councils bring about such a union of forces it will sweep Laporte County by a majority which will appall the servile tools of the Grant faith. Besides this, it will unite the conservative elements in a powerful organization which will hereafter work together in harmony and control the destiny of the country.—Laporte Argus.

Schuyler Colfax Co., Nebraska,
MAY, 24th, 1872.

DEAR COURIER.—The parental solicitude evinced in a personal note from a good Democrat of your county, and a companion in the late Rebellion, Wm. A. Goodrich, touched to vibration a tender chord in the susceptible organization of your now meek and lowly correspondent.

With the alacrity ever conspicuous in the demeanor of the truly repentent, I chassa forward to acknowledge and ask pardon for boring the innumerable ears and eyes of your readers for the oil of forbearance and water of compassion.

As to the pointed insinuations touching my supposed connections with the villainous radical party, I hurl them back into his slanderous ink bottle through your dear paper, that the many friends and acquaintances in Smithfield tp., may know to which party I now, and for the last two years have held with this further retort. This Radical anti steal fund has been pretty successfully carried on since the election of Abraham Lincoln, and in this State until the recent impeachment of our Chief Magistrate, Butler, which has caused the scales to drop from every honest Republicans eyes. I am ruthlessly shorn of the only official dignity to which I ever attained, salary $2 00 per annum. If this is'ent the double distilled quintessence of man's inhumanity to man, send us a bottle.

Be it now, hereafter and forever known to all to whom these presents come greeting, that B. W. Powell, of DeKalb county, Ind., and now of Nebraska, having been a spectator of this world's fleeting shows, for mans' illusion given, long enough to know that the darkest spots are close to the brightest, and the Radical party will steal more than they can hide.

This bran new moral runs at large. Take it, your welcome, no extra charge—and for the Democratic party we shall vote and strive, in the faint hope of thereby helping to infuse some minute degree of vitality, and stir it into the placid limbs of the aforesaid party. And if coming events shall prove forsooth that we and all such do therein err, charity will believe that it was an error of the judgment and not of the heart.

Yours, in the hope of soon returning to the green sward of Indiana's fertile bosom, safely through the intensely critical period of homestead life, where I have repeatedly seen the righteous forsaken and his seed begging bread, around this mundane sphere.

JUDGE STANLEY MATTHEWS declared at the Cincinnati Convention, that the present Administration was permeated with corruption, in all its departments, and now he turns square around and says that he never meant by the remark to reflect upon the personal character of any man now holding a Federal office. We would like to know how a Government can be 'rotten to the core,' as he expressed it, if the rulers are upright and honest men.

Matthews is evidently a back-slider, a man whose mind changes with the moon or the breeze, and we can say to him as all inspired writers said to another: 'Unstable as water thou shalt not excel.'

A State Sold for Taxes.

While the bondholders of this country are exempt from taxation, rejoiccing in a government that takes over $300,000,000 a year for the idlers who are deciding which watering place to patronize the coming season, they might read the following from the Little Rock Gazette of the 19th ult.:

"Outrageous taxes imposed upon the people of Arkansas, at a time when they had not recovered from the impoverishing effects of the war, worked the forfeiture of the enormous quantity of 3,000,000 acres of land, or one-seventh part of the whole State, through the non-payment of taxes. During the past few weeks the State Auditor has been engaged in selling these lands.—Only about one-third of these find purchasers, and that, on an average, at the small price of the amount of taxes imposed. The unsold lands are now being re-offered for sale with the prospects that the amount disposed of added to that sold to the original sale, will not exceed one half of the whole 3,000,000 acres. Thus the State will have gotten after driving many of the people into bankruptcy becaus they could not meet the enormous taxes levied by unconscionable lawmakers, about half the taxes it demanded."

Miss Grant's Visit to Europe.

Miss Nellie, the daughter of President Grant, is received in England at the railway stations with royal honors. On the part of Queen Victoria, the honor of a gala court has been allotted to the American young lady—Nellie is fifteen years old. This looks as if it had been arranged by the paternal court at Washington, through the medium of the American Embassador at London, and the American agents, as an interlude in the Presidential campaign by which the esteem which Grant's name enjoys in Europe will be set in a clearer light. It appears that in Washington great things are expected from the effect which this comedy may have here in the United States, whose citizens are punctually informed through the cable of the precise health and precise movements of the President's daughter. 'Behold'—such is the intimation—'how much the people of Europe are better than you, unthankful citizens of the United States, who do not know how to prize the honor of possessing among your number such a man with such a daughter.' Yes, it is an old and a sad truth that the prophets are not held in much esteem in their own country.

A new engine named "Horace Greeley" has been recently put upon a railroad in the central part of the State. It is said the engineer has great difficulty in keeping the concern on the track.—Lagrange Standard.

MANHOOD,

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new adition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

The weather is pleasant again.

Potatoe bugs are not very numerous yet.

The Commissioners will meet next week in their June session.

Arkansas Democracy endorse Greeley and Brown in Convention.

Dr. T. J. Dills, of Fort Wayne, paid a brief visit to our place last Monday.

The hot sun for several days past has not added much it is hoped to the comfort of the cut worms.

The Greeley ticket has gained one Republican paper in this State. The Indiana Radical 'ts a Radical sheet.

The thunder storm of last Sunday night interrupted our telegraph communication with Fort Wayne.

We know a fellow that's going away next Sunday to see a —— He was pricing shirt cuffs last night.

Davenport's lightning soda fountain yield forth a refreshing beverage this hot weather, and many there are that avail themselves of this cooling draught.

Our friend C. S. Hare, brags on some large custom he had last Saturday. Two of 'em weighed 650 pounds, both ladies For heft we think C. S. is ahead.

There are so many new houses going up here that we have lost track of the number, and will have to send a special reporter around to interview them.

Now that the Fort Wayne Gazette has given up the State election, it is endeavoring to re-elect Shanks to Congress from that district.

Charley Baxter, of the Waterloo Press is noted for his politeness when meeting shadows.—Mishawaka Enterprise.

"I beg your pardon."

Remember the meeting of stockholders at the Court House, this Thursday evening. A loan is to be made, and all interested should be present.

Quite a number of our Republican friends in this county, are beginning to show forth agricultural proclivities. In other words they are for Greeley.

The festive cabbage worm is beginning to watch the farms. They are greatly interested in the size of the cabbage patches.

Gov. Baker has appointed a Mr. Haymond brother of Judge Haymond, of Warsaw, Prosecuting Attorney, in place of James McGrew, deceased.

Half Fare.—An excursion train will run to Fort Wayne on to-day (Thursday) at half-fare, to accommodate all who may want to attend the decoration ceremonies in that city.

The attention of the Commissioners is directed to the filthy and miserable condition of the gutter along the Court House fence on Main street. Would it not be well to put it in repair gentlemen, and have it look at least half way decent.

We were pleased to meet Dr. Baker at Columbia City last week, and our thanks are due him for hospitalities. The Doc. is one of those genial, pleasant gentlemen who are irresistable and make you feel comfortable, even away from home.

Warm weather is coming, and nothing can be more refreshing than a dish of ice cream. Smith & Hare are now furnishing a most excellent article which can be greatly enjoyed in their fine saloon over their store.

A certain Minister beautifully sold some of his sleepy real estate speculating parishioners, by remarking in a recent sermon, 'I have land to sell.' They were wide awake in a moment, but disconsolate when he continued. 'The beautiful land on high.'

Butler Schools.—We are obliged to J. E. Rose, Esq., for a catalogue of the Cutler Graded Schools for 1872. It gives a list of the scholars in attendance each year since its organization and shows a very prosperous condition of the school. Butler may well be proud of her educational facilities.

Cincinnati, May 24.—A Chronicle says the business portion of the village of Haysville, eight miles south of Ashland, Ohio, was destroyed by fire last night. The fire originated in the drug store of S. K. Beck. Loss estimated at $30,000. Insurance light.

Parties desiring to visit Philadelphia, to attend the National Convention, can procure tickets over the P., Ft. W. & C. R. R. and Pennsylvania Central, through without change, at $16 50 for the round trip from Fort Wayne.

The Races.—Several of our citizens went down to Columbia City to the races, but the regular programme was postponed until June 21st we believe. Several scrub races were gotten up, however, to accommodate those who were on hand. It is said that on Saturday 2:34 was made by a Goshen horse. Fast time.

New Project.—See in another column a communication relative to a new rail road project. A road constructed on this line would be a great advantage to us, and every encouragement should be given to the enterprise. We feel assured De Kalb county will not be found wanting in assistance when the proper time comes.

This is a good time to plant cats. The cat should be prepared with a boot-jack, revolver, or some other utensil, and then planted under the plum tree. If you have not got a plum tree, plant anywhere Plant all you can and plant deep, says Greeley. This branch of agriculture is too much neglected.

Our lady amateur florists will be interested in knowing that as a general principle a larger proportion of white flowers are fragrant than those of any other color; yellow comes next, then red, and lastly blue; after which, and in the same order, may be reckoned violet, green, orange, brown and black.

And now they have a new way to draw people to the church. A question box is placed in the vestibule of the church, into which any person can drop, questions relating to religious subjects and if the pastor judges then to be worthy of answer he reads and answers them at the next Sabbath meeting after they are thus deposited in the box.

The smallpox scare has somewhat interfered with the Millinery trade of Mrs. Little who had just received a large stock of bonnets and other goods just previous to the many absurb rumors about this disease. It was reported that the family had been atacked, but this is false. There is not the least danger in visiting her establishment, and we hope that the public will give her a share of their patronage.

Ho! for Philadelphia.—The Ft. Wayne Muncie & Cincinnati Railroad Company, will sell tickets to those who desire to attend the Philadelphia National Convention at $20 for the round trip. Tickets will be good from this (Saturday) morning, May 25, till June 15. Remember these tickets include a trip to Washington free. Tickets for Pullman Palace Sleeping cars may be had on application to W. W. Worthington, Esq., at the Muncie office.

An exchange wants to know 'if a poor lone youth, with a waxed end to his mustache, should write a young lady in this place to meet him by moonlight alone, and the young lady's old mother should come in on a tangent and tan the gent until the plane of his coat tail formed an angle with a vertical line, would the hypothenuse of the community be equal to the sum of the squares described by the young man in 'gitten away from dar?' And if so—how?

Personal.—We received a call from Mr Hamilton, the gentlemly agent of the extensive shirt establishment of Messrs. Modenwell & Fowler, of Fort Wayne. Mr. H. reports business lively in the gents furnishing department, this being the only house in Fort Wayne that handles this line of goods. Their manufacture of shirts is becoming very popular, as the largely increased trade attests. Give them a call when you visit Fort Wayne, corner Calhoun & Berry streets.

While you mourn over the devastation of your walks, lawns and shrubbery, by rooting hog, console yourself with the kindly reflection that the pretty porcine enjoyed the work which affects you.—Though hard for poor human nature, unaided by grace, to bear, yet it may be the making of the hog!

We have such an instrument called the hog ordinance in this place, but its powerless in itself to prevent the army of grunters taking their daily round. We had hopes our new Marshal would enforce it.

A Good Four-year Old.—Our worthy friend, Mr. Jos. Raineer, of this place, has the best four year old gelding, both for style and speed in the 10th District. The colt is a bright iron grey, about fifteen hands high and for proportion we challenge the State. Jo. knows how to handle him too, and if he pulls on the strings and says go, it becomes necessary for those behind him to hold their hair on, and wear habiliments of the strongest material—sheddy will not stand the breeze he raises. We pit him against any four year old in the district—Come.

Accident.—Thomas Baldock, a prominent Building Contractor of this place, met with the loss of a thumb last Tuesday morning at Berry's Machine Shop. He was using a buzz saw when his hand accidentally came in contact with the saw, with the above result. A buzz saw is about the fastest thing out. It can reach farther in less time, than anything we can think of just now. You can't touch 'em but what they'll go right back on you and take off a digit in less than no time. The wound was properly dressed and the patient doing well.

If a young woman wishes to have herself published as 'fascinating beautiful and accomplished," let her pack up her clothes in a dirty towel, crawl out of the back up-stairs window, some dark, rainy night, and elope with the man that curries and feeds her dad's horses. It's a big price to pay for compliments; but it will bring them just as certain as a dirty rain water barrel will beget mosquitoes in August. It will enhance her charms three hundred per cent by the time her case gets into the papers.

Messrs. Root & Co., of Fort Wayne, are out again with an announcement of large arrivals of new and fashionable goods at their popular establishment in Fort Wayne. When you go to Fort Wayne avoid that Shoddy concern known as Foster Bros., and go to Root & Co's, or some other respectable merchant and we will be responsible for all you may loose by this plan.

B. L. & S. A. NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of the Building, Loan and Savings Association will be held on Thursday Evening, May 30, at the Court House, at which time the monthly installments will be sold to the highest bidder.

J. B. Cassebeer, Pres't.
T. C. Mays, Sec'y.

Agassiz says: I am satisfied, since I have examined the temocaris pieroci, that tollobites are not any more closely related to the phyllopods than to any other entromostracae or to the esopods. In reality, the trilobites are like tomocaris, a synthetic type, in which structural features of the tetradecapods are combined with characters of entromonstracae and other peculiarities essentially their own.' Now there may be a few persons in Auburn, who will be foolish enough to question the veracity of the Professor, but as for ourselves, we were always of his opinion on this subject, if not a little more so.

Columbia City has two building associations doing finely, and receiving encouragement from its citizens generally. Here we lack a number of shares to have the requisite amount, 500, to complete the one organized. There are a large number of citizens that have done nothing towards encouraging it, yet they want to see our town prosper while they stand off and look on. Auburn has too many such citizens. They blow a great deal but do nothing. Just such as these retard our progress, and we would be far better off if they would retire to their holes or sell out to those who have enterprise. Which will you do?

It beats all how thick some men's wool is, and how long long it takes to force a joke through their heads. We told what we considered a very funny story to a man on the way up from Fort Wayne on Saturday last, but felt somewhat chopfallen and chagrinned because he didn't smile when we got to the place where the laugh ought to come in. We met him on Tuesday grinning from ear to ear, and seemingly ready to burst. We asked the cause of his mirth when he replied, 'why that yarn of yours comin' up from Fort Wayne.' It took him three days to see the point. We shall never tell that man another yarn—not if we know ourself, and we think we do.

A Mr. W——, of Noble county, had been smitten by the charms of Miss——, of Elkhart, and in the prosecution of his suit had supposed that all was going as 'merry as a marriage bell; the wedding day was fixed, and the would be bridegroom accompanied by a minister, and the daughter of Judge T—, and armed with a marriage license, appeared on the scene to find that the one above all others in whom his affections were centered, had on that very day, fled to Edwardsburg, Mich., with Mr. P—— a young Elkhartan, and become his wife. A notice to that effect from the lucky one reached him, and with feelings that can be imagined but cannot be described, he returned to his home a sadder and perhaps a wiser man.—Goshen Times.

CHAMPIONS.

Champion Reapers and Mowers—Champions, with that tried and true' self-rake that has been in successful operation for more than nine years, without the need of any great change. Champion's—the machine with the wrought iron frame. Champion's—without the 'old fashioned' over hanging reed. Champion's—with no complicated self rake hid from the eye, but a 'big thing' in imagination. Champions—the best made, easiest handled, most durable, lightest draft machine in use. Over 75 in DeKalb county and not a farmer gone back on them. I have the Champion in stock and hold it as an article of merchandise, the same that I do any of my shelf goods. I have all confidence in the Champion and know that it will stand on its own merits.

My stock of Agricultural Implements consists in part of the Champion, the Gump Sulky Horse Rake, the Western Walking Cultivator, the Thomas & Nishwitz Harrows. I extend an invitation to the farmers generally to call and see my goods and buy if they suit.

J. A. Matson, Waterloo, Ind.

Last week we announced the sudden den death of James McGrew, late Prosecuting Attorney of this judicial district. The Indianian gives the following as the immediate cause of death. He had been afflicted for some days past with neuralgia in the face, brought on in consequence of bad teeth, and on Thursday morning resolved to have the teeth extracted, having previously informed some of his friends that it was impossible to take chloroform, he resolved on drowning the pain that might ensue in having his teeth drawn, by placing himself in an intoxicated state, through the medium of whiskey. He commenced drinking early in the morning and must have taken an immense quantity into his stomach. In fact we learn that he drank nine ordinary glasses, within a short space of time, and some reports go to show that he had taken some even before this occurrence. On his way to the dental rooms, he drank on top of all this, nearly an ale glass of Scotch whiskey, and immediately afterward proceeded to Dr. Wm. Davenport's office, got into the chair, had four teeth pulled, and was taken out of it in an insensible condition, out of which he never rallied, dying about six o'clock in the evening, although he had medical attendance throughout the entire day.

"Society" is a nuisance, in a fashionable sense. It is nothing more nor less than a series of cold formalities. It has no heart, any more than the rock of Gibraltar. The pass word to it is 'money'—if youve got it, or can make the world think you have, 'go in.' Brush up your beaver—never mind about brushing up your character—and 'go in!' Learn the set speeches of polite gossip, dress in good taste, and keep up a fashionable outside show, and you shall safely pass with the genteel elect. Society is 'fearfully and wonderfully made.'

SETTLE UP.

Those knowing themselves indebted to me are requested to call and settle immediately. All outstanding accounts not settled by the June 1st, will be left in the hands of the proper persons for collection.

T. B. Totten.

For the Courier.

The Newark, Delaware and North-Western Rail Road.

Ed. Courier:—There has for some time been an effort made to have a rail-road built from Newark, O., to Lake Michigan, some claiming that the best route is by way of Bryan and Coldwater, to Grand Haven, Michigan, and others claiming that a better route is by way of Auburn, Kendallville, Goshen, Elkhart, and Niles to St. Joseph, Michigan.

I am well acquainted with the Auburn route and feel satisfied that it is the best. There was an attempt made last spring to organize, but somehow or other they failed to carry the matter out, and I find the following in the Kenton Republican, of May 2d:

Ada, O., May 25, 1872.—The incorporators and all persons favoring the enterprise of building the Newark, Delaware and North-Western Railroad, are requested to meet at Ada, Hardin county, O., on Tuesday, the 7th day of May, 1872, to transact such business as may lead to the speedy construction of said Railroad.

This enterprise seems now to be the most favorable project before the people of Ohio. It is a direct line from the rich coal fields of Southern Ohio, to the most beautiful pine regions of Michigan.

A. Ream,
Cor. Sec.

Of course it is too late now to attend the meeting, as the time is past, but I give this to show the people on this route a part of what is being done with refference to this matter, in hopes that they will take interest enough in this matter to secure the building of the road on this route, as I think it certainly the most proper place for the road to be built.

J. H. Shinn,
Royal Oak,
Paulding Co., O.

Who makes the first move towards celebrating the Fourth of July? Or shall we keep quiet, and let everyone celebrate on his own hook. We confess to a liking, occasionally, for a peaceable, quiet, little picnic excursion, with good company, well supplied lunch baskets, and a few hours away from the dust and heat, and a lay-off under the trees. But, as it isn't patriotic, it won't do to preach such nonsense, and we quit. It is fashionable to celebrate as Young America does, with a sixteen pounder under your bedroom window, and a national salute which commences at sundown on the 3d and lasts justs twenty-eight hours, leaving your windows without glass, your brain without the power of thought,—and the question is, then, shall we or shall we not,—shall we—celebrate.

Sabbath School Convention.

The Seventh Annual Convention of the DeKalb County Sunday School Association will be held at Corrunna, Indiana, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 4th and 5th 1872. Officers:—Moses Willis, President; R. Wes McBride, Secretary; John Otto, C. P. Houser, Assistant Secretaries; Rev. S. B. Ward, Treasurer; Vice Presidents—O C. Clark, Butler; E. Freeman, Jackson; Sam'l Lawhead, Concord; Alex. Kinmont, Newville; S. P. Wartenbee, Stafford; John Plowe, Wilmington; F. W. Willis, Union; Amos Britton, Richland; John Treesh, Fairfield; Joel E. Thompson, Smithfield; Jeremiah Lewis, Franklin; A. C. Casebeer, Troy; Executive Committee:—Rev. J. B. Fowler, chairman: James I. Best, Elkiah Zerkle, Wyllys Griswold, Dwight Moody.

All friends of Sabbath Schools in De Kalb county, are cordially invited and are expected to attend, and suggest and adopt such measures as will give increased life, and add a higher tone to the Sabbath School cause.

All come prepared to work. All will be invited from time to time to take part in the exercises of the Convention.

Each school is expected to send delegates to the Convention, with reports from their respective schools. Entertainment will be furnished free to all persons who attend the convention.

By a vote of the last Convention, each Sabbath School was requested to take up a collection to defray incidental expenses of the Convention, on the Sabbath previous to the next Convention.

The friends of Sabbath Schools generally advise to have the exercises of the Convention conducted in the form of an Institute, and dispense with a mass meeting of the scholars.

The June Folio lies upon our table, and is emphatically one of the best numbers yet issued.—The story, which is being read with interest, is continued. There are charming letters from the Old World; some timely hints, by Prof. Tracy, upon Piano-forte Instruction, which will be appreciated by teachers; Editorials apposite to the season, together with other articles of merit; and an abundance of "notes," full of spice and importance. The number contains a charming likeness of Zelda Seguin, the well-known opera singer.—The music comprises a new and exquisite Memorial Hymn, entitled "Not Forgotten,"—besides other choice and fresh selections. Sold everywhere at 10 cts. singly, or 1.00 a year.

President Grant has expressed his ideas on the situation. He thinks the democratic party holds the key.—should it endorse the nominations made at Cincinnati, he thinks a new phase would be put upon the question, and the contest would be at least close. But he does not anticipate any such result. The wish being doubtless father to be thought, he expressed great confidence that a straight democratic ticket would be nominated, and his erring sheep in that event, return to the republican fold.—The World

There is some little complaint relative to the fly doing injury to the wheat crop

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, wool en goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST,

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and Day Coaches especially for movers, equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. Parties wishing the prescription will please address Rev. EDWARD WILSON, 194 South Third-st Williamsburg, N. Y.

Gorver & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of

PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND

PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
ar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S

CELEBRATED

Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

DAVID E. FOUTZ, Proprietor,

BALTIMORE, Md.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West, 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

SHE NEVER CARED A SNAP.

Oh, surely you have met her
At the park or on the street—
She wears her hair in jaunty curls
And dresses [illegible] sweet.

Her Grecian bend's a bouquet,
And her hat's the merest scrap
Of silk, and straw and ribbons—but
She doesn't "care a snap."

She sports a dolly varden
Of yellow, red and green,
And skips along in bronzed bootees
The neatest ever seen.

When she thrids the crowded pavement
You can hear her flounces flap,
As she boldly swings her parachute—
But she doesn't "care a snap."

The boys call her a "stunner"
And many a love-lorn chap
Tips his beaver as she passes—but
She doesn't "care a snap."

And her epitaph will be,
When death's cold hand shall rap
Upon her vanished chamber door;
"She never cared a snap."

Keeping a Post Office.

From the earliest period of recollection, I've had a desire to keep a post office, or have the P. O. keep me. I did'nt care a continental which. For years I have tolled for the 'posish' of P. M., and last week I succeeded. But now I write after name ex-P. M.

I'll tell you how it came about. The postmaster had resigned, and, with the aid of a graveyard recommendation. I succeeded him. It's nobody's business if I did rob the tombstones for names for my petition; and I can't see why the relatives of the defunct chaps won't quit throwing it up to a fellow.

Well, I wrote P. M. after my name. Mrs. Limpuck embraced me with the tenderness of a sea-bear when I rushed into the room waving my petition over my head and my appointment brought sundry other hugs. I was a happy man.

Mrs. D. and I sat up till midnight writing my name with P. M. after it. Oh, it looked grandly. I would'nt have swapped it for president, LL. D., or A. B. The next day I entered upon the discharge of my duty, and yesterday Uncle Samuel discharged me.

Immediately upon his successor (which was me) being qualified, the ex P. M. left and I was alone. The mail came, and I distributed it thus wise. My motto has always been, 'First come first served,' and I acted upon it to the best of my knoledge I gave a letter to each caller as long as they lasted

Wife said the thing would act like a charm. Under the old regime some people never got a letter, while now the first person in the office, after the distribution of the mail, would get the biggest, fattest letter that came.

The idea was original, and I prided myself on its invention. The Lipmuck brain was ever fertile.

The morning following 'mail day,' I left my house for the post office—the attachment of long cherished ambition.

As I turned a corner I discovered two well known citizens about to test the virtue of clenched hands.

I never wrote a letter to your wife, vociferated one.

You lie! yelled the other · your letter yesterday was handed to me. My wife is in Birminham, and wrote a sweet letter to you. Lipmuck's noble motto of 'First come first served, placed it in my hands—a moment later at it they went;

I hurried on.

I had just entered the P. O., when a woman rushed into the building.

You villain! she yelled, knocking my hat to the floor, and burying her eagle talons in my hair. You gave my letter to Mag Fastongue, the biggest old slanderer in town. And she's telling everywhere that I've been writing to a married man.

Well, I can't now boast of as much hair as I had a week ago.

Scarcely had my persecutor left when a crowd rushed into the office. The Methodist preacher headed it. I think he swore as he crossed the threshold.

Villian! he yelled, you gave Bird Lyre one of my letters, and he's blowing everywhere that I've got a wife in N. Y. and another in Maine.

Kill him! kill him! yelled those behind him.

I saw a dozen fists and clubs nearing me and retreated.

Hang the scoundrel! cried the woman and I feared the command would be executed.

I went through the window, and now I am in another town.

I'm an ex-P. M. now, and a chap whose motto ain't 'First come first served, stands at the goal of my late ambition.

My brief P. M. ship, has not been unproductive of results. That M. E. preacher has left his charge, and a New York woman is hunting him. Twenty six divorces stare our next court in the face, and through my brief official career, nine men walk on crutches, and four women have spoiled faces.

And I? Why, my cranium is hairless, and I dare not go back to Skulltown on pain of death.

My ambition is satiated now, and I have discharged that motto: First come first served. I don't work in a post office any more.

I wouldn't be a P. M. again for all the benzine in the world.

Back Doors.

A man staggered into a sanctum, lately, who bore the appearance of having been badly used. His hat was gone, his clothes soiled, and his face dirty and disfigured with wounds. Dropping promiscuously into a chair, he hoarsely murmured:

Back doors!

What is the matter with you, old fellow? we inquired.

Back doors, I tell ye (hic, th's wha's er ma'er.)

Explain yourself.

Read Mayor's or'er closing fron' s'loons Sund'y didn't ye?

Yes.

So'm I! Took gran'tour 'vestigation yes'day see if lam's 'beyed.

Well what was the result?

T'is is er' sult. Ha! ha! (hic) he! drunke'rn boiled owl.

Yes, anybody can see that; but did you find the front doors closed;

O yes, the fron' doors were closed; but lordly! how many back doors I found open. Did'nt know there was s'many back doors in the city. They mus' have beat away and got some back doors some where. S'loons closed in front, but they were's open be (hic) hind as a fanning mill. I tried 'em all. Some had one back door, others had tow'r three ex'ra does cut in 'specially, and one s'loon up town had (hic) 'hole back end taken out to 'commodate the crowd. I ought to be on the Board of Health, he continued after a pause, know more 'bout condition of 'er alleys and back yards than any man in the city. There's one thing 'bout it, if this thing of closing front doors Sunday keeps on, the'll have to widen 'er alleys. Alleys wasn't half big enough yes'day to com'date the crowd.

Was the rush for drinks as bad as that, old boy?

Was! s'loon full all 'er time, and alley full of thursty men waitin' their time to get in. Had to take turns, same's barber shop Sun'y mornin'.

Didn't any saloons have their front doors open?

A few; but they did'nt have any customers to mention. Fact is, folks rather like sneakin' through alleys and into back doors for a drink. Ain't been drunk 'fore in dog's age myself. I can walk boldly by a s'loon with 'er front door wide open, but shut it and hint about a back entrance, and I'll find it, sure. It's human natur, sure' ye live.

The new regulations appear to have affected you rather disastrously.

You're mighty right. I am suffering from too many back doors. The absence of front blinds has 'fected my (hic) con'tution. 'Sider myself a martyr to er May'r's d——old procernation 'bolishin front doors, and I want 'monstrate against it through er press. 'Nuther Sund'y with them cussed back doors an' you your uncle's gone. Alleys is too many for me, Back doors is my ruin! And with this he departed.

A California paper contains the following:

We are informed by an old resident of Alpine county that there have been only twenty deaths there since its first settlement by the white inhabitants—some nine years ago—and yet in 1864, one year after it was settled, it gave 1,600 votes. The deaths were as follows: Murdered, four fell from a tree, one; by avalanche, three; in a mine, one; by a cave, one, consumption, three; infants, two; suffocation in mine and perished in snow, three; total twenty. There has been no physician in the county for five years—no medicine wanted.

At a religious meeting, a lady persevered in standing on a bench, and thus intercepting the view of others, though she was repeatedly requested to sit down. A reverend old gentleman at last arose and said gravely, 'I think if the lady knew that she had a large hole in each of her stockings, she would not exhibit them in this way.

This had the desired effect—she immediately sank down on her seat. A young minister standing by blushed to the temples and said, 'Oh, brother, how could you say what was not the fact?

Not the fact? replied the old gentleman; if she had not a large hole in each of her stockings, I would like to know how she gets them on.

Jim Guppins was a very clever, good dispositioned sort of fellow, and was the but of all the girls in his neighborhood. The most brilliant thing he ever said was when some of the fair teasers questioned him one day in regard to his powers of memory.

How far back in your lifetime can you remember, Jim?

I can remember the day I was born, was his reply.

The day you was born? exclaimed one of the girls.

Why, Jim, what can you remember of that day?

I remember very distinctly, that on the day I was born I sat on a little stool in a corner of the fireplace and cried for fear I was a girl.

TELL YOUR WIFE.

'Tell my wife!' said Aaron Little, speaking aloud, yet to himself, in a half amused, half troubled way. 'Tell my wife, indeed! Much good that will do! What does she know about business and money matters, and the tricks of trade? No, no; there's no hope there.'

And Aaron Little sat musing with a perplexed countenance. He held a newspaper in his hand, and his eyes had just been lingering over a paragraph in which the writer suggested to business men when in trouble, the propriety of consulting their wives:

'Talk to them freely about your affairs,' it said 'Let them understand exactly your condition. Tell them of your difficulties, of your embarassments and your plans of extricating yourself from the entanglements in which you are involved. My word for it, you will get help in nine cases out of ten. Women have quick perceptions. They reach conclusions by a nearer way than reasoning, and get at the solution of a difficult question long before your slow moving thoughts bring you near enough for accurate observation. Tell your wives, then, men in trouble, all about your affairs! Keep nothing back. The better they understand the matter, the clearer will be their perceptions.'

'All a very fine theory,' said Aaron Little, tossing the newspaper from him and leaning back in his chair. 'But it won't do in my case. Tell Betsy! Yes, I'd like to see myself doing it! A man must be hard pushed indeed, when he goes home to consult his wife on business affairs.'

And so Aaron Little dismissed the subject. He was in considerable doubt and perplexity of mind. Things had not gone well with him for a year past. Dull business and bad debts had left his affairs in rather an uncompromising condition. He could not see his way clear for the future. Taking trade as it had been for the past six months, he could not imagine how, with the resources at his command, his maturing payments were to be made.

'Must get more capital,' he said to himself. 'That is plain. And with more capital must come in a partner. I don't like partnerships. It is difficult for two men to work together harmoniously. Then you may get entangled with a rogue. It's a risky business—But I see no other way out of this trouble. My own capital is too light for the business I am doing, and as a measure of safety more must be bro't in. Lawrence is anxious to join me, and he says he can command ten thousand pounds. I don't like him in all respects, he's a little too fond of pleasure. But I want his money more than his aid in the businesss. He might remain a silent partner if he choose. I'll call and see him this very night, and have a talk on the subject. If he can bring in ten thousand pounds I think that will settle the matter.'

With this conclusion in his mind, Aaron Little returned home, after closing his warehouse for the day. Tea being over, he made preparations for going out with the intention of calling on Mr. Lawrence. As he reached his hand for his great coat, a voice seemed to say to him:

'Tell your wife. Talk to her about it.'

But he rejected the thought instantly, and commenced drawing on his coat.

'Where are you going Aaron?' asked Mrs. Little, coming from the dining room.

'Out for a little while, he replied. 'I'll be back in half an hour or so.'

'Out where?'

'Tell her, Aaron. Tell her about it,' said the voice, speaking in his mind.

'Nonsense! She don't understand anything about business. She can't help me,' he answered softly.

'Tell your wife!' The words were in his mind, and would keep repeating themselves.

'Can't you say where you are going, Aaron? Why do you make a mystery of it?'

'Oh, it's only a matter of business. I'm going to see Mr Lawrence.'

'Edward Lawrence.'

'Yes.'

'Tell your wife.' The words seemed almost as if uttered aloud in his ears.

'What are you going to see him about?'

'Tell her.'

Mr. Little stood irresolute. What good would telling her do.

'What's the matter Aaron? You've been dull for some time past. Nothing going wrong with you I hope.—And his wife laid her hand upon his arm, and leaned toward him in a kind way.

'Nothing was wrong,' he answered in an evasive manner. 'But business has been dull this season.'

'Has it? I'm sorry. Why didn't you tell?'

'It might have done a great deal of good. When a man's business is dull his wife should look to the household expenses; but if she knows nothing about it, she may go on in a way that is really extravagant under the circumstances. I think that men ought always to tell their wives when anything is wrong.'

'You do?'

'Certainly I do. What better reason can you want than the one I have given? If she knows that the income is reduced, as a prudent wife, she will endeavor to reduce the expenses.—Hadn't you better take off your coat and sit down and talk with me a little before you go to see Mr. Lawrence?'

Mr. Little permitted his wife to draw off his overcoat, which she took into the passage and replaced on the hat rack. Then turning into the parlor she said:

'Now Aaron, talk to me as freely as you choose. Don't keep anything back. Whatever the trouble is, let me know it to the full extent.'

'Oh, there's no great trouble yet; I am only afraid of trouble. I see it coming, and wish to keep out of it's way, Betsy.'

'That's wise and prudent,' said his wife. 'Now tell me why you are going to see Mr. Lawrence.'

Mr. Little let his eyes fall on the floor, and sat for some moments in silence.

Then looking up, he said:

'The truth is Betsy, I must have more capital in my business. There will be no getting along without it.—Now Mr. Lawrence can command, or at least says he can command, ten thousand pounds. I think he would like to join me. He has said as much two or three times.'

'Are you going to see him on that business.'

'I was.'

'Don't do it,' said Mrs. Little emphatically.

'Why not?' asked Aaron.

'Because he isn't the man for you—not if he had twenty thousand pounds.'

'Because is no reason,' replied Aaron Little.

'The extravagance of his wife is,' was answered firmly.

'What do you know about her?'

'Only what I have seen. I have called upon her two or three times and have noticed the style in which her house is furnished. And as for dress, it would take the interest of a little fortune to pay her milliner's and mantaumaker's bill. No, no, Aaron, Mr Lawrence isn't your man, depend on it.' He'd use up ten thousand in less than two years.

'Well, Betsey, that's pretty clear talk,' said Mr. Little, with a long breath. 'I'm rather afraid, after what you say, that Mr. Lawrence is not my man. But what am I to do?' and his voice fell into a troubled tone. 'I must have more capital, or—.' Mr. Little paused.

'Or what?' His wife looked at him steadily, and without any signs of weak anxiety.

'Or I may become bankrupt.'

'I'm sorry to hear you say that, Aaron,' and Mrs. Little's voice trembled perceptibly 'But I'm glad you've told me. The new parlor carpet, of course I shall not order.'

'Oh, as to that, the amount it will cost can make no great difference,' said Mr. Little. 'The parlor does look shabby; and I know you've set your heart on a new carpet.'

'Indeed, and it will make a difference then,' replied the little woman in her decided way. 'The last feather breaks the camel's back. Aaron Little shall never fail because of his wife's extravagance. I would not have a new carpet now if it were offered to me at half price.

'You are a brave true woman, Betsy,' said Aaron, kissing his wife, in a glow of a new born feeling of admiration.

'I hope that I shall be a true brave wife,' returned Mrs Little, 'willing always to help my husband, either in saving or earning as the case may be. But let us talk more about your affairs; let me see the trouble nearer. Must you have ten thousand pounds right away?'

'Oh, no; it is not so bad as that, I was only looking ahead, and seeking to provide the means for approaching payments. I don't like partnerships; they are always accompanied with annoyances or danger. It was the money I was after, not the man.'

'The money wou'd come dearly at the price of the man, if you took Mr. Lawrence for a partner. At least that is my opinion. But I am glad to hear you say Aaron, that you are in no immediate danger. May not the storm be weathered by reefing as sailors say.'

'By reducing expenses?'

'Yes.'

Mr. Little shook his head.

'Don't say no too quickly,' replied the wife. 'Let us go over the whole matter at home and at the store. Suppose one or two thousand pounds were saved in the year, what difference would it make?'

'Oh if that were possible, which it is not, it would make a vast difference in the long run, but would hardly meet the difficulties that are approaching.'

'Suppose you had five hundred pounds within the next two months beyond what your business will give you.'

'That sum would make me safe for the next two months, but where is the five hundred pounds to come from, Betsy?'

'Desperate remedies,' replied the brave little woman in a resolute way 'I'm not afraid of the red flag.'

'What do you mean by the red flag.'

'Let us sell off the furniture at auction, and put the money in your business. It won't bring less than five hundred pounds and it may bring more. My piano alone is worth, nearly three hundred. We can board for a year or two, and when we get all right again, return to housekeeping.'

'We won't try that yet, Betsy,' said Mr. Little.

'But something must be done. The disease is threatening, and my first prescription will arrest its violence. I have something more to propose. It comes into my mind this instant, after breaking up we will go to mother's.—You know she never wanted us to leave there. It won't cost us much over half what it does now, taking rent into account. We will pay sister Annie something to take care of little Eddie and Lizzie through the day, and I will go into your warehouse as chief clerk.'

'Betsy! you are crazy.'

'Not a bit of it Aaron, but a sensible woman, as you will find before you are a year older, if you will let me have my way. I don't like that Hobson, and never did, as you know. I don't believe he is a fair man. Let me take his place and you will make a clear three hundred pounds a year, and maybe, as much more!'

'I can't think of it, Betsy. Let us wait awhile.'

'You must think of it, and we won't wait awhile,' replied the resolute wife. 'What is right to be done is best done quickly. Is there not safety in my plan?'

'Yes, I think there is, but——'

'Then let us adopt it at once, and throw all buts overboard, or,' she looked at him a little mischievously, 'perhaps you would rather have some talk with Mr. Lawrence first?'

'Hang Mr. Lawrence!' ejaculated Aaron Little.

'Very well, there being no help in Mr. Lawrence, we will go to work to help ourselves. Self help, I've heard it said, is always the best, and most to be depended on. We may know ourselves: and that is a great deal more than we can say about other people.—When shall we have the sale?'

'Not so fast Betsy, not so fast, I haven't agreed to the sale yet. That would be to make a certain loss. Furniture sold at auction never realizes above half its cost.'

'It would be a certain gain, Aaron, if it saved you from bankruptcy, with which, I understand you are threatened.'

'I think, said Aaron we may get on without that. I like the idea of your coming into my warehouse and taking Hobson's place. All the money from retail sales passes through his hands, and he has it in his power, if not honest, to rob me seriously. I've not felt altogether easy in regard to him of late. Why, I can hardly tell. I've seen nothing wrong. But if you take his place three hundred pounds will be saved certainly.'

'But if I have my house to keep,' Mrs. Little answered to this, 'how can I help you at the warehouse? The first thing in order is to get the house off my hands.'

Don't you think that Annie could be induced to come and live with us for a few months until we try this experiment?

'But the money this furniture would bring! That's what I am looking after. You want money now.'

'Very true.'

'Then let us hang out the red flag. Half-way measures may only ruin everything. I know that mother will not let Annie leave home, so it is no use to think of it. The red flag!—Depend upon it, that's the right thing to be done. Five or six hundred pounds in hand will make you feel like another person—give you courage, confidence and energy.'

'You may be right, Betsy, but I can't bear the thought of running out that red flag, of which you talk so lightly.'

'Shall I say coward? Are you afraid to do what common prudence tells you is right.'

'I was afraid, Betsy; but I am no longer faint-hearted. With such a brave little wife as you to stand by my side I need not fear the whole world.'

In a week from that day the red flag was hung out. When the auctioneer made up his accounts, he had in his hands a little over eight hundred pounds, for which a check was filled out to the order of Aaron Little. It came into his hands just at the right moment, and made him feel, to use his own word, 'as easy as an old shoe.'—One week later Mrs. Betsey Little took the place of Mr. Hobson, as chief manager and cash receiver in her husband's warehouse. There were some few signs of rebellion among the clerks and shop girls at the beginning; but Mrs. Betsy had a quick, steady eye, and a self-reliant manner, that caused her presence to be felt, and soon made everything subservient to her will. It was a remarkable fact that the close of the week of her administration of affairs the cash receipts were over thirty pounds in excess of the receipts of any week within the previous three months.

'Have we done more business than usual this week? she asked of one clerk and then another; and the uniform answer was 'No.'

'Then said the lady to herself, there has been foul play here. No wonder my husband was in trouble.

At the end of the next week the sales came to the same average, and at the end of the third week were forty pounds better than before Mrs. Little undertook to arrange the retail department. Whether there had been foul play or not. Aaron Little could never fully determine; but he was in no doubt as to one thing, and that was the easy condition of the money market after the lapse of half a year.

For four or five months previous to Mrs. Little's administration of affairs he was on the street nearly half of his time during business hours engaged in the work of money raising; now his regular receipts had got in advance of his payments, so that his balance on the morning of each day was usually in excess of the notes to be lifted. Of course he could give more attention to business, and of course business increased and grew more profitable under the improved system. By the end of the year, to use his own words, he was 'all right.'

Not so a neighbor of his, who, to get more capital, had taken Mr. Lawrence as a partner. Instead of putting in ten thousand pounds, that 'capitalist' was only able to put down three thousand and before the end of the year he had drawn out six or seven thousand, and had given notes of the firm for as much more in payment of old obligations. A failure of the house followed as an inevitable result.

When the fact of the failure, and the cause which led to it, became known to Mr. Little he remarked with a shrug:

'I am sorry for B——; but he should have told his wife.'

'Of what?' asked the person to whom he addressed the remark.

'Of his want of more capital and intention to make a partner of Mr. Lawrence.

'What good would that have done?'

'It might have saved him from ruin as it did me.'

'You are mysterious, Little.'

'Am I? Well, in plain words, a year ago I was hard up for money in my business, and thought of taking in Lawrence. I told my wife about it—She said, Don't do it. And I did'nt; for her 'Don't do it' was followed by suggestions as to his wife's extravagance that opened my eyes a little I told her at the same time of my embarrassments, and she set her bright little head to work, and showed me the way to work out of them Before this I had a poor opinion of woman's wit in matters of business; but now I say to every man in trouble—Tell your wife!'

The Pismire.

Josh Billings say: The pismire is about nineteen sizes bigger than an ant, actual meazurement, and is a kind of bizzy loafer among bugs.

They are like some men, always very bizzy about something, but what it is the Lord only knoze.

I never see a pismire yet that wasn't on the travel, but I hav watched them all along and never see them git tew the place they started for.

Just before a hard shower they are in the biggest hurry; they seem tew postpone everything for that occasion.

There is a difference between hurry and dispatch, but pismires don't seem to understand the difference.

If pismires would go slower I should like them better, for I don't know of enenthing more unpleasant than an active loafer.

A pismire is like a boy's windmill on the gable end of a smoke house, in a gale, the faster it goze around the less common sense there seems tew be in it.

If pismires ain't got a destiny ov some kind tew fill they will wear out more sho leather than there is any religion in it.

A Death bed Wish.

The story is true. Old Mr. Thompson, the doctor said, had but two hours to live. We stood by his bed side, and held his hand; and as the shadows gathered over his pallid countenance, we leaned toward him and whispered to him:

'Thompson, have you any thing to say? Any last words you desire to utter? Any regrets to express before you leave the world?'

He turned his head slowly toward us and with a sigh, said:

I have but a single sorrow. There is but one recollection that brings a pang to my heart as I die. I departed with the reflection that I have neglected to improve but one great opportunity of my life.'

And what is it, Thompson? Tell us frankly, and perhaps we may be able to promise to amend in such a fashion that your last moments may be soothed and comfortable.

No! no! Max, he said, that cannot be. My only regret is—and here a look of unutterable disappointment came from his eyes—my only regret in departing is that I have never seen the Fall of Nia-gry-ra!

The best of it is that old Thompson recovered entirely a few weeks later, although he lived for fifteen years afterwards he never went near the Falls once.

Quitting Tobacco.

An experienced physician suggests the following:

It is impossible to quit the use of tobacco, after it has become a settled habit, without more or less bad feeling and prostration. The man who would free himself from the curse of tobacco using must make up his mind that he has a hard struggle to pass through, call all his will power to his aid, and resolve to quit at once and forever. This leaving off by degrees seldom succeeds. It is better to make the battle short, sharp and decisive. A thorough course of bathing, to eliminate the tobacco from the system, will make the struggle much less severe, and prove the greatest aid that can be given. The Turkish baths are the best, if they can be had. If not accessible, the wet sheet-pack or vapor bath, should be taken instead.—There will not be much appetite; and that may be drank as freely as desired. To allay the craving for tobacco, hold cold water or a piece of ice in the mouth.

AUBURN, IND., JUNE 6, 1872.

CONGRESSMAN-AT-LARGE.

By the late apportionment Indiana is entitled to two Congressmen-at-Large. It will be the duty of the Democratic State Convention, which meets next Wednesday, to select candidates for these positions, and it is hoped that the Northern part of the State will get a fair representation on the ticket. Heretofore the South has managed to monopolise the selection and unless the North move together in one solid phalanx, and press their claims the same will be done again.

In this connection, we are pleased to announce the name of Hon. ALLEN ZOLLARS, of Fort Wayne, for this position. It is unnecessary to enumerate the many excellent qualities which Mr Z., possesses as he is widely known over the State, by the part he took in the Legislature of 1868 and '70. He was the author of the bill providing for the taxation of State banks, the spirit of which was afterwards engrafted in the platform of 1870.

A gentleman of much prominence as an attorney, a firm and unflinching Democrat, and an excellent speaker, he seems to us peculiarly qualified to fill this position.

The Ninth District has been without Democratic representation in Congress for a number of years, and Allen Co., has rolled up Democratic majorities time and again without asking at the hands of the party a place upon the State Ticket.

We feel that this part of the State has a claim that should be recognized by the Convention, and we think it is not asking too much to accede to her wishes by nominating this gentleman. As to ability and personal popularity, a more judicious selection could not be made. He is a live man, one who will bend his energies to the work, and do good service for the great cause of Democracy.

* * *

For the first time in eleven years, both houses of Congress have now their complement of members, this result having been attained by the admission on yesterday, of Mr. Rogers, a representative of North Carolina, whose disabilities were removed by the recent amnesty bill. The consummation is a gratifying one, but it is one of the greatest outrages in the history of this or any other country, that it was not realized at least six years ago. What this delay has cost the nation and the cause of free constitutional government is beyond human calculation.

* * *

Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, in his speech opening the Democratic Convention of the State of New York on the 16th, spoke the following sensible words:

"I believe three millions of Democratic voters will go unitedly, go with an organization unbroken, go with their ranks united, and whatever they decide to do, they will give victory to whatever cause and to whatever candidates they declare themselves in favor of. [Applause.] I do not think that your great and noble traditions are to be surrendered or broken down; but I suppose that you will act as wise men, and practical men, and all avail yourselves of the best opportunity that exists to work out for your cause what is possible; and believing in God, and believing in the destiny of your country, you will go forward fearlessly to the achievement of the great objects to which you have been devoted from the very foundation of the Government. [Applause.

A Big Fight.

Forty thousand office holders fighting for their bread and butter are not going to give up their places without a contest. No; if every voter in the United States were to sign a petition asking them to give up their positions, they would not do it without a fight, and a big fight at that. The people want a change—they demand a change—and they will have a change of officials. Neither party usages nor party conventions will be allowed to longer stand in their way.—Three thousand Federal office holders located in Ohio will do their best to re-elect Grant, but their effort will avail them not. The tax-ridden people of Ohio will serve a notice on them next October that they (the people) have selected a new set of men to handle the public money.—Enquirer.

A "Greeley Triumph."

The Toledo Commercial says that "when Senator Ferry was re-elected by the Connecticut Legislature, Mr. Greeley's paper was jubilant over the event. Both parties have seen, said the Tribune, 'that the Liberal Republicans bear the banner of victory, and herein is found the forerunner of the great future!"

Again, referring to Ferry's election, it exclaimed, 'triumph is in the air,' and all on the ground that said election was expected to aid in making Horace Greeley President. How mistaken: A few days after his election Mr. Ferry, in a letter since published, said that to 'trust the great interests' of the nation to an administration made up and controlled by Mr. Greeley would be mere midsummer madness!" Again he says to his correspondent, 'You and I will continue on the old Republican track.' Verily, that Greeley 'triumph' was in the air."

William Cullen Bryant thus freely expresses his opinion of Ben Butler: "He is a man whose word is not believed nowhere where his name is known [illegible] believe and enjoy their hospitality.

Breaking the Shackles.

The Goshen Democrat says it is a well-known fact that for many years Kosciusko county has been ruled as with a rod of iron, by a certain ring of the Republican party in and about Warsaw. If a man ever attempted to dissent from any of their actions he was at once lashed back, or pursued by the leaders until he had to shut up, or leave town. But things have apparently changed in that county, and if we are to judge from the following circular, it begins to look as though there were some men there who have independence enough left to act and think for themselves.

We are glad to see this, as it is the dawn of a new era, when people will hereafter support men for office who are honest and capable, and have the interests of their neighbors at heart, as well as that of their own.

It is a notorious fact that the late convention in that county was a complete farce, and many honest Republicans withdrew from it and went home before the nominations were all made, as they began to see late in the evening, that it was dilly-dallying along on purpose to defeat the nomination of certain gentlemen who did not belong to the ring. Since that time the following circular has been issued by that large and respectable class of "independent Republicans," who have become disgusted with the way nominations have heretofore been managed in that county, and who intend hereafter to forego past party associations, and labor for the interests of all the citizens of the county:

TO INDEPENDENT REPUBLICANS.

"We, the undersigned Republicans of Kosciusko County, now fully recognizing the fact that the recent Republican Convention at Warsaw, was manipulated and controlled through a partisan spirit that is destructive to the best interests of the Republican Party, and feeling that it becomes us as members of said party, to condemn the action of those who controlled the Convention, for the accomplishment of their own selfish ends, and knowing that said Convention was so UNFAIRLY and IMPROPERLY controlled and managed as to be NO FAIR or JUST expression of the honest masses of the Republican Party, and believing that the duty to ourselves, to our party, our country, and to honesty. requires that we should not SANCTION such a wrong, we therefore call upon the untrammelled, honest, free Republican voters of Kosciusko County, to meet together in MASS CONVENTION, AT WARSAW, Saturday, May.........1872, at the Court House, to make such nominations, and take such action, as the welfare of our Party and People may require; and recognizing that every man in this County, without reference to past Party Associations have equal and common interests in honest, economical Local Administration, therefore we invite all citizens of the County to meet and co-operate with us.

MEETING OF THE LIBERAL STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Pursuant to previous notice, the State Executive Committee of the Liberal Republican party in Indiana, met at the Bates House, in Indianapolis on Tuesday, May. 21, 1872.

The Committee was organized by electing Hon. C. M. Allen of the first district, Chairman, and William E. McLean, of Terre Haute, Secretary.

There were present the following members of the Committee:

First District—C. M. Allen.
Third District—J. L. Wilson.
Fifth District—G. G. Blakye.
Sixth District—J. F. Pittman.
Seventh District—R. P. Davidson.
Eighth District—Thomas N. Stillwell.
Ninth District—Wm. B. Kline.
Eleventh District—W. W. Higgins.

Quite a number of Liberal Republicans from various portions of the State were present, and were present, and were invited by the Committee to partipate in its deliberations.

The following preamble and resolutions were submitted by Hon. T. N. Stillwell and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Liberal Republicans of Indiana, together with the Liberal Republicans of the United States, met in National Convention at Cincinnati, on May 1, and nominated a ticket for President and Vice President, and announced a platform of principles and,

Whereas, Said Convention acted in the earnest expectation that men of all parties opposed to the policy and aims of the present Administration, would unite with them for the common good: therefore,

Resolved, By the State Executive Committee now in session, representing the Liberal Republicans of Indiana, that they hereby announce and declare their willingness to co-operate with the members of any and all parties who are opposed to the present Administration, and who give their cordial support and adhesion to the Cincinnati platform and its nominees, and, to that end.

Resolved, That this Executive Committee do now appoint a committee of five of its members, including its Secretary, as a committee to issue an invitation to the State Democratic Central Committee for a joint meeting to confer upon such co-operation, and it such invitation is accepted that said committee shall meet with such Democratic Committee upon such day as may be agreed upon, prior to the assembling of the Democratic State Convention.

The Chair appointed the following gentlemen to constitute such committee:

Thomas N. Stillwell, G. G. Blakye, R. Davidson, W. B. Kline, W. W. Higgins and William E. McLean, Secretary.

Death of James Gordon Bennett.

The leading journalist of the age, and, measuring him by results, one of the remarkable men of the times, closed his earthly career on Saturday afternoon, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. Calmly and peaceably his soul passed away, without a struggle. Thirty-seven years ago he started the Herald, almost penniless, and step by step it progressed, until it became and has continued to be, perhaps we may say, the leading newspaper of the world. Mr. Bennett was the Herald, and the Herald was Bennett, and his only ambition and aim in life seemed to be to make his paper what it was, foremost of all in enterprise and ability could make it. And his success is a wonderful illustration of what genius combined with common sense, energy, will, executive ability and devotion to a single end can attain. The Herald has always been essentially a newspaper. Bennett was ever lavish in expenditure for news, always fertile in his resources for obtaining it, and the Herald rarely failed to be the first in news. Mr. Bennett had had but little respect to what is called consistency. His idea of journalism was that each paper spoke for itself, that the paper of to-day should not be governed or influenced by that which preceded or followed it, that each number was but the mirror of the events and of the opinions which it recorded, which might be changed by the new developments and circumstances of the succeeding day.—Sentinel.

Plain Facts.

The number of Republicans in the country is estimated in round numbers at 3,300,000, of Democrats 3,000,000. To beat Grant a candidate must be opposed to him who can poll the entire Democratic vote and a part of the Republican vote. A candidate who fails in both these particulars cannot beat Grant. Greeley fails in both. For example:

The white Republican vote. It has been demonstrated since the Cincinnati nominations were made that Mr. Greeley has been unable to draw any support from the Republican ranks.—Not one prominent Republican who did go into the Liberal movement before the meeting of the Cincinnati Convention has pronounced for Mr. Greeley since. Not one Republican newspaper which was not committed to the Liberal movement before the Convention has come out for Mr. Greeley since. As far as he is concerned, all Republicans who were not Liberals before the Convention must still remain inside the regular Republican organisation

2. The negro vote. All the advices from the South concur that Mr. Greeley's nomination has made no impression whatever upon the negroes They are blindly obedient to their leagues, which are controlled by Grant's office-holders. The recent negro conventions at New Orleans and Troy declared emphatically for Grant.

3. The Liberal Republican vote.—This is composed almost wholly of the free trade Republicans and the German Republicans. Both of these elements refuse to support Mr. Greeley, and are preparing to organize for the campaign against him.

4. The Democratic vote. An important proportion of the Democracy will not vote for Mr. Greeley under any circumstances. They may not compose a majority of the party yet; but if they compose but thirty per cent., or even twenty per cent., their resistance is fatal to Mr. Greeley, for the entire Democratic vote is essential to his success.

If, therefore, he can command no Republican support, and only a partial Democratic support, he cannot beat Grant.

Why, therefore, should he remain in the field? Why should he not withdraw, so that some candidate can be nominated who can combine the entire Democratic vote and the vote of Republicans dissatisfied with Grant? Finally, what useful purpose will be subserved if the Baltimore Convention indorses a man who is beaten from the start?—World.

Why it is Thankful.

The Grand Rapids Democrat says it thanks "the Connecticut Democrats for voting for Mr. Ferry and electing him, not because he is a Republican and will support Grant, not because it will smash the Radical party or ring in Connecticut or anywhere else, for it will do no such thing, but as furnishing proof that the Liberal movement is a sham and a humbug, got up in the interest of the Republican party, with no other object under heaven than to demoralize and destroy the Democratic party. Elect Greeley, and in less time than has intervened between the election of Mr. Ferry and his declaring that he shall remain in the old Republican party, he will slap the Democracy in the face and call them fools for being gulled by his promise.

* * *

The singular circumstance of the son of the President being sent to Europe at the Government expense, in charge of the General of the army, who appears for the first time in the role of dry nurse; and the daughter of the same high official going the same road in charge of the late Secretary of the Navy, is one of those shadows which, to use the favorite phrase of a highly esteemed friend, adumbrate coming events.

The Prince of Wales was dined and wined in the United States, as was also one of Russia's Imperial Grand Dukes; Grant naturally desires to familiarize his heir apparent and princess royal with the habits and manners of royalty, so that when his plans shall all have culminated and this Man on Horseback shall reign over a nation of serfs, his family will be prepared to meet all the social exigencies of the occasion.

Some mullet head will object that Fred. Grant pays his own way in Europe. He does so, after a fashion, using the money paid to him by the people as an officer of the army, the duties of which he is neglecting in violation of positive law.

But when did law stand in the way of Grant [illegible] as President of the United [illegible] ously injured.

The supplemental treaty fiasco was a clean and clear back down upon the part of Grant, whether from the growl of the British lion or the influence of Wall street and the bond-holders.—Jackson's old motto put in practice, would have saved us the disgrace brought upon us by the President.—Had he asked for nothing but what was right, this crawling out of a foolish demand would have been saved us.

Mr. Grant got an idea that it would be popular to bully Britain, but on the first shake of the lion's mane he turns tail and runs.

Oh! for the good old days of Andrew Jackson.

* * *

The Indianapolis Sentinel is losing much prestige in this part of the State in its foolish attempt to dictate to the Indiana Democracy the course the party should pursue, on the presidential question. As the former party organ of the Democracy of the State, it has forced an opinion from many who have heretofore passed over its many idyosincracies in silence. Its daily warfare upon tried and true leaders in the Democratic ranks of the party in State, is sorely vexatious to the democracy. It is misrepresenting sentiment now, as it will find in a few weeks.—Columbia City Post.

* * *

Baltimore, in years gone by, was a lucky place for democratic nominations. Andrew Jackson, in 1832 was, nominated in that city, and elected: Van Buren also, nominated at Baltimore in 39, Polk in '44, and Pierce in 52. The nominations in 1860, (of Douglas by the regular and Breckinridge by the seceder's convention) were not attended with the same luck! Lincon and Johnson were also nominated at Baltimore, in 1864.

* * *

There are now six Presidential tickets in the field, to wit. Davis and Parker, Labor Reform; Greeley and Brown, Liberal Republican; Woodhull and Douglass, Damphools; Adams and Howard, Anti-Secret Society; Grant and and Wilson, National Labor Union; Davis and Russell, Temperance. Two nominations are yet to to be made, at Philadelphia and Baltimore.

* * *

In 1869, Andrew Johnson being President, the expenses for Congress, the Executive, Judiciary, and the Territories, amounted to $11,371,979.

In 1871, Uiysses S. Grant being President, the expenses for the same things, amounted to $18.020,054.

How does this appear to the friends of the economical administration of public affairs?

Fashion Fatal to Polygamy.

The Senate elect from the yet unborn State of Deseret, in an argument delivered a few days since before the House Judiciary Committee, said that polygamy would cease to exist when Mormon wives come into competition, in the matter of dress, with the other women of the world, and their millinery bills begin to pour in upon their husbands. The Pacific Railroad, with the Gentile emigration encouraged by it, will soon make the distinction between the possession of one wife and that of two very serious, to say nothing of the indefinite number of wives popularly attributed to the leading saints of Utah

MANHOOD.
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of youth errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Honesty and Perseverence!

For this are we famous.

Good Goods and Low Prices!

For this do we excell.

The Ladies like the Pioneer Drug Store!

WHY?

Because we sell WALL PAPER cheap, and trim it without extra charge.

Because we keep the choicest Perfumery, Toilet Soap, Tooth and Hair Brushes in town, and sell them cheap. Because we have the finest lot of Writing Paper, Tinted and Initial Paper, Envelopes &c., &c., ever offered in Auburn.

All the children like us, because we have such a fine lot of SCHOOL and BLANK BOOKS and sell such a big slate for such little money.

We don't wish you sick, but if you are so unfortunate, remember the Pioneer Drug Store is the place to get pure fresh drugs and medicines.

THEY MUST GO!

No holding on, if giving goods to people at almost their own prices will do it. We are going out of the trade, and shall, therefore, sell our large and attractive stock of Men and Boy's Clothing, Hats and Caps, Trunks, Valises, Shirts, Men's Furnishing Goods, etc., at which means goods from 15 to 25 per cent. less than any other house in the State will sell them, for they must be sold, as we are determined to make a Clean Sweep.

ORIGINAL COST

The Auburn Courier

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Small pox played out.

The June bug cometh.

Potato bugs are plenty.

Tramp printers are plenty.

The wool market has opened.

More new buildings going up.

Road working is the order of the day now.

Ice cream in abundance at Smith & Hare's.

Are we going to have a dance on the 4th of July?

Some of our farmers are replanting their corn fields.

There is talk of celebrating the 4th of July at this place.

The Democratic State Convention meets next Wednesday.

There was a one-horse show exhibited at Corunna last Tuesday.

The ever present potato bug creates a demand for Paris green.

Cool soda water drawn from the Ice land by Davenport & Co.

For a good glass of soda water call on Davenport & Co. 25 tickets for one dollar

Sheep shearing is about over. We know a fellow that can "make the wool fly."

We know a good joke on a fellow, but we darsn't tell it. We're older than he is but he weighs the most.

Remember Davenport & Co. sell wall paper at Fort Wayne and Detroit prices, and trim it without extra charge.

We saw Dolly Varden hats "till you could'nt rest," last Sunday, and just think that they are the nicest hat out.

The days are now lengthing at the rate of one minute and a quarter per day. This will be the rate of increase till June 21.

Sheep shearing season is near at hand, and farmers carry smiling faces in expectation of receiving good prices for their wool.

We hope the poets throughout the county will commence to contribute to the Courier again, for the fact is waste paper is becoming scarce.

Mr. Little has lost his cow—she is one of those Dolly Varden cows and he suggests that the finder weather-board her before bringing 'him to her.'

Who was that fellow that took a lady out in a top buggy, "not many years ago," and rode all day with the top down? His lady had a "gingham umbrella," though.

We notice our friend, Mike Long, Jr., mooving into his new house on 4th street. Mike has been some time getting it to suit him but now he has a neat and pleasant home.

Any person wanting a boy 21 years old to shear sheep for them, can be accommodated by leaving word at this office. He says he can get away with anything of his age. Blatt!!

The flies are getting ready for biz. There will be just thirteen million more this summer than last. Bald-headed men can keep them off by annointing the apex of their craniums with molasses.

The new landlady at the Sedan Hotel "dishes up" a square meal on short notice. But if you could have seen Bill and Mack "dish it down" you would't of thought that they were young at the business.

Potato bugs frisky; buzz saws active; rain refreshing; suicides numerous; garden "sass" dawning; colic at work; politics lively, and May played out. Glad of it. Welcome June, that bringeth "perfect days."

A young gentleman of the nobby order created a sensation one evening last week, while reading to a circle of young ladies a poetical effusion. "To a beautiful Belle" pronouncing the last word in two syllables, thus: "To a beautiful Bel-ly."

The Indiana State Sabbath School Convention will meet at Logansport on the 11th of this month, and remain in session three days. The programme is full of interest, and those who attend will undoubtedly have a pleasant time. Arrangements are being made for half fare railroad tickets, and the citizens of Logansport extend a cordial invitation to Sunday Schools throughout the State to send delegates and enjoy their hospitality.

A farmer named Briston, who disappeared from his home, in this county, twenty-seven years ago, returned yesterday, having in the mean-time wandered all over the habitable globe as a tramp printer.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

Strayed.—A brindle cow, in a very thin condition. There is no other marks that she can be described by. She left the first of last week. Any person knowing of her whereabouts will accommodate the owner by leaving word at this office.

We know a young lady that took a pack of cards from a fellow's pocket, and he tried to smooth it over by telling her that they belonged to another party. Young man beware, the way of the transgressor is hard. O, think of the future and play no games of chance.

Messrs. L. T. and C. Mock, formerly of this city, have removed to Auburn, in this State, and are about establishing a factory for manufacturing chair wood work. We hope they will be successful in their enterprise.—Ft. Wayne Republican.

The first, and most perfect piece of acting ever given in Fort Wayne was that of Robt McWade, in the play of Rip Van Winkle. We like him better than Jefferson, and his version is much more attractive.

We know of a fellow that soaked his head for a half an hour, the other day.—There's something ails him, and a friend advised him to try the above remedy, as he is tender in years, and, of course, has poor ideas of such diseases. Soak again, and try it for hour this time.

We learn that J. F. Radcliff, formerly of the Air Line, has entered into partnership with R. H. Weaver, of Angola, for the publication of a Republican paper in that place. With their experience we have no doubt Steuben will now be furnished with a first-class paper.
